But Prince Charles, wakened by a loud bell in his nine-bed dormitory at 7:15 a. m., had the excitement of a pile of birthday cards and a special cake from the kitchens of Buckingham Palace to share with his friends.

The young prince also was reported to have received permission to buy an extra pound of candy at the school tuck shop.

Although it was his birthday, the hole in the throne had to make his own bed as usual.

Phenix City Reform Faction Voted Out of Power and Residents Begin to Worry

By DAVID SWIT

PHENIX CITY, Ala. (AP)—Is the reformed Sin City ogling its bawdy past?

That's the big question now in Phenix City.

Here stores and offices have replaced honkytonks where jukeboxes once blared and B-girls whooped.

Five years ago the word was "anything goes" for the hordes of soldiers who descended on the town for wide-open weekends of booze and betting.

Like the wildest mining camp of gold rush days, Phenix City had gambling strip - teasers, gaudy entertainment — name, it, and you could have it. Prostitutes operated from trucks directed to customers by two-way radio.

CLEANUP DRIVE

After the slaying of a crusading lawyer who had pledged to clean up vice, a reform wave swept through town. The national guard took over, on orders of the governor, and later a cleanup city administration was elected.

Since then hundreds of new homes and businesses have sprung up.

Liquor sales by the glass are prohibited; new laws are pending funds for civic projects.

But the reform faction recently was voted out of power, and the future of Phenix City has become a matter of speculation.

NO ORGANIZED VICE

Townspeople in general, from minister to ex-gambler, say the city will never again tolerate organized vice, and is cleaner than the average community of the same size. The city's population now is 27,000 — up 15 per cent since reform.

However, some citizens are worried over the election of Dr. W. B. (Billy) Mims as city commissioner over former mayor Leonard Coulter.

Coulter, a furniture dealer, blames his defeat partly on his anti-liquor stand.

Mims concedes he had unsolicited support from former vice lords. But he says, "They were voting more against the reform candidate than for me."

Mims, a 37-year-old obstetrician whose uncle resigned as mayor when the cleanup started five years ago, adds:

"People contact me with the past because of my uncle, but he's no closer to me than any other uncle. I hope I can prove we're going to stay clean."

The ruling city commission now consists of Mims, John W. Harrison, last of the reform faction commissioners, and Mayor Jim Pollan, a lawyer and reform candidate elected to the commission.

Today at Fort Benning, across the Chattahoochie River in Georgia, the provost marshal, Lt.-Col. H. J. Michau, says the base's 30,000 soldiers "consider Phenix City a dead town."

Ex-Hubby Tosses Right Cross and Brawl Is On

OKLAHOMA CITY, (A P)— The groom said "I do." The bride blushed. Then her ex-husband teased a roundhouse right and the wedding party was a free-for-all.

Scene of this social event was a downtown tavern here late Friday night. Overnight honeymoon accommodations for the bride, groom, ex-husband and 36 others were at the jail.

Detective Jack Jordan said all were arrested and jailed for drunk and disorderly conduct, and "the tavern was a mess."

He said all went well until the bride, 38, who owns the tavern, and the groom, 36, exchanged vows before a justice of the peace.

At that point, said Jordan, "the bride's ex — husband said he'd had all he could take. He tossed a roundhouse right that landed flush on the groom's chin. The others started trading punches with each other."

Jordan said a hillbilly band rented for the occasion stopped the music to join the brawl. They accompanied the party to jail.

That's what comes of getting married on Friday the 13th," sighed one jail - bound guest.

Colder Weather Is On Way Here, Warmer In West

Icy Fingers Begin Stretching Into Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brr! It's winter tonight in Ontario

A warning trend set in across the western prairies today with a record-setting cold snap hung on in Manitoba and stretched its icy fingers into Ontario.

Predicted low temperatures tonight in Southern Ontario centres dive into the teens and below. Some of them: Windsor 8 St. Thomas, London and Wingham 13; Toronto, Trenton and St. Catharines 12. In the North temperatures are predicted to plunge below zero tonight from 5 below at Sudbury and North Bay to as much as 20 below at White River

Alberta got some relief over-night after record lows were set Sunday. The overnight temperatures in Calgary was zero while the temperature rose to eight above in Edmonton.

Regina remained cold at 13 below with temperatures down to 20 below in Southern Saskatchewan. Winnipeg was nine below and The Pas 18 below.

FREEZE IN B.C.

An overnight low of 28 was recorded in Vancouver following a weekend freeze that may cause losses of $250,000 to vegetable growers in the Fraser Valley. There is still considerable acreage of unharvested cabbage in the fields.

It was 31 above in Victoria and around zero in most of the British Columbia interior.

EASING OF RAILWAY DELAYRIES

A continued moderating trend, although still below normal, was forecast for Alberta and Saskatchewan. Normal is about 30 in the daytime and 13 at night.

Records were broken Sunday as the mercury plummeted low since below zero at Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, were below in Edmonton and five below at Saskatoon. It went above zero Monday, however.

Manitoba did not share in the relief, such as it was. Winnipeg had a record two below Monday for its daytime maximum. About three inches of weekend snow caused drifting and hampered traffic.

INVADES ONTARIO

The Lakehead was braced for its expected to blow overnight as the big freeze headed eastward. Toronto, which had a mild, lively warm spell over the weekend, could expect nothing over the high 30s today.

Ottawa has freezing drizzle which was expected to change to light rain or snow today. Southern Quebec, affected Monday by the Nova Scotia distribution, was in the path of the advancing cold front.

Some Nova Scotia areas were lashed by 50-mile-an-hour winds Monday as the weather's two lashes of rain had fallen from Sunday to Monday morning.

In Digby and Annapolis counties in the valley streets were covered with water and basements flooded. The Dominion Atlantic Railway reported a number of track impassable because of washouts.

Many New Cars Are too Wide

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roberts said today he will warn automobile manufacturers they are making cars too wide for Ontario highways.

He said nine of the 1960 models put out by the major auto firms are more than the 80 inches in width prescribed in Ontario's highway traffic act. The widest is 81.5 inches.

Mr. Roberts did not specify what action might be taken.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: — Winter may still be a month away by calendar reckoning but the shocking rapidity with which mid-winter conditions descended on the Great Lakes Monday night leaves a considerable measure of doubt. Bitter cold winds with accidental flurries of snow will probably add to this doubt through Wednesday.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—A howling storm brought winter to the Sault, arts today, drifting salt roads, stalling cars and setting a low temperature record. Lake shipping moved again after being stalled overnight.

The U.S. weather bureau in the Michigan Sault recorded a temperature of four this morning, the coldest record for a day since Nov. 17. The previous was 10 set in 1914.

To the north, it was colder still with Hearst reporting 10 below and Chapleau, Moose and Hawk Junction 4 below.

The record low Sault readies was compounded by strong north west wigds. The weather bureau recorded gusts of 50 miles an hour Monday night and the blows were still strong today.

The storm forced Great Lakes shipping to halt, with 23 freighters sheltering overnight in the St. Mary's River. The vessels began moving again today although gale warnings are still posted for the area and for Lake Superior.

EVACUATION

Commander E. J. Bodenlos of the U.S. Coast Guard base said that the storm has been the most reduced visibility in the river in his memory during the evening.

The weather bureau reported that only six-tenths of an inch of snow fell in the Sault but the Blind River-Elliot Lake area got from one to five inches.

Over the whole district, the weather bureau said, there are some side roads were plugged today, particularly those to the north of the Sault. Even the Chapleau road and Highway 129 to Elliot Lake were snow-covered or snow-packed throughout most of the route.

Highway 17 east of the Sault was drifted in places and very icy. Traffic was moving slowly during the night but plows and sanding crews were again busy on Highway 17 north is centre bore to snow-covered.

Scores of distraught cars refused to start today and garages were busy busy answering service calls.

Canada Must Be Ready for Worst Says CD Director

Will Only Get Few Minutes of Warning

ARNPRIOR (CP)—The army's director of survival training on a civil defence conference Monday that although Russia is unlikely to start a general war, Canada must be prepared for the worst.

And, said Maj.-Gen. Arthur A. Wrinch, of The Swinging Union struck with intercontinental and submarine - launched missiles, North America would get only a few minutes warning.

Gen. Wrinch spoke at a national conference on civil defence held here and welfare planning at this town near Ottawa.

He warned that the Soviet Union has the world's largest submarine fleet and up to 1,000 long and medium - range jet bombers capable of carrying atomic weapons.

REMARKS ALL AUTHORITIES

J. F. Wallace, assistant to the director of the federal government's emergency measures organization, said a miniature of the central government is being set up in each of the provinces. This would assume the central government's duties in the event nuclear attack isolated the province from Ottawa.

Six regional officers of the emergency organization already have been named and the government nucleus and four others will be set up in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island—are to be appointed soon.

Gen. Wrinch told the 125 representatives from all over Canada that it is unlikely Russia would deliberately start a general war, because they are as well aware as we of the damage both sides would suffer.

PREPARE FOR WORST

"However, there is always the possibility of miscalculation or error which the U.S.S.R. might do to us or we might do to them and we must be prepared for the worst to be able to appreciate the Soviet's capabilities."

If only 10 per cent of the lowest estimated number of Red bombers were able to penetrate continental defences and deliver their atomic missives the devastation would be great.

"If the Soviet Union attacked with bombers only, we could expect to receive a three hours' warning from the radar lines and we must be prepared for that. However, when ICBMs and submarine - launched missiles assisted, they could be able to hit any target in North America . . . and a warning would be only a matter of minutes."

23 MILLION TARGETS

Gen. Wrinch said 13 Canadian cities are considered major targets for Soviet attack. Some 23 million would be in the target area. Between 350,000 and 450,000 rescue personnel would be needed. Between 50 and three armed services could provide only 75,000 to 80,000, the rest a civilian need for civilian trainees.

Before leaving for Ottawa, Mr. Wrinch said he regrets that Canada has developed such a "incited distrust" of the German people. He said that Canadian papers had shown goodwill. He told a reporter of The Guardian, Manchester, that he had been unable to get a German paper frequently led to public and behind-the-scenes understanding.

The signs are that both West Germany and Canada have made a serious effort to reach a closer understanding.

Lieut.-Col. Angus Duffy Speaks on Defence at Rotary

A local military authority yesterday criticized the Federal government for cutting defence expenditures and city residents for apathy.

Lieut.-Col. Angus Duffy, com-manding officer of the Hasty Pees, guest speaker at the weekly Rotary Club meeting, referred indirectly to the abor-tive CF-100 project, claiming the government should not be cutting military expenditures but should maintain high expendi-tures.

The speaker said city resi-dents, along with many civil-ians in the country, took the attitude of . . . "letting 'George' do it."

On the credit side of the ledg-er, however, Lieut. Col. Duffy claimed the government was do-ing a great deal more than is generally believed in encourag-ing and training Civil Defence volunteers.

The local regiment, he point-ed out, would be used as a "mobile survival unit"—the term used by the Lieut.-Col. in preference to the word Civil Defence—to save as many people as possible.

"In the event of a nuclear attack," he said, "the Hasty Pees would not leave the city im-mediately. Later we would re-enter the area to search, rescue and evacuate.

NOT PRIME TARGET

"We in Belleville are not a prime target. But if a bomb fell on Toronto, everyone with-in a hundred miles of where it dropped would be killed; within a 25-mile radius there would be total destruction, and the radio-active fall-out would be blown over 300 miles by the wind.

"This means Belleville would be directly affected in such an attack."

The two main advantages of a military unit in these condi-tions, he said, are that the CNR communications and discipline. Even if the government broke down temporarily, the army would gradually restore govern-ment and order out of chaos.

Men and women could not es-cape responsibility by saying "it is better for the Army." The ma-jor consists of only 80,000 men —but would need 300,000 if a bomb fell.

"If you can find no other reason to help in City" he said, "do it 'for your family's sake, for your children who will be the ones to suffer under an at-tack."

Even if you do not join the militia or national survival unit, at least you should find out what to do if an attack occurs.

He asked Rotarians: would you know what to do? Do you know what food is nec-essary? Where to get water? Where to go?

There were no replies.

"History has been kind to Canada," he said.

"In the early part of our his-tory, the French did our fighting for us; later the English, then came the Second-Great War. We won only by a miracle.

"If we continue to trust war, we would have to sit tight for just one day. But in the next last out that 30 days—or per-haps even less—we will perish. Man is a wonderful animal."

"But rather than cut on de-fence expenditures and go into 'have-not' countries," said Lt.-Col. Duffy, "we should spend heavier tax on cigarets and liq-uor and give the additional revenue to the Armed Forces."

Arena Body Will Review Increase In Skating Price

This season's increase in the fee for children's public skating at the Belleville Memorial Ar-ena from 10 cents to 25 cents will be reviewed by the arena commission this week.

This was announced by com-mission chairman Ald. Claude D. Tice at Monday night's recre-ation committee meeting.

Mayor Hyde and commission members had been aware that the fee for skating was increased.

Mayor Hyde noted that at the first of the skating season he had been called by Arena Man-ager Walter Gerow who sug-gested the fee be increased to 25 cents. He said he had gone along with the suggestion, think-ing that other members of the commission were also to be polled.

Mayor Hyde admitted, how-ever, that he had later found out he had been the only commis-sion member present.

In making the explanation Mayor Hyde said he was doing so because he did not want Ald. Tice as arena commission chairman blamed for something he knew nothing about.

"But that doesn't answer the question why the price was in-creased 150 per cent," objected Ald. Leslie Digby.

It was then pointed out that the matter would be reviewed at this week's arena commission meeting.

Assessment Up Over a Million Here This Year

The city's assessment increas-ed by over a million dollars this year, preliminary figures revealed last night by city assess-ment commissioner Leighton Thompson. The assessment in-crease this year was $1,037,936, bringing a total of $27,370,702.

Mr. Thompson in his letter to Mayor Gerald Hyde said that the $27,732 figure was the one applicable for 1960 taxes.

He however pointed out that the figure was still subject to pos-sible change by the court of revision, which in a few in-stances was resulting in minor decreases in assessment.

Council Members Vote Down City Suit Against Selves

Members of Belleville city council went on part of insolu-ting an action on behalf of the city which might see themselves required to repay city funds.

This was indicated at Monday night's committee meeting when council banned down a motion to retain an independent lawyer to review Judge A. R. Willmott's report on the judicial inquiry into Belleville's finances with the view of getting an opinion whether there are persons or corporations against whom judgment could be obtained, thereby making pos-sible action of city funds and if such the case who such persons or corporations were.

The motion was presented to council by Mayor Gerald Hyde who said he did not necessarily agree that such action should be taken but that he was doing so because certain citizens felt coun-cil should take the action.

"Why look for trouble?" asked Alderman Frank Grandame.

"I am not looking for trouble except that a certain faction in the city feels council should take the action", returned the Mayor.

Ald. Dr. James Forrester ob-served that Municipal Affairs Minister Hon. W. K. Warrender had said he personally was go-ing to see the Bank of Montreal regarding the city's finances. "That is good enough for me", he said.

The suggestion that the city re-tain an independent lawyer for an opinion as to whether there were persons or corporations against whom judgment might be obtained, was made by the Man-ufacturers' Section of the Belle-ville Chamber of Commerce.

This group last summer had writs issued against the Corpora-tion, Mayor Gerald Hyde, ten city aldermen, the Bank of Mont-real, city auditor John D. Lewars and Drury S. Denyes, but the ac-tion was discontinued following the receipt of Judge A. R. Will-mott's report of the inquiry into Belleville's finances.

At the same time the manu-facturers' group urged that the city place the evidence from the inquiry before an independent lawyer for an opinion as to whe-ther there were persons or cor-porations against whom judgment might be secured because of mis-application of city funds.

2 New Public Schools Here Will Be Filled When Built

A rapidly expanding public school population will complete-ly fill the two new Belleville public schools which are plan-ned for completion by next Sep-tember, members of city council were told last night.

The public schools committee authorized the city solicitor to prepare the by-law authorizing the construction of the two new schools to cost an estimated $400,000.

One of the new schools to be built will be a public building would have seven rooms and would cost about $300,000, while the other, a five-roomed structure in Parkdale, would cost about $200,000.

A delegation of public school trustees headed by Chairman G. H. Trill and schools admin-istrator Miss Grace Bishop, ap-peared before the public school council to answer any questions that might be asked relative to the schools.

Mr. Bishop gave assurance that construction was confined to "no frills" but said that each structure was given an initial look so that schools would have to be enlarged within possibly ten years, if necessary.

Mr. Kells told council that the city public school enrolment today was 4313 as compared with 4237 at the beginning of the school term and 4018 city pupils at the close of the June school year.

It was estimated that all 12 rooms of the proposed new schools would be filled when the September school term opened in 1960.

School board members were in favor of holding their ele-ction in purchasing four acres in Parkdale adjacent to the Park-dale Community Centre property as a site for their new five-roomed school. The criticism was on the grounds that the city already was owner of the Park-dale Community Centre proper-ty. Cost of the four-acre school site was $10,000, although the deal has not yet been com-pleted legally.

Alderman J. Ellis, however, said that he felt sure that the board was reasonable and in view of the growth of the area an additional school site could be expected in a few years. Such being the case the entire property would be util-ized as a school site.

Mrs. Faulkner Wins Art Scholarship

Phillppa Faulkner, well-known local artist, presently studying at the Instituto Allende in San Mig-uel de Allende, Mexico, was re-cently awarded a full tuition scholarship for 1960. She will make the second art scholarship which Mrs. Faulkner has been awarded for study at the Insti-tuto Allende.

One of three Canadians to re-ceive scholarships in painting, Mrs. Faulkner's work has been well received in Mexico. A recent exhibit of her paintings, litho-graphs and sculpture at the Biblioteca Publica of San Miguel drew very favorable comment from Emilio Baz Viaud, art critic of the newspaper El Vocero Del Norte, who said:

"The artist's paintings interest-us and we admire the sure-ness with which she employs her materials achieving well ex-pressed textures and effects. . . . Our final opinion of Felippa Faulkner's painting is that she shows in general great talent and we hope that she will decide to follow the modernist school in which we find her to be more at ease and which can be ample proof of her artistic abilities".

A musical concert preceded the Canadian artist's exhibition. Mrs. Faulkner's last exhibition in Belleville was held at the Belle-Carthy Theatre about a year ago. Her new scholarship is the sec-ond she has won. She will commence on January 2nd, 1960. The schol-arships are awarded on the ba-sis of work submitted in the school's annual competition.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market was mixed to lower today in uninteresting but heavier morning trading.

The 11 a.m. volume of 361,000 shares was heavier than Monday's 464,000 shares at the same time.

Banks showed some strength with most issues up in a minor fractional range. Steels, however, lost ground, led by Dominion Steel and Foundries ½ point down to 48¼.

Senior uraniums were off in small to fractional losses. Algoma dipped 12 points to 14 and Gunnar slid ¼ to 10½. Lower-priced issues moved in a narrow range, generally less than 10 cents with losses and gains balanced.

Canadian gold blio bars were quoted at $33.26 to $33.35.

On Monday industrials suffered a sharp index loss to lead the stock market lower.

The index declined 4.85 points, closing at 311.35 as 15 of the 20 stocks used to compile the index lost ground.

Western oils were down .93 at 36.85, base metals .34 at 163.61 and golds .61 at 86.64.

The total volume of 1,958,000 shares was lighter than Friday's 2,025,000 but comparable with most sessions in the last few weeks.

Steels and refining oils were the leading losers among industrial groups. Steel Company of Canada was 2½ points lower at 82½, Aluminium lost 1 at 39 and Imperial Oil was off 1½ at 35. Loblaw Inc. gained six points to 120 on a light turnover. Work Bank added 1½ at 78.

Senior mines were solidly lower but most declines were fractional. Several lower - priced issues were off 15 or 20 cents but Preston East Dome led with a decline of 55.65. Western oils were quiet with most issues showing moderate losses.

Charge Under Fire Marshal's Act Laid Over

A charge of obstruction laid under the Fire Marshal's Act against Mrs. Wanda Lucas and her son, Gordon Lucas, of Hillcrest, has been further laid over to November 27th in city magistrate's court.

Some defence evidence in the case was heard by Magistrate T. W. Wills this morning before the case was laid over. Crown testimony had been heard on a previous date.

The charges were laid by Fire Chief Gerald Symes following objections said taken to instruction given with respect to fires at the Lucas auto wrecking yard. The matter was investigated by the fire chief following complaints from nearby residents.

A 46-year-old transient charged with breaking and entering Morrison's garage at Queen Street and Carnifton Road was remanded for another week.

Parking and traffic offences and several charges under the LCA were disposed on the morning court docket.

Time Europe's Contribution Raised - - Herter

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — State Secretary Christian Herter today reaffirmed full United States support of North Atlantic Alliance, but gently suggested it is time a prosperous western Europe contribute more to the free world's military and economic effort.

Mainly because of development of the European Coal and Steel Community, Western Europe now has obtained more wealth than it has ever known, Herter told NATO ministerial conference of NATO parliamentarians when he met with a number Canadian delegation of members of Parliament and senators.

"As the Western European countries gain in economic strength, they gain also in their capacity to exert leadership and to contribute to the overall effort of the free world—both economically and militarily."

MAY URGE RELEASE

Herter spoke against a back drop of recent press speculation that the United States contemplates over a drain in its huge gold reserves, may urge European NATO powers to bear increased share of European defence costs.

On this point, Herter said the U.S. will continue to carry a "fair share" of costs, adding "this is our policy—there is no change." But Herter did not state what he considered a "fair share."

Linked with speculation that Europe might be asked to bear more of the military costs were reports that a relatively new "buy American" policy might spread. Initially, it has been applied to U.S. Development Loan Fund loans to needy countries. There has been some question of whether this policy would be applied on the bigger loans-and-grants operation of the International Co-operation Administration.

Herter assured reporters at a press conference following Canada-U.S. joint defence talks a week ago that the "buy American" policy would not apply to the ICA. But Tuesday in a New York speech he disclosed that the new policy would actually apply to certain specific ICA projects which would be submitted to the Development Loan Fund.

"Projects so transferred would then be financed under the new procedures of the DLF," he said.

CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT

Today, facing NATO parliamentarians, he seemed to be anticipating possible criticism of U.S. lack of world leadership and lack of co-operation in the small powers of NATO. The habit of consultation and co-operation among the NATO powers, he argued, has increased to "an unparalleled extent."

As for world leadership, Europe's increasing prosperity held the promise of broadening and expanding "the world leadership which western Europe has traditionally exercised." The most critical need in this world leadership was for prosperous countries to share more fully in the responsibility of aiding needy countries.

Trenton's Capital Debt Up But No Deficit Since '47 on Town's Current Operations

TRENTON — A report, outlining the present financial status of the Trenton Atlantics as submitted to town council last night by finance chairman Vaughan Lange. The report shows, that, while there has been an increase in the capital debt of the town in the last year, the overall picture is one of sound financing. The gross capital debt of the town as of December 31, 1953, is estimated at $2,772,-630.03, while the gross capital debt for the year 1947 was $20,303.00.

Due to the fact that the public utilities debt and portions of the local improvement debt included in the estimate for this year, are recoverable, and 40 per cent of the approved public school capital expenditures, plus 74 per cent of the approved high school capital expenditures will be recovered from the provincial government, the taxpayers of Trenton will be required to repay approximately two million dollars of the present capital debt.

Considering the fact that included in the capital debt is an addition to the hospital, a new public school and almost half of the long considered and delayed sewage treatment project, the town of Trenton has achieved a great deal without causing undue hardship on the part of the taxpayers, it was stated.

The town owns the Bank of Montreal $20,000 for current account, but it was anticipated that this will be repaid after the fourth installment of taxes. Borrowings for capital expenditures have been temporarily repaid from the debenture issues.

NO DEFICIT SINCE 1947

O. W. Larry, clerk-treasurer of the Town of Trenton, stated that Trenton has not had a deficit in its current operations since 1947.

"It is true that the debenture debt of the town has risen, but every progressive municipality has been faced with the question of costs," Councillor Lange said. "Our assets in the form of assessments have risen at the same time and helped to alleviate the tax load on the ratepayer."

It was also stated in the report that during 1953 the assessment would be revised which will undoubtedly result in a small increase in the total assessment.

Councillor Lange was very cautious to look forward the point that the town is on a sound financials basis. He said that he had been implications made that Trenton's financial affairs were "in the same state as Belleville's." He suggested that the 1960 council resort to capital budgeting and that an estimate of commitments be made at the beginning of the year, with expenditures being arranged so as to comply.

OLD AGREEMENT

The council members were taken on a journey into Trenton's past by Mr. Jay Raymond, executive assistant to the vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, and by Mr. Gingras, assistant to Jarvis with the real estate division of the C.N.R.

These gentlemen had come from Toronto to consummate an agreement made by the Canadian Northern Railway with the Town of Trenton in the year 1911.

According to the agreement McGill Street, Shuter Street and Wilkins Street, between Division Street and Stewart Street, were to be conveyed to the railway and closed off to public access. Mr. Raymond said that the object of the request for conveyance was simply to "clear up old business," and that the company had no ulterior motive.

Also in the original agreement was a stipulation that the round house on the Carrying Place Road was to employ 100 men, in order that the roundhouse, for a twenty-year period following 1911. Councillor Lange asked if this stipulation had been carried out, or if the C.N.R. would still be liable for the return of $14,000 to the town, stipulated in the agreement. Mr. Gringras said that the town had sued the railway in 1933, in connection with this matter, and that settlement had been given favoring of the company.

CARS USE INCLINE

Mayor Ross Burtt informed the C.N.R. representatives that cars and trucks drove down over the steep incline at Wilkins Street, off Queen Street and onto Division Street, and asked if anything illegal if town police would be inclined to prosecute anyone who was "high" enough to attempt such a feat. Councillor Lange suggested that the matter of closing the streets be advertised and if there were no objections to it, he be empowered to close it and the streets closed.

Mr. Raymond and Mr. Gingras also brought up a matter going back to the year 1901, when, by an order in council, a certain section of the Wooler Road which at that time was C.N.R. property was ordered assumed and maintained by the town. The order has never been carried out and the railway has continued to pay taxes on the land, which runs between Stone Street and the town boundary. The company now wants to deed the land back to the town, but Mr. Gingras stated that they wanted some assurance that the town would accept the deed once it was drawn up.

Mr. Roderick Hannah, town solicitor, pointed out that the C.N.R. had owned the land for some time ago about the matter, asking a refund of taxes on the property.

Mr. Gingras assured the council that they intended now to be a part of the present proposal.

A resolution was passed by council to advertise the matter of the closing of the streets, and to assume control of the land on the Wooler road for the nominal sum of $1.00.

115 Volunteers Registered for Drive for Funds

TRENTON — A meeting of the executive of the newly-formed Trenton and District Association for Mental Health was held on Sunday afternoon.

Present at the meeting were: Nelson Saller, campaign manager for the door-to-door fund raising drive, which is now in progress in Trenton; Miss Enid Field, the national membership chairman; Mrs. E. Bonter, president of the Association; P/C Keith Roulston, vice-president; Sgt. C. Sloat, treasurer; Mrs. K. Roulston, corresponding secretary; Mrs. D. McLaughlin, recording secretary, and Mrs. M. Campbell, assistant teacher at the Trenton school.

Mr. Saller reported that the association had been successful in obtaining the services of over 115 volunteer canvassers for the town and the Middleton Park area.

The great need for a new bus to take the children to and from school was discussed.

Other points of interest in the new association discussed were the possibility of setting up a junior schoolroom, the appointment of a board of directors and an advisory committee, and the drawing up of a charter for the Trenton branch.

Three members of the executive resigned and their places were appointed by parents who were anxious to see more done for the school, as they had children who were unacceptable in the public schools. They were being kept at home and receiving no special instruction.

It was decided to call a general meeting early in December, following the campaign.

Group Captain Spruston Opens Curling Season

TRENTON — Group Captain T. A. Spruston, MBE, Commanding Officer of R Trenton, officially opened the RCAF Trenton curling season on Tuesday the 10th November, 1953, by throwing the first rock in the fourth annual club sponsored bonspiel.

President W C Songhurst welcomed members to the club and F/L "Doc" Birbeck gave the members a brief history of the club bonspiel. The next bonspiel the members are looking forward to is the annual Yuletide bonspiel which starts on the 24th of December and runs till the 31st of December.

The curling club was in excellent shape and the extensive alterations carried out between seasons were admired and appreciated by all members. The membership this year is the largest since the club was formed, consisting of 60 regular members' rinks, 16 ladies' rinks, 30 mixed rinks and 8 junior rinks. The ladies' club starts on the 12th of November with the junior and Mixed rinks starting on the 21st of November.

French Atomic Explosion to be Aerial One

PARIS (Reuters) — "France's first atomic explosion, of high commissioner, said here today that France's first atomic explosion would be an aerial one, not underground".

Perrin, who was speaking at the Anglo-American press lunch, declined to say when the test would take place.

Perrin did not specify whether the F-r-e-n-c-h bomb would be dropped from an airplane or exploded at the top of a tower but the latter method is considered more likely here.

Perrin, who was answering correspondents' questions after a brief luncheon speech, said:

"The French explosion will be aerial. Precautions have been taken on that there will be no violence."

He told one questioner it would be arbitrary to say that this test was needed for scientific purposes.

"The world has made enough atomic explosions to get all possible scientific knowledge from them. For underground explosions this is not the same, as it is possible one could get some world gas bomb."

Special Committee to Meet Teachers on Salary Issue

The November meeting of the Belleville Public School Board was interrupted briefly last night while two of its members, chairmen E. Bishop and G. J. Trill, and schools superintendent L. A. Reid waited on city council in connection with the board's request for approval for the construction of two new schools.

The new buildings will cost an estimated $600,000, one to be built in east Belleville, and the other in Parkdale.

Little more than routine business was transacted at the board meeting which members did not engage in a discussion on teachers' salaries.

The board agreed that teachers should meet in January with a special committee of the board to discuss any changes in the present salary agreement with teachers which extends to September in 1961.

Attendance efficiency for October at the eleven city public schools was given at 91.83 per cent, compared with 93 per cent for the same month last year. Teacher absences for the month totalled 34 days.

Superintendent Reid reported the supervisor of training at Belleville General Hospital had requested permission for student nurses to visit public school kindergarten to observe children at work. A first group had visited Queen Elizabeth School in September and a second group visited Queen Victoria School in October.

PERMISSION GRANTED

The board approved of a request from the Y's Men's Club to provide equipment for the East Belleville playground as a replacement for the sale of Christmas trees commencing about December 1st. The request was granted on the condition that the bell be driven on the playground and that the entire operation be confined to the area north of the playground building.

A comprehensive report on the condition of the building and the supply at the Hillcrest School was received from Dr. McCall Metcalfe, M.O.H. and Mr. R. F. Westlake, Sanitary Inspector. The Board was advised that certain adjustments in the water supply had been made subsequent to Dr. Metcalfe's report.

Accounts approved totalled $69,713.03, a payroll amount of $47,129.37 and a cash disbursement following a break in to the Board's Administration Building by vandals on October 20th.

Members present were: chairman E. B. Bishop, Mrs. D. Tugnett, and Messrs. Wm. Ironside, Gordon Thompson, Lyle Langabeer, Frank Clarke, George Potter, James Ritchie, Russell Scott, M.D., Wm. Townson, Gordon Trill and W. A. VanTassel.

The End and the Means

In New York's Greenwich Village, crackpots known as beatniks were recently arrested and charged with possessing narcotics. Police were able to move in because two detectives had spent a month "haunting the hangouts of the beat population," according to the New York Times. The detectives had grown goatees, learned to play the bongo drums and affected sideburns and brewing tea so artistically that they "had completely integrated into the Village's beat society."

One of them even enjoyed a vogue as a poet, having his works read "at the best known of the Village's poetry reading coffee shops."

In case you may think that it's a bit of a waste to have a full-fledged poet spending his time rounding up narcotic users, here is a sample of the detective's poems:

It was a cold and rainy winter day
I was sick with no conception
On just how to score a deck (Ed. note - - - narcotics deck) that I could
When I could not find my connection.
As I walked the streets of Harlem
There was no one on the scene
And, baby, I was strung out
With just a hole in my jeans."

Commissioner, transfer that man to traffic duty! The end does not justify the means.

Aswan Dam Agreement

One of the most ambitious, and potentially most beneficial, engineering projects ever conceived is now a step nearer being transformed from paper into concrete.

Moreover, this step is, in itself, something of a minor miracle.

The United Arab Republic and the Sudan have signed an agreement on the division of Nile waters. Into this agreement has gone a thirty-year quarrel, it is noteworthy by the very fact that it has been achieved. In this case, though, there is a second reason to applaud, for it brings nearer fruition a plan which may, one day, bring sufficiency, if not plenty, into the lives of millions of some of the world's poorest and most wretched inhabitants, the fellaheens of Egypt. This is the Aswan dam, which when it is completed should make it possible to so control the flow of the waters of the Nile that many thousands of fertile acres will be added to Egypt's now meagre agricultural land.

The Sudan had also planned a huge Aswan dam because it had been estimated that ten billion cubic meters of water would be lost annually by evaporation from the reservoir the dam would create. The natural flow of the Nile averages 84 billion cubic meters a year, with the Sudan using four billion cubic meters from this total and the remaining 32 billion flowing into the Mediterranean. Under the new agreement Egypt will receive 55 billion cubic meters, the Sudan 18½ billion. The Mediterranean will be the loser.

A Man's Castle Not Always His Home

We see that the Earl Marshal of England, the Duke of Norfolk, is vacating his ancestral home, Arundel Castle, because of the expense involved in living there. Thus another famous British landmark falls victim to the high cost of living.

Many have previously been of the opinion that the reason many of the British peerage were giving up their ancestral residences was because of high taxes, originally imposed by the Labor government. This thought was always made us a bit peeved because we have always felt that, where applicable, it was a good excuse to hide his home. Perhaps our thinking was a bit feudal in outlook.

Now it has been proven futile as well.

Looking over the reasons behind the Duke of Norfolk's decision we came across the fact that some 90 persons are employed to keep Arundel Castle in the fashion to which it is accustomed. With the average weekly wage in the United Kingdom running around a figure of £12 it was not difficult to figure that a weekly payroll of some $2,640 was required for this staff.

We did not have any further information as to operating and maintenance costs such as fuel, electricity and water. But then we were not too anxious to find out once the annual expenditure of $137,280 for household help had been determined.

It just seems that a man's home cannot be a castle these days — unless he is a ward of the state.

HIS LIFE WORK

By EDGAR A. GUEST

He made a special bid for fame,
He donned no greater dream than this:
The splendor of an honest name,
The joy within his baby's kiss.
No deed of glory marked his years,
But as he lived from day to day
He quickly dried his loved one's tears
And brushed a lot of care away.

But little for himself he
He chose to tread the quiet
Among the ranks of men he fought;
But home was where he looked for praise.
If they were proud of him, and smiled
To see him coming home at night,
To life his soul was reconciled
And he possessed supreme delight.

THE QUINTE ASSOCIATION

Article 99

(Contributed by members of the Hastings County Historical Society.)

For thirty-five miles along the banks of the Bay of Quinte, from Kingston to Adolphustown, it is to be found a shoreline which in its beauty, recreational possibilities and historic significance rivals that of the shore of the Bay of Quinte.

In 1885, the Niagara Parkway was inaugurated, and for 74 years Canadians and visitors to Canada have appreciated the many beauties, the historical and the excellent sporting facilities of the Canadian shore of the Niagara. This Parkway stands today in sharp contrast to the American side of the river.

Appreciating the scenic, recreational and historic assets of the Bay of Quinte region, a group of citizens this area some years ago formed the Quinte Historic and Parkway Association. Their object was to do what they could to preserve and enhance the lakeshore.

The first act of the Association was to solicit from professional, trade and other organizations, their views on the desirability of organizing a "Quinte Park way." The response was most encouraging; the public support was voiced for any practical plan of action that would ensure the preservation of the beauty of the Bay of Quinte shoreline. Following the urging of the Association, the jurisdiction of the Ontario-St. Lawrence Development Commission was extended westward from Fort Henry to Adolphustown.

The Quinte Association has acted also as a liaison between the Parkway Board and the provincial government regarding the White House which is located on Highway 33 about one mile west of Amherstview. This house, which dates from 1793, is one of the very few remaining pre-Confederation residences in Ontario and will be due to the generosity of the Province of Ontario as an historic site.

The White House, which was built by William Fairfield Sr., is considered to be one of the finest homes constructed by the United Empire Loyalists. It stands as an historic symbol of that gallant band, and it will undoubtedly be a cherished heritage of our nation, through the generosity of the Fairfield family.

In addition, the Quinte Association has been the representative of those who want Highway 2 to be developed as a scenic highway.

A meeting at the Collins Bay High School of about 400 persons last spring, and subsequently the councils of Kingston and Frontenac, approved the Quinte Association's suggestions that Highway 33 be reconstructed and designated as a scenic highway:

(1) Request Ontario Department of Highways and the Ontario - St. Lawrence Development Commission work in close co-operation during the reconstruction of the roads and;

(2) Commercial access roads to the north from industrial areas be established.

At the request of the Minister of Highways these recommendations were sent to him by the two Councils.

So far so good, but what of the future?

The Quinte Parkway should be developed along the lines of the Niagara Parkway.

All those associated with the Quinte shore — the Dept. of Highways, the Ontario-St. Lawrence Commission, the residents and industries along Highway 2, the many thousands who pass, drive, swim, and picnic along this road — cannot help but appreciate the possibilities inherent in the idea of a Quinte Parkway.

This shoreline will rival anything Niagara has to offer.

Let us hope that we can accept the challenge posed by Pierre Berton in "Canada, My Country":

"My worries are in this soil,
Whatever good or bad, what vain hope or mighty triumph lies in you.
That good or bad, that destiny is in me.
Where you have failed, the fault is on my head.
Where you are ignorant or blind or cruel, I made you so.
In all your folly and your strength I share.
And all your beauty is my heritage.

Explains Intent Of By-Law 7106

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

There appears to be some confusion as to the intent of by-law 7106 which extends the building by-law for the annexed area and I would appreciate space in your paper to clarify same. By-law 7106 states "That on all roads giving access to the city of Belleville from provincial highways that highway commercial usage be permitted as defined, in as RM 3 Zone.

1. A provincial highway terminates at the limits of the city and thus all roads giving in the annexed area giving access to the City of Belleville from provincial highways would be Dundas Street East, Dundas Street West, Cannifton Road and North Front Street.

2. Reference to the zoning map designated as Schedule A to the zoning by-law for the annexed area will show that the only areas zoned as RM 3 on these streets are Dundas Street only areas affected by this rezoning by-law are as follows:

(a) Dundas Street West from the north side from the old city limits to the north side of Township Lots 11 and 13; (b) Dundas Street East on both sides, between the present city limits and the O.S.D. property; (c) North Front Street — both sides from the old city limits to the present city limits.

3. The permissible uses in an RM 3 Zone and under highway commercial usage are set out in the copy of the zoning by-law attached hereto. This is available to all property owners in the Annexed Area.

Yours truly,
Chairman, Planning Committee.

City Dwellers Specialized To Death

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One of the penalties of urban living is that the average family in the city gets specialized to death.

When someone in my family came down with a strep throat last week, the doctor naturally sent to me that we don't know a general practitioner any more, but all the doctors we go to see are specialists.

And the specialists won't make a house call for something as lowly as a sore throat or a runny nose. A pediatrician will come if the children get ill — and if he isn't ill himself — but it's hard to find a city doctor who will troop out to treat an adult for anything short of an acute emergency.

Also nefity vanished from the urban scene is that fine upstanding rural institution of the "handy man." He is to be found in the office who, armed with little more than a tool of some sort and a greasy screwdriver, can fix electrical switches, repair the most leaky gutters, cracking plaster, and you name it.

You call a company if you want something repaired in those overburdened days, and you get a more often than not, slow, expensive, and sometimes downright fraudulent.

I also miss the old-time garage mechanic who could take the ragged overalls could handle all your auto troubles, from electricals in some small lowus; indeed, when my car needs repairs, I go to the local filling station and automotive specialists, too, who farm out your ailing car to the body doctor, the ignition surgeon, the radiator internist, and similar surgeons in immediate, unprogrammed white coats. When the car comes back, the bill resembles a month's stay at the Mayo Clinic.

The all-round man in any general area of competence is fast disappearing from modern society. Doubtless there is some gain in knowledge when the man who knows something about every aspect of a field often doesn't know too much about any one aspect.

Nevertheless, there is a real loss, too, breaking down the human body, or the house, or the auto, into separate and distinct departments leaves hardly anyone available to see the person as a whole and to make sensible recommendations or corrections.

This is why an ailing car keeps going back to the garage so many times, and why an ailing patient keeps shuttling from doctor to doctor. It's a pretty fine man in have around in an emergency, but who is there to call to advise the emergency from happenize?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

November 17th, 1939.

The deck windows of the Belleville ferry have been blacked out before we came aboard. At boat drill we were told . . . "no smoking on deck after dark . . . open decks not to be used at night. At Cherbourg the lounge doors had been painted with heavy brown blankets. In the shadowy corridors was a single light of subdued amber. Through the library door one could see rows of little cots each with a single suitcase. Rows of cots were in every large space save the dining room and smoke room. The ship was crowded, but there were no crowding.

When the loudspeaker began there was a sudden, swift movement through nobody's card or pressed. Midway of the first number, "Over the Waves" a plunge — though the sea was calm — and set off a full speed on all cots each within a single suitcase. Rows of cots were in every large space save the dining room and smoke room. The ship was crowded, but there were no crowding.

From the ship's publication "Ocean Times" we learned that considerable last minute negotiations were breaking down. At midday, all at once the wireless broke in without warning. The German offensive had begun. Poland was invaded. The war had come on board. There were 2,800 passengers on board as well as a thousand more in the ship's company, I shall never come to marvel at the serenity efficiency and kindness of officers, crew and stewards. Nothing went wrong. Their families were in Southampton, their future on the knees of the gods of war, but nothing but quiet efficiency shepherding us through a Mediterranean pleasure cruise.

Members of the John Street Church choir, under the direction of Mr. Ernest H. Rose, gave a delightful program in the community hall at Melrose on Friday night. It was a special treat to hear Mr. and Mrs. C. Jose of Kirkton, Ont., are spending a few days with friends in this city and at Foxboro.

The spacious mantle room in the Ritchie store was the scene of merriment and sociability last evening when the members of the staff of the big store were the guests of the management. The early part of the evening was devoted to an address by Mr. John Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank, which was much enjoyed. A vote of thanks to Mr. Elliott was moved by Mr. Frank Thompson and seconded by Mr. Harry Bryant. The quartet was composed of Messrs. Bryant, Pooig, Hickey and Bryant, and sang several enjoyable selections.

RAF Station CO Is Woman

Hamilton Spectator

The Air Ministry in London has just announced the appointment of Group Officer Janet Bannatyne-Allen to command the new RAF Station, Spitalgate, in England.

She is the second woman to be named to command an RAF station, but whereas her predecessor in this honor was appointed to command a WRAF unit, Bannatyne's personnel were exclusively men of the Women's Royal Air Force, Group Officer Bannatyne will command RAF as well as WRAF personnel.

It's a far cry from the days of Sylvia Pankhurst and the "suffragettes" when she was prominently in Britain for what they considered women's rights. She has long since been won today to medicine, is science, to business, and to command of armed services, the hand that rocks the cradle is full with increasing effect. As the Russians have pointed out, this is a tribute to their ability as productive capacity and leadership potential. It's all to the good.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

An old retired postman of my acquaintance, bitter carriers of the civil service, telephoned me to bring him up some of my fine guinea fowl feathers, as he was going to make a present which I got from Scotland, and with which are tied a particularly trout fly entitled in my honor the Sneaky. My old friend amuses himself in his winters by fly tying.

He was in bed when I arrived. It was that notably foul day last week, with sleet, wild wind and rain living horizontally. When I came into the sunroom where he lay, I immediately expressed my sympathy.

"Heck," said the old postman, "I never felt better. But I always do when I can breathe like this. I just love to lie here by the hour in can call to get me to the emergency bed with a book and look out at the storm."

looking out the window at the storm and the ships in the bay. He has the rain lashing the window glass. I leave that window slightly open so that wind will moan a bit whistle. And I just lie here and laugh, thinking of the days when I was five years I spent, six days a week, writing, summer, spring, fall, in every kind of storm and cold and heat, carrying a great bag of mail. I was marching my route.

"And thinking," I added, "of all us tens of thousands of people right now who are out in it."

"Oh," he said, "nothing is better than a blizzard, and I get up great deal of day to sit out my day and watch the poor devils struggling through it."

SIGNIFICANT THINGS

I think many people fume away a mass of energy and power thinking about things and grasp the really significant things in life.

For instance, how many wonderful men and women c one to the edge of life's circle after the futile chase for money, fame and position. Though significance is perishable.

Wm. R. H. Lecky, the Irish historian and essayist, one of his most interesting and thought-provocative essays, brings out this idea very wonderfully. He says: "It is one of the paradoxes of human nature that the things that are most struggled for and the things that are most valued are not those which give either the most intense or the most unmixed joy."

The things that make life very significant and worth while are to be found in simple places and in simple things.

The "Daddy" love, for instance, that sends the electric sparklets from little chubby arms that run your neck at the door. The knowledge that you may have failed, perhaps, but in the eyes of one, and in the dearer or more plain "everydays" that mean most to you, you have won.

In these things that you are sure to find joy and grandeur.

Some years ago I saw a man, led by a little dog, approach the curb at the corner of busy street. No one seemed to notice. But a little chap, from somewhere there, darted out, took blind man's arm and led him safely across.

What a significant thing that was to do

HONESTY AMONG NATIONS

There is no easy road to the settlement of international problems. These problems have perhaps in the past been as pressing as they are now. But we cannot deny that the disposition of the world to become a neighborhood has changed the character of international discussion.

Yet there are some things which remain permanent and of supreme value. Many people think that honesty is impossible but fancy lying. This, of course, is not true. It has always been the best policy and is the finest statesmen of each generation have been eloquent on this in true today just as always.

As a matter of fact, honesty enters a great deal more into diplomacy than most people think. The truly successful diplomats have been men who took their stand on issues and were able tactfully, but forcefully, to press their points. The idea that diplomats are a group who hustle together and haggle and

General Belief Steel Union Will Go Out Again Jan. 26

NEW YORK (CP)—"A stab in the back" was the way one distinguished steel worker described the United States Supreme Court's decision upholding the government injunction that ended the strike 19 days ago.

Another unionist told a guard at the gate to a big United States Steel Company plant in Pittsburgh to "change this gate for a revolving door . . . because we'll be going right back in when this injunction is over."

The injunction, ordering the United Steelworkers of America to send its 500,000 members back to work after the longest strike in the industry, was granted the government 20 days under the Taft-Hartley labor act after it declared that the stoppage threatened the national health and economy.

The return-to-work order expires Jan. 26 and the general belief is that the steelworkers will resume the strike then.

There were reliable reports as the 116-day walkout started July 15 that the union would have been prepared to settle for a 65-cent-an-hour increase above the old 10-cent-an-hour average. It had begun by asking 15 cents and fringe benefits.

Many feel that the union for a long siege on the picket line was the strongest weapon and that they should have more say in deciding the working conditions within the mills.

It is this issue, on which the companies show little sign of softening, that is expected to lead to another walkout in mid-January.

When the steel management and union met to open demands for greater freedom to change working rules to make for greater economy and efficiency, observers became convinced that their host, union president I. W. Abel, rejected the proposal in such a way as to indicate it would give no ground.

Management took a pause or a change and wages held to previous levels because they say costs must be lowered to meet foreign competition and prices must be made stable to check inflation. The union counters that record profits from production earlier in the year could have provided a wage increase without higher prices.

Death Claims 'Bill' Simon; Well Known Here

BROCKVILLE — Wilbert Henry "Bill" Simon, 70, one of four Brockville brothers who set a Canadian family railroading record, died suddenly Saturday afternoon at St. Vincent de Paul hospital. He was stricken during the afternoon while on his way to his home, 44 Dendy Street, from downtown.

Mr. Simon spent 47 years with the Canadian National Railways as a conductor. He and his three brothers, all now retired, racking up a record of 189 years of consecutive service with the Canadian railways, W. Maurice Simon had 48 years of service, Wilbert, 45 years and Douglas, 49 years.

Mr. Simon was born in Brockville, February 25, 1889, and was in his 71st year. He was a member of the late William Simon and his wife, the former Sarah Jane Cole. He had been an esteemed resident of Brockville all his life and was a well known railroader, having 47 years with the CNR as conductor. He retired in 1956.

The late Mr. Simon was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and a life member of the IOOF No. 9, from which he had received his 50-year jewel. He was also a life member of Salem Lodge No. 258 AF and AM.

Active in sporting circles, Bill Simon was a member of the old Bohemian Club with which he rowed in four-oared crews and paddled in war canoes. He was also a husky lineman on the Brockville Rugby team in the middle 1900's. Along about the same time he was prominent as a lacrosse and baseball player.

He excelled particularly as a hockey supporter with the old Invincibles, around 1907, along with Dinny Barns, Jack Kearney, Dobbie Kerr, Frank Fregeo, Tom Muldoon and Bill McLean. That year they played exhibitions with Smith Falls and Perth, winning each team then played Peterborough and lost out in a close game. Bill Simon then went to Pittsburg, Pa., along with Harry McBride, Harold Higgins and Robbie Kerr. The following season he played for Belleville along with the famous Jack Marks of Detroit.

In the winters of 1913-14, he played defence with Brockville against Smiths Falls and Perth, with Thain MacDowell. They won out, but in the playoff with a strong Ottawa team which included Cyclone Taylor, it was in a close finish. The following season he was stalwart on defence for Brockville in league games against Smiths Falls and Perth, winning the championship.

A little later he played for the Outlaws against Brockville, who had new defencemen in Smiths Falls—and the Outlaws won 7 to 4, following which the two teams combined to defeat Smiths Falls by a score of 8 to 5 in the game for the championship with Mike McGlade.

His two sons, Gilles and Thain, followed in his "hockey" footsteps, Gilly playing for Detroit and Chicago, Thain with Indianapolis and Detroit in the N.H.L.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Haskin, of Brockville, one daughter, four sons, Miss Eleanor Simon, of Brockville; Gilles Simon, of Kelowna, B.C.; Colin Simon, of Renfrew; Thain Simon of Pittsburgh and Donald Simon of Toronto; one sister, Miss Bertrice Simon of Brockville, two brothers, Wallace Simon of Schreiber, Ont., Douglas Simon of Brockville, Maurice (Morley) Simon of Tweed, several grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

(Note: Mr. Simon was well known here, especially in hockey circles. He was a great friend of the late Ed Thomas for whom he played for years as an outstanding defenceman. The funeral was held in Brockville this afternoon at 2.30.)

Hammarskjold's Laos Mission Most Delicate of His Career

By JOSEPH McSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Dag Hammarskjold's mission to Laos is one of the most delicate of his numerous tasks in quiet diplomacy since becoming secretary-general of the United Nations in 1953.

It may, in fact, be the most ticklish of the lot. Hammarskjold has usually tackled tougher. But in earlier interventions his actions were authorized by the UN security council or the assembly, or else he had the backing of both the United States and the Soviet Union.

In confirming expectations that he would take a representative to Laos, Hammarskjold appears to be walking a tightrope without a net between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Diplomats note that the previous secretary-general, Trygve Lie, resigned because he believed that the Soviet opposition to his role in the Korean intervention determined its effectiveness and made it unwise for him to try to continue in the job.

This may sound ominous for Hammarskjold's future in the UN, but the same diplomats stress that the Korean War was a much more serious affair than what is happening in Laos.

Some clues for a solution of Hammarskjold's difficulty may be seen in the diplomatic double-talk that was exchanged just before he undertook his mission to Laos, which says it is the victim of aggression from neighboring Communist North Viet Nam.

Soboley told Hammarskjold then that a visit to Laos by him or "the proposed stationing of a personal representative of the secretary - general in Vietnam" would be an active action on the part of the United Nations in this question, an only further complicate the situation there."

Hammarskjold said this trip had no implications regarding "the international situation in Laos, the area or relations" and that country, or the arrangements agreed upon in Geneva in 1954."

The Russians have repeatedly said the Laotian crisis could be solved by application of the 1954 agreement, which ended the Indochina war and established the international truce commission for Laos, including Canada, India and Poland.

Although Hammarskjold originally was to have gone to Laos in connection with the 1954 agreement, his new statement Sunday appears to be a significant tack.

One phrase indicated that in making a judgment of the kind of assistance that might be supplied in Laos, Hammarskjold would take into account the UN Charter and "also other international agreements which provide a framework for the development of Laos."

Diplomats saw reason to hope that this attitude might placate the Russians, who are believed to be waiting for a way to publicly to satisfy their comrades in Peking.

Canada Wins Third Straight In Jumping Event

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — North America's leading international horse jumping rider today is a 30-year-old Toronto stockbroker named Tom Gayford.

Monday night Gayford, wearing the golden cap of honor, led the Canadian team to its third victory in as many nights in the six - jump puissance elimination event.

In a jump-off against Brazil's Raul Rodrigues Ferreira, Gayford guided Blue Beau over two breath-taking five-foot, three-inch obstacles without a pause or a fault. Ferreira on Maregog, only other rider to get a clear round in the preliminary, stumbled on the first fence but recovered to clear the others.

CANADA HAS 22 POINTS

Eight other riders tied for third place with four faults each. The win leaves Canada leading with 22 points for the team trophy awarded on a total points basis at the end of the fair's 11 international events.

The United States, winner of the international competition at last week's New York horse show, is second with eight points. Brazil and Argentina are tied with six and Mexico has four points.

Most of the international riders have been going but praise for the Toronto ring and the way courses are set out. Ferreira, however, considers it too small.

"Our team is more concerned with outdoor jumping and we find this a handicap here," he said before Monday night's event. "The other thing against us is the small number of horses. We have only five and they are very tired."

RIDERS TIRED, TOO

Maj. Ferreira isn't tired too. The Brazilian team was reduced to two when its captain, Col. Eloy Menezes, was forced to return home because of a family illness. Maj. Ferreira and the other team member, Nelson Pessoa, drew lots each night to see which one of them will ride twice.

Ferreira's captain of the Argentinian team, thinks the course is perfect.

Enrique Ladron de Guevara of Mexico says the Toronto facilities are better than New York's.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—President Eisenhower agreed tentatively Monday to a new 1961 military budget which proposes to "fill manpower slightly while keeping defence spending at about the present $41,000,000,000 level. Modern weapons apparently will get the nod over personnel.

Last Roadblock To Teamsters' Clean-up Gone

WASHINGTON (AP)—A knockout blow is being aimed at labor racketeers by all branches of the United States government.

Labor Secretary James Mitchell said the new labor law passed by Congress and administered by his department already is beginning to rid unions of corrupt elements. He said it's also giving union members a real voice in running their organizations.

And court-appointed monitors today charted a speedy new cleanup drive of the big scandal-racked Teamsters Union.

The Supreme Court refused today to review lower court decisions arming the monitors with sweeping powers to supplement powers. Teamster President James R. Hoffa said the ruling, though disappointed at the ruling, will "live up to the court's decision." He said he will not challenge individual reform orders.

COULD REMOVE HOFFA

Martin F. O'Donoghue, monitor chairman, said his group now will move on a variety of fronts including charges that could result in removal of Hoffa as president.

"We can move very fast now because the last legal roadblock is out of the way," O'Donoghue said before a strategy meeting Monday with his two fellow monitor board members.

Mitchell, reporting on the first two months of operation of the anti-corruption provisions of the new U.S. labor law, said some unions officials with criminal or Communist backgrounds already have quit union office. He said nearly 100 complaints are under active investigation and some will be turned over to the justice department for prosecution.

Mitchell said eight local unions which had been under trusteeship of their national unions have been returned to elected officials. This resulted, he said, from new supervisory powers the laws gives his department over such locals.

Warner Air Crosses Rockies After Blizzard

DENVER (AP) — Warmer air flooded over the American Rockies today in the wake of a numbing blizzard that set early season records for cold weather.

Montana, paralyzed by temperatures as low as 45 Monday, had its first warming trend in a week. Overnight readings were 30 degrees above zero in warmer than 24 hours earlier.

Federal climatologist Richard A. Dightman cheered the Rocky Mountain region with a report that Monday's 45 below zero "are no more cold spells, other than the current one, in sight this week."

Tales of heroism and close brushes with death became commonplace during the two day blizzard cleared out of the region.

McEvoy was badly shaken and burned by battery acid.

Youth on Hand To Get Award For Best Wheat

TORONTO (CP)—World champion grain, seed and hay exhibitors in the Royal Winter Fair here to be awarded their trophies, $10,000 and a silver tray today.

Fair officials weren't sure how many would be here by noon but all were invited.

One to be on hand was Doug Ias MacKintosh, 18 - year - old world wheat king from Grassmere, Alta. Visiting the fair Monday he said it was the second time he had entered a ramrod. Both times he had happened in his 1956 effort.

He tried again this year and new his convictions about a career in baseball are slightly shaken.

"There aren't too many openings for baseball players anyway," he said.

STILL THE BEST

Present champion Muddy's judging was a nine-year-old Ayrshire named Glengarry Peasy's Bar Jo, champion for the last three years in a row besides being the father of the reserve grand champion and grandfather of the senior bull calf class. The calf is owned by S. C. Dean of Bedford N.S.

Sheffield Supreme Dusty, the Holstein that beat the champion's tail at July summer's Canadian National exhibition, remains as supreme as ever.

Owned by Sheffield Farms, St. Mary's, Ont., manager Art Floyd Eby Kitchener, he was judged grand champion female and reserve grand champion.

Dusty lost part of his tail after Canada would be controlled by the wheels of a passing truck. But the remained purebred and grown in again.

Rosafe Sizzler, entered by the Ontario Dept. of Agr. E. McCuaig, Alliston, was named champion Ayrshire bobtails bull.

AUCTION SALLS

In auction sales, champion sales at Essex Packers paid $2.10 a pound for the champion Hereford steer, D. Zavitz, son of Alvinston, and the reserve, an entry from Colin Schweitzer of Peterborough, fetched $2 a pound from Canada Packers.

Top paid at the Murray calf sale of stars was $1,300, paid by Meech's Angel Jantzens to R. H. Bull and Son of Brampton. A male Correlaide brought the top price of $350 in the heifer calf stars. The buyer was Mrs. Jean Lake of Uxbridge. The 12 sheep on sale netted a total price of $5,420.

Lloyd Ayre of Bowmanville, an exhibitor since he was five, took 1st in the 4-H dairy cattle judging in the Hampshire and South Down classes.

HORSE SHOW

W. J. Taylor and daughter exhibited the senior championship mare and the reserve junior champion mare.

Alvin Taylor won the Clydesdale Horse Association shield for best mare, any age, bred and owned in Canada.

Hilton Plains, Ken Pritchard of Maugtick took the junior stallion championship.

Pearson Against Arming Forces With Nuclear Weapons Controlled by Another Land

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson said today he is against the arming of Canadian forces with nuclear weapons whose use would be controlled by another country.

Until more is known about the military and climatic effect of nuclear blasts, such weapons should not be used, he told a press conference.

He added that short of an all-out attack requiring swift, immediate and devastating retaliation, nuclear weapons should not be used by a Western nation except with the agreement of such an international body as the NATO council.

Unless the council is given effective and collective control over the use of weapons, it is in danger of breaking up within five years, Mr. Pearson said.

There is no sign of evidence of this," he added.

Mr. Pearson was commenting on the government's announcement that it is going ahead with the installation of Bomarc missile bases. The Bomarc missile, capable of being armed with a nuclear warhead, would be supplied by the United States.

Canada has no missile weapons of its own and U.S. law prohibits the exchange of atomic and American nuclear weapons by any non-American forces.

Mr. Pearson, referring to the prospect that nuclear warheads in Canada would be controlled by the U.S., said that if the U.S. believed international conditions required nuclear missiles, set up in Canada, "it would be better to leave it to the normal agreement with the American."

Mr. Pearson said arrangement whereby American forces in Europe and elsewhere are armed with nuclear weapons.

PREFERS U.S. RESPONSIBLE

He said he would prefer to see the American forces have responsibility for nuclear weapons, stored in Canada, than have the Canadian forces be equipped and kept under the control of the U.S. He said nuclear weapons should not be used "any time, any place" under any circumstances without the approval of the NATO council.

"Unless we have this, there is a danger of the council disappearing," Mr. Pearson said.

Short of the measures he proposed, Mr. Pearson said, the current suspension of nuclear tests should be continued.

He said Canada should try to bring nuclear weapons under international control of the NATO members. There should be no use of these, except by collective decision.

The possibility of allowing American troops armed with nuclear weapons into Europe was said that he would have no objection to the establishment of Strategic Air Command bases in Canada but such air bases for bombers capable of delivering a nuclear punch would be established under political agreement between Canada and the U.S.

OBJECTS TO "GIFTS"

Speaking of defence problems Mr. Pearson also took objection to Canada accepting "lend-lease" form of American aid. He said the U.S. Canada never had accepted lend lease of weapons and should not start now.

"If we consider the missiles are necessary," he said, "I see no reason why we should not pay for them."

Two-thirds of the cost of the Bomarc missile bases — near Beach Bay and Moon Harbor, Que.—are being paid for by the U.S. and the remaining one-third by Canada.

But, he said, the missiles themselves would be "supplied" by the U.S.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mrs. Kenneth Bland, 35 Grier Street, received a 'phone call early Sunday morning from her brother, Mr. Gordon Yearwood and family that they had arrived safely in Los Angeles, California, where they will reside permanently.

Mrs. Harry Tamlin is spending the week in Cameron, Ontario, the guest of relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Orr, of Belleville, are visiting the guests at the Park Plaza this week, while visiting Toronto.

Miss Peggy McCreary, of St. Catharines, is visiting at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McCreary, North Front Street.

BAPTISMAL RITES

On a recent Sunday morning at Foxboro St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the Reverend Mr. J. Rooney, of Stirling, baptized the chosen daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Roy as Janet Lee Kelly.

Sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McGee, of Minto.

Immediately after, a baptismal dinner was held at the home of Janet's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wellman, R.R. 1, Corbyville, with her parents, grandparents, grandparents, and several aunts and uncles present.

Boy Scouts M.A. Plans Christmas Party

The regular monthly meeting of the Boy Scouts' Mothers' Auxiliary of 2nd Belleville, took place Thursday evening at the parish hall.

President Mrs. Howard Rainbird presided. The meeting opened with the 21 mothers repeating the Mothers' Promise and the Lord's Prayer.

It was decided the December meeting should take the form of a Christmas potluck dinner to be held on December 10th. Gifts for exchange among the Auxiliary members were voted on.

Plans for the coffee party to be held in December in the parish hall were finalized. By the number of tickets already sold the success of the party is already assured.

Alelia Hall convener Kemp offered on behalf of the Cubs her thanks to the auxiliary for the colorful Hallowe'en party. She suggested that the auxiliary again provide the candy necessary for the Christmas box to be sent to the Indian Church hospital at Constance Lake Reserve, by Cubs.

She also expressed the desire of starting a library for the Cubs to encourage them to read and had a better quality book. Alelia felt that being "Book Week" would be an opportune time to ask the co-operation of the parents in not only donating books, but to encourage the boys to use the library.

Mrs. Lionel Blaker, president of the executive of Boy Scouts' Auxiliaries, addressed the meeting briefly.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a hilariously conducted auction by Mrs. Margaret Kemp, who offered for sale everything from jams and pickles, to aprons, jewellery, puzzles, socks and knick-knacks.

Refreshments were served by hostesses Mrs. L. Blaker, Mrs. J. King, Mrs. R. Defoe and Mrs. J. Hodgson under the convenership of Mrs. J. Normington.

ST. PETER'S W. M. S.

MADOC — The November meeting of St. Peter's W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Allen. Mrs. Dudley welcomed all present and introduced Mrs. Hand. The president presided and gave a meditation on "Courage and Consecration." A report of the rally held recently in the church was reviewed by Mrs. Blakely and several items of business were discussed.

Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Alvey sang a duet "Only a Touch of Holy Hand Love" accompanied by Mrs. Brett at the piano.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. Blakely, Mrs. Stout and Mrs. Shorey was named to bring in a slate of officers.

The topic was "influence of women of the old testament on Canada, and the affairs" Mrs. Isam, a religious woman, who helped to make the Hebrew nation, was given by Mrs. Kilpatrick; Deborah, given by Mrs. Schaeffer, was placed in office service, worked out plans for the army in her land; Esther, by Mrs. Bailey aided Joshua's army; Queen of Sheba, by Mrs. Blakely, and one of the most outstanding queens.

Mrs. Johnston spoke about Athaliah, only Queen ruler of Israel, extreme wickedness prohibited, a righteous woman who taught and preached to women.

Mrs. C. Woods read a poem, "Good Queen Esther," and told how the queen planned to save her people.

The Rev. J. Sinclair expressed his pleasure at being present and spoke of his interest in the work of the W.M.S. Prayer by Mr. Sinclair closed the meeting.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Blakely, Mrs. Lorn MacIntosh in serving refreshments. A social hour followed which brought an interesting meeting to a close.

Kinettes Hold Inter-Club Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Kinette Club was held recently in the form of an inter-club meeting, in St. Thomas' Parish Hall with guest speaker present Lorn Kingston and Tweed.

The leaders for the evening were Jackie Stewart, Bud Hamill and Thelma Snelgrove.

Following the program, which was followed by a social hour and lunch served by the Kinettes assisted by Mrs. Hamill, Thelma Snelgrove and Mrs. Maude Rollins. The self-starters were Helen Hardy and Bud Hamill.

The hall and tables were tastefully decorated for the occasion by Mary Atkinson and Helen Hardy.

A delicious dinner was served by the ladies of the parish after which the president, Lorna Wood, conducted a short business meeting.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Kay Summers, gave an interesting address and showed films of her trip to the British Isles.

A delightful solo was rendered by Miss Sheila Canning, accompanied by Miss Gwen Wilson. The entertainers were thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

A social hour was spent.

AUSTRALIAN TV

Australia, with two commercial stations in 1959, expects to have two more commercial and four national stations by 1960.

PROSPECTING MOTHER — Marie Ciraschy, daughter of the late Count Imre Andressy, and Economics graduate of the University of Budapest, prefers prospecting in Ontario's bushland to an office job in the city. Marie and her husband Paul live on a 600-acre farm at Bobcaygeon, Ont., 25 miles northwest of Peterborough and own a private exploration company with several small holdings. One of their discoveries led to investigations by other prospectors that ended with the discovery of Canada's record Eldorado uranium find at Faraday, Ont. The couple have two children. (CP Photo).

Hungarian Count's Daughter Enthusiastic About Mining

BOBCAYGEON, Ont. (CP)— The daughter of a Hungarian count, is still an enthusiastic mineral prospector despite being side-tracked from a rich uranium find when she first took up the pursuit, to build a dream home.

The owner of two, who rolls up her own cigarets, continues to search Canadian rocks with the chemists.

Paul, husband and co-director, is a mining engineer from Kingston and Tweed.

The couple, both Hungarian-born, own a private exploration company which has molybdenum holdings at nearby Norland, a gold property in Colchester County, N.S., and other small claims.

They live on a 500-acre rock-and-bush farm near this village 25 miles northwest of Peterborough with their sons, Joe, 16, and Peter, 6.

MADE DECISION

In 1949, when a prospecting rush for uranium swept Canada, they found themselves down to their last $500 on the farm. Would they take a cow for their pastures or a prize counter to search their rocks?

Mrs. Ciraschy, an economics graduate of the University of Budapest, decided on the prize.

Within hours of its arrival, she was listening to the telltale beeping from uranium-bearing rocks underfoot, and Noggin the Cow traced them to a high - grade showing at the north end of the farm and some uranium.

Later the Ciraschys drove to Ottawa with their chippings. They stopped en route southwest of Marie Curie, Que., at a Gulf counter down a bush road.

It rarely buzzed itself out of life here. So the couple chipped some more samples to show to federal department officials.

But at Ottawa, the samples were dismissed as "pocket pebbles and unimportant," said Mrs. Ciraschy.

The "jewelry", though, led closer to other prospectors finding Canada's second largest uranium strike — in the Bancroft area. Now three producing mines there combined federal government purchase contracts, until 1962, for $150,000,000 worth of uranium concentrates.

CLOSE TO HOME

Another fortune eluded the Hungarian couple a few miles from their farm. A defunct uranium property, closed by maladministration, qualified for a letter of intent from the government to buy $28,000,000 worth of concentrates. Its ore body outcrops as far south as the farm.

Mrs. Ciraschy, daughter of the late Count Imre Andressy, and her husband received their Canadian citizenship in 1954. In Europe they run the gamut of the Second World War, invasion battles, flight, international fear that they still strike it rich.

Women's Institute

CHATTERTON W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chatterton Institute was held last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Lorne Reed with a good attendance. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Gardener.

Several reports were read. It was decided to have the December meeting at the school on the evening of December 10th.

A gift was given to Mrs. Harry Reid before leaving to visit her daughter in Edmonton.

A meeting was planned over to Mrs. Bert Finkle as convener of historical research, a paper was given by Mrs. Mitts and current events by Mrs. Dixon.

Mrs. Finkle gave a most interesting talk on historical research. Pictures, tintypes of years ago were shown.

After the meeting closed delicious refreshments were served by hostess and helpers.

CGIT Holds Work Board Meeting

A meeting of the Belleville Girls' Work Board of the CGIT was held on November 10th, at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church, with Mrs. S. Campbell presiding. Mrs. R. Cribb gave a report on the Leadership Training Convention which was held on October 3 in Belleville for leaders of CGIT and Explorer groups in this district. Nine girls had attended agreed it had been a worthwhile trip.

Mrs. Ellis also told of a meeting she had attended in Toronto on October 17 in company with Mrs. B. Stenson and Mrs. Cribb. This was the annual meeting of Girls' Work Boards from the province. Problems of local boards had been discussed and clarified.

SUCCESSFUL CAMP

Miss M. Hillis reported that the annual CGIT camp, which was held in July at Quin-Mo-Lac, had been successful, with 56 girls from this district attending.

Plans were made for the CGIT Vesper Service which will be held this year on December 6, at 7 p.m. in Holloway Street United Church. It was decided to invite the Explorer Groups to attend and sit in a body with their leaders.

The next meeting of the Girls' Work Board will be on January 12, 1960, at Victoria Ave. United Church at 8.30 p.m. All members please plan to attend.

Cross camps, the disappearance of friends.

Jewellery Stores Aid Santa In Selection of Lovely Gifts

Whether you're shopping on a budget or on a spree, you'll find jewellery stores aglitter this Christmas with exciting gifts for everyone on your list, in the widest range of prices that covers any spending mood.

To help you in your preliminary planning, here is compiled a descriptive list of just a few of the many gifts awaiting you at Christmas.

Your most important gift, if you're a man, is likely to be for that special woman. For her, there are, of course, many different types of jewellery set with diamonds, from a locket with a modest diamond at twenty-five dollars, to a diamond necklace set in platinum at prices in the thousands. And there are also this year, fashionable gold initiatures at normal cost to be worn as pins, and on necklaces and charm bracelets.

New fashion or costume jewellery this year is especially good choice for the budget-minded shopper. Low necklines call for interesting pins of all sizes, prism-cut and brilliant in hue — and more, particularly, five or six, of magnificent simulated stones for evening. There are also bracelets — the needs at least one for each arm. And rings with which to adorn each bodice, on a headband, or even on the hair.

BEGUILING WRIST WATCHES

Somewhere in between diamond and fashion jewellery lies the gift watch — and especially important this year when bracelet-length sleeves leave the forearm exposed and the watch serves as jewellery as well as timepiece. Never before have there been so may, or such beautiful designs in women's watches to choose from.

There are also beautiful stone-set rings and pendants — and the latter especially popular this year with the low necklines. Many also feature a single precious or semi-precious stone.

There is also the ever-popular pearl necklace which will be worn by women of every age, being especially in favor this year. If solid-filled jewellery is given for Christmas budget better, it is obtainable in a wide variety of price-to-keeper ranges.

Don't forget silver for the young girl who has a hope chest, and the woman who makes a point of setting a lovely table. You can give or add to a prize important piece of holloware or add to your flatware in designs to suit every home.

Elegance is a man's word to this year, and that means jewellery. Any man who doesn't have a watch in the new, slimmer-down, light-weight and dressy-looking style is bound to appreciate the gift of one and a tie clasp highly.

MANY SMALLER GIFTS

There is also a greater selection of smaller gifts for men

Jewel Box of Romantic Legend Still Popular Gift

All through history and legend, the jewel box has figured in stories of adventure, love and Pharos were buried in boxes of precious metal, encrusted with romance. The treasures of the stones. Called "casquettes" in Colonial Days, they were carried by ship and contained all of the possessions of the "casquette girls" who crossed the seas in search of husbands. In the story of Faust, Marguerite is presented with a beautiful box of jewellery to win her affection, and the aria 'Jewel Song' is one of the highlights of the musical version. Columbus must have been tremendously relieved when Isabella called for her jewel box.

Today, even though the priceless medals and stones are seldom used for the adornment of jewel boxes, many a young man can find a splendid case in which he may present a token of engagement ring. Families who have jewellery to pass on to the next generation may use the jewel box to 'wrap' the heirlooms.

Like many things of antiquity, the jewel box had to be brought up to date to keep its popularity. Manufacturers still follow the old designs of Italy and France, but with fine leathers, or use glamor fabrics such as lame and brocade with satin and velvet linings. Inside, however, the changes are most apparent. Always fields into travel boxes, drawers slide out, music boxes add sparkle. Men's jewellery boxes have sections for collar stays and accessories as well as rings.

New and practical are travel rolls which expand for as much as the vacationer wishes to carry, and there are pouch-type pockets serve the same purpose.

Both sentimental and practical, the jewel box is always a good choice for a gift.

Meal-In-A-Hurry

by Mary Moore

Christmas baking absolutely has nothing to do with this.

It is all about a meal I rustled up in a hurry.

We had been shopping for the Christmas gifts we are to mail to Marianne's family in Germany and had intended to stay downtown for dinner. By chance I bumbered Pete at the hospital and he said he had the evening off and wanted to go home.

Dinner Menus

TUESDAY

Tomato Bouillon; Pan-Fried Calve's Liver; Onion Gravy; Buttered Noodles; Green Peas; Small Sample Carrots; Pudding with Butterscotch Orange Sauce (see Monday—reduce recipes by half); Coffee.

So that changed everything and we went home too. I opened the refrigerator door and found 7 eggs, 1 small cabbage, and 1 large Spy apple, and 1 1-2 pound package of back bacon. On the canned goods shelf was a can of mushrooms. In the fruit bowl were 2 or 3 bananas and pears and a bunch of grapes. So this was the menu: mushroom omelette with a border of bacon, baked stuffed potato halves, cabbage and apple salad and for dessert the fruit bowl with a few slices from Christmas cake samples.

This omelette was a huge success and I want to tell you how and why.

MUSHROOM OMELETTE:

For 3 people separate 6 eggs. Beat the whites until they form soft peaks. Transfer the beater to the yolks without washing it and beat the yolks until pale and foamy. Slowly stir 1-4 cup boiling water into them. Add 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and 1-4 teaspoon salt. Fold in whites. Heat in a very large hot frying pan with 2 tablespoons butter in it, melted and just beginning to turn gold. (If desired, 1 teaspoon grated onion may be added to the butter.) Turn omelette into hot pan and after 1 minute reduce heat to low. Meanwhile drain, and slice 1 can mushrooms (or use fresh mushrooms) and in another frying pan saute gently in 1 or 2 tablespoons butter to heat through but not shrivel. When edges and bottom of omelette are set transfer to oven to dry off top. Loosen edges and bottom carefully and turn/er to hot platter. Spread mushrooms over one half and fold over. Garnish with parsley.

Before I started operations on the omelette Peady had turned the oven on to 500 deg. Fahr. and put in 2 very large potatoes which she cut in halves llatwise. When the table was set and the salad made the potatoes were baked enough, so she scooped them out of their skins and beat them to a pulp and added the remaining egg and 1-3 cup hot milk, some butter and salt and beat all this until smooth, put it back in the skins and reheated them in the still piping hot oven. I baked the bacon on a pie plate.

The fruit cake and coffee were a delicious ending to a meal that at 5:30 was nonexistent.

NOTE:

I will give you a recipe for a non-puffy French type omelette next week.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Mrs. M. S. — Barbara can't hold her temper.

Barbara S. — I don't get treated like a lady.

Mrs. M. S. — I am trying to help my 15-year-old daughter, who is having a hard time because of her father's strictness.

Bert has always been a stickler for rules, but he is worse now than ever. The kids have to stick to the letter of the law or they get punished by having all their privileges taken away.

Barbara, our oldest, has been very fresh with her father when he lays down the law to her. As a result she has been kept out of almost all social activities for the rest of the school term. I have begged her to keep her thoughts to herself and always behave like a lady in front of her father, but she can't hold her temper.

Barbara S. — I would act like a lady if I got treated like one. My dad talks to me as if I were the worst tramp. Even before I've done anything he is ready to blame me for everything under the sun.

The reason for our last blowup was that I came in from a date exactly ten minutes after my deadline. It wasn't my fault or my boy friend's. The bus schedule had gone haywire because of a road accident. Did my father give me a chance to explain? No, he rushed into me and my boy friend as though we had committed the worst crime.

When I tried to explain Dad told me to shut up and I lost my temper. Now I'm not allowed to date until Christmas.

The Council: Mrs. M. S. isn't helping matters very much by telling Barbara to "keep her thoughts to herself and always behave like a lady in front of her father." Of course she should do this, but it does not offer a reasonable solution to Barbara's many teenage problems.

The fact is that Barbara is right when she demands to be treated like a lady. She should also be treated like a human being. When her father bawls her out in front of her boy friend, never giving either of them a chance to offer any explanations, he is treating her with a contempt that can only breed rebellion and hatred. Eventually a big blow-up will come and Barbara will be forced to a total rebellion which could bring disaster to an unhappy youngster.

Instead of giving Barbara destructive-kind of sympathy which aligns the two women against the husband and father, Mrs. M. S. ought to be helping Barbara in a more constructive way. She should discuss with her husband the very serious problem of his temper and his rigid, legalistic ways which are having a bad effect on the whole family. This kind of man is pretty much out of fashion in our age, and we get no impression that Mr. M. S. could be disturbed about a lot of things that don't bear directly on his daughter or her conduct.

It is very difficult to reach a person who feels himself on his harshness and stubbornes, but it can be done with a clever and sympathetic wife. If Mrs. M. S. cannot get her husband to mend his ways, or get a doctor about whatever is eating at him from inside, she should try to help her daughter to see the good side of her father and bear with the harsh side. If Barbara can sincerely love her father, she may be able to get around him in her own way.

MODERN MANNERS

QUESTION BOX

Question: How did the custom originate that engagement and wedding rings should symbolize the betrothal and marriage vows? Why are they worn on the third finger of the left hand?

Answer: Back in the Stone Age, the cave man's marriage was made by capture. His bride's wrists and ankles were bound with rushes. From this ancient custom has evolved the engagement ring and wedding band that we know today. The traditions governing why these rings are worn on the third finger of the left hand are a little obscure. An old Greek legend believes that this finger had a special vein which lead directly to the heart. Since many of course exploded when the medical discovery was made that all fingers are connected by veins to the heart. Perhaps the belief that the custom dates back to early Christian ceremony is the correct one. In this ritual, the bride-groom places the ring first on his bride's thumb, then on the first, second and third fingers, saying as he did so, "in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, Amen." The "Amen"-brought the ring to the third finger, where it remained.

Question: Where did the tradition originate of throwing rice on the bridal couple as they depart on their honeymoon?

Answer: In ancient times, people believed that throwing rice would divert evil spirits who might otherwise harm the couple. As rice has always been known as a symbol of good crops and a full larder, another legend has it that by pelting the bridal couple with it, prosperity and happiness would be sure to follow.

Question: Why are old shoes also thrown after the departing bride and bridegroom?

Answer: Many conflicting theories lay claim to the origin of these old traditions that we observe today. The reason for throwing shoes, according to an Elizabethan poet: "Maids aplah hitherward, quick as a bee, Now for good luck, cast an old shoe at me." In India, a theory is that the custom evolved from the ritual of throwing red slippers across a roof as a reminder that a visitor would not be welcome! Shoes have long been a symbol of good luck. In Medieval times, they cost a great deal of money and only those who possessed much wealth and position were able to afford them. Casting an old shoe after the bridal couple was supposed to bring them these attributes of wealth and happiness. Today we usually carry a vestige of this superstition, and shoes are thrown for "Good Luck."

FOXBORO

Hubble Clan Holds Enjoyable Social Evening

By Mrs. Percy MacMullen

FOXBORO — Members of the Hubble clan gathered at the school auditorium in Foxboro and enjoyed a social evening on Monday evening.

Those in attendance enjoyed a graphic description of the recent trip to Newfoundland made by Mrs. Maurice Bell of Shirley, her husband and two sons. Mrs. Bell said it was a "grand adventure" to travel that distance with their camping equipment, but all were delighted to arrive back home in Ontario.

DESCRIBES BEAUTIES

She described the beauties of the Gaspe Peninsula in Quebec, and the Canso Causeway which joins Cape Breton Island to the mainland of Nova Scotia. They also visited the famous museum of Alexander Graham Bell, and viewed a Portuguese sailing boat.

She said Cornerbrook is approximately a new city and is the home of the world's largest paper and pulp mill. The beauty of Grand Falls and the new air terminal at Gander were described; also a thrilling ride by ferry and a boat trip.

Mrs. Bell disclosed if one travelled all around the island he would traverse six thousand miles; and that one-third of the fish is supplied by this province.

VISITS SPRINGHILL

She told of a visit to Springhill, N.S., and closed her address with a description of the lovely blue sapphire which grow wild there. There is no doubt but that this part of Canada will become a wonderful vacation land in the near future, she stated.

Mrs. Bell was introduced by Mrs. Russell Hubel and Marion on behalf of the group by Mrs. Arthur Fryear, who presented her with a gift.

Mr. Elton Hubble, Campbellford, newly elected president, was master of ceremonies, and spoke briefly.

Mr. Russell Fryear led the sing-song with his mother as accompanist. Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave two humorous readings. Master Barry Fryear sang two selections with his grandmother as accompanist.

The accident record a humorous selection, and Mrs. Cecil Hubble, Foxboro, read an interesting article. Mr. Clifford Hubble was in charge of the grocery basket.

The silver collection taken to defray expenses amounted to almost $11.

The lunch conveners were: Mrs. R. Fryear and Mrs. C. Hubble and their assistants.

Members of the group and means committee are planning the supper at the home of the secretary on Monday evening, December 21st, to arrange for extra funds to carry on their project.

Irish Diplomat Expresses His Deep Sorrow

COURTLAND, Va. (AP)—From the pulpit of a small Negro country church, an Irish diplomat has expressed deep sorrow for the death of a woman hit by his son's automobile.

John J. Hearne, Irish ambassador to the United States and former high commissioner to Canada, told an overflow congregation of more than 300 at Zion A.M.E. Church Sunday that his government "will do everything in its power" to help the family of Mrs. Jessie Hamlin, 56. She was struck down on a Washington street last week by an auto driven by Hearne's son, David, 21.

The young man, who claimed diplomatic immunity in the case, said he hit Mrs. Hamlin, a widow, while driving to a party at the embassy.

Ambassador Hearne was invited to the pulpit by the Rev. M. D. Nathan toward the conclusion of Sunday's memorial service. Pastor Nathan assured him that "everybody in this church and all will toward him and his son; it was just an accident—something is going to happen to you."

Hearne and his son were the first to pass the church. They left the church by limousine as pallbearers moved to the graveside.

William S. Thompson, lawyer for Mrs. Hamlin's family, told the fact the Hearnes came here for the funeral "is a credit to you (the ambassador's humaneness)." Thompson said he held two conversations with the ambassador before the funeral, and it was indicated that financial settlement will be made.

David Hearne said he is not sure if he will be asked to return to Ireland. "I hope to remain in school here," he added.

Eskimo Carvers at Stratford

CANADA

One of the novel attractions at this year's successful festival of the arts at Stratford, Ont., were 2 Eskimo carvers who made the 1500 mile journey from their homes at Cape Dorset on remote Baffin Island to display their art before a large and interested audience. Neither Kiawak (left) nor Egeevudluk (right) had visited southern Canada before and upon arrival they saw cars, traffic lights, trains and Shakespearean actors for the first time in their lives. Above, actor Douglas (Othello) Campbell admires one of their soapstone carvings.

Examples of Kiawak's carvings are shown (top line) above. Left, Bird with Young, intricately carved from a single piece of soapstone, and right, Sea Spirit: guardian of sea animals. Bottom Line: Egeevudluk's Woman with Skin Scraper and Fish and his powerfully molded Musk-Ox.

The work of the Cape Dorset carvers was part of a varied display of art and artifacts by Canada's northern citizens at the 1959 Stratford Festival. Eskimo clothing, toys, domestic utensils, hunting implements, were included in the exhibition.

Quebec's New Premier Uses Reason More Than Sentiment In Dealing With Ottawa

By RICHARD DAIGNAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP) — Paul Sauvé, Quebec's new premier, seems to believe he can further the cause of his province on federal-provincial matters more effectively by using reason than by appealing to sentiment.

He has shown that he prefers at the conference table to present his arguments without passion, and not sit with crossed arms waiting for the rest of Canada to come around to his position.

The late Premier Duplessis was a man in whom sentiment and passion were combined into a powerful political tool. Much cool thinking lay behind his vital decisions, but passion was the lever he used to communicate his ideas. No Quebecer can forget how he held vast crowds spellbound by the brilliance of his oratory.

Outside Quebec reactions varied widely. What rang true in Quebec sounded strange elsewhere.

WANTED FULL RIGHTS

Mr. Duplessis often stated Quebec wanted nothing less than its full rights under the constitution and that preservation of its cultural heritage was vital to its people's survival as a distinct ethnic group. There he closed his case, and waited.

Mr. Sauvé, premier since Sept. 11, holds exactly the same views but he is younger and seems to feel that he must push beyond where Mr. Duplessis drew the line, and try to put his doctrine into practice.

Recently, in Ottawa for a meeting of federal and provincial finance ministers, Mr. Sauvé expressed full support for Mr. Duplessis' old provincial-rights platform. He said it conforms to the aspirations of Quebec's population and that any premier would have to go along with it or risk defeat.

The temperate way he explained his position had an effect on the Ottawa press corps. One veteran newspaper man said: "This man will probably be the first Quebec premier to penetrate English Canada."

Mr. Sauvé's dispassionate approach to federal - provincial issues is drawing new support in Quebec itself, where every election since 1944 was won by Union Nationale arguments that provincial Liberals were Ottawa agents, ready to sell Quebec down the river to their federal masters.

SITUATION CHANGED

Since 1957 the Progressive Conservatives have been in power in Ottawa. Although the Union Nationale party, many members of which are Conservative support-ers, expects now to be accused in turn of working deals with Ottawa, Mr. Sauvé feels the people will not believe he will take a weak stand on provincial rights.

Mr. Duplessis was firm in refusing to make any settlement proposal on any issue.

Now the implication is that Mr. Sauvé feels Quebec is ready to be weaned slowly from a steady diet of political sentiment and fed healthy doses of reason.

As far as provincial politics are concerned, the inevitable conclusion is that Mr. Sauvé does not feel either he or his party needs red-hot Ottawa-Quebec situations to win an election.

It is understood that Mr. Sauvé has told intimates that with Ottawa he intends to keep to "dollars - and - cents" arguments. He feels Ottawa and the other provinces will at least listen to, if not accept, financial propositions.

COLONEL AMBUSHED

ALGIERS (Reuters) — Col. Gilles - Marie de Shaken, commander of the French 5th Light Infantry Regiment, and his driver were killed in an ambush by Algerian insurgents, French military sources said Sunday.

Sport Slices

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The best seven, McFarland-wise, to come out of the weekend smokeroom of sport was that Jean Paul Payette is back in the family circle—for home games, at least—and that's going to help a lot.

The smooth-skating, tricky centre will fill a gap in the Macs' offensive ranks which his playmaking and goal-getting ability should aid the Macs no end.

JEAN PAUL PAYETTE

The "gentleman" style of athlete, as many trophies will substantiate, Jean Paul is a team player. Never an individualist, the popular French-Canadian from Cornwall, put victory above personal glory. He never hesitated to pass the puck if a team-mate was in a more favorable position to score.

No finer example of Jean Paul's "all-for-one and one-for-all" spirit was that evidenced in Czechoslovakia when the time came for the selection of the final-lineups of teams competing in the world tourney.

Three players of the McFarlands had to be dropped. Jean Paul was one.

He smiled bravely, although there was a glint of tears of disappointment in his eyes. "It is all for the good of the team—and Canada", was his terse comment.

He held no grudges against the team board of management for its decision. He did not complain. In the dressing room he was his familiar self, lending vocal encouragement and adding greatly to the general morale by his good nature and willingness to help in whatever way he could.

He proved he was a team man in the first game of the tournament. Only a few minutes had been ticked off the clock in the big stadium in Bratislava when the Macs were playing Poland when Jean Paul was rushed into the boards behind the enemy goal and was taken off the ice with a fractured wrist.

It was a distinct loss to the Macs, especially since Ike Hildebrand had no left winger available.

No naked Jean Paul if he could play left wing. J. P. smiled, shrugged and said simply, "I'll do my best."

He went out there and played one of the best games of his life in an unfamiliar position. And the summary at game-end read "Payette, two goals and three assists."

Paul was, and is, as popular with the fans as he is with his team-mates. It is too bad, perhaps, that he cannot travel with the clubs—but a half-loaf is better than none.

Payette will probably see action tonight against the high-flying Whitby Dunlops. Wren Blair has his Allan Coupers clicking like a dance-band ensemble's castanets, and at the moment they are playing after-lunch with the Kitchener Dutchmen for the senior "A" circuit lead.

The Dunnies are riding high on the crest of a six-game winning streak but they have a wholesome respect for the three McFarlands, despite the fact the Macs are occupying the basiter quarters. Dic's crew has come up with its best efforts of the season against the Dunnies and if they play the brand of hockey that defeated Windsor here last Friday night the Blairian buckaroos are in for a mighty tough evening.

Young Chuck Adamson, the new goalie, makes his debut tonight with the Macs. The youngster played with the Peter Pans last year and comes highly recommended. There is a strong possibility that Denis Boucher, too, will return to the firing line with his old world tournament buddies.

This department is among the many that were loath to see young Cesare Maniago leave the McFarlands. The former St. Michael's Majors goalie has returned to the Kitchener Dutchmen and will likely see action in the 1960 Olympics.

The Dutchies will be here on December 11 and on the basis of performance we hope Manager Ernie Goman uses his veteran Boat Burley in the nets instead of young Cesare.

Maniago was more or less sensational in the nets during his brief tenure with the McFarlands, and will likely prove so in his future activities with the Dutchies.

We do not presume to be a hockey expert of the calibre of NHL scouts and others, but few gets you ten young Ukrainian Maniagos will be wearing a Toronto Maple Leaf sweater before he is too many years older.

Howe Making Strong Bid For Scoring Leadership

Winger Fires Winning Goal As Wings Shade Hawks 3-2; Was Sixth Point in 3 Games

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gordie Howe of Detroit made a powerful bid for the National Hockey League's scoring leadership during the past week.

The Red Wings' magnificent right wing fired the winning goal Monday night in Detroit's stark 3-2 victory over Chicago Black Hawks.

It was his sixth point in three games and jacked him into a second - place tie with three others behind Bronco Horvath on the points. Boston's Bronco Horvath tops with 10 points on a league-leading 16 goals and 11 assists.

HAWKS GO DEEPER

Howe also got an assist as the Red Wings clambered off the floor to push Chicago deeper into the NHL cellar.

Hawks second-stringers Murray Balfour and Bill Hay scored in the second period to put Chicago ahead 2-0, Balfour's goal coming when team - mate Glen Skov bounced the puck off Balfour's skate.

In the third, Howe set up Jack McIntyre on a power play and McIntyre blasted a 35-footer over the pads and glove of goalie Glenn Hall.

Then McKenzie stole the puck from Chicago defenceman Pierre Pilote and fired a shot unassisted from footer to tie the game. Howe banged the winner, on another play, at 13:27 of the final period.

Chicago's Rob by Hull, the team's leading scorer in a dismal season, assisted on Hay's goal and ran his points total to 17 on seven goals and 10 assists.

HORVATH GAINS

Although Boston took four beatings in as many games last week, Horvath pulled further away from the pack.

The slinger pivot man of the Bruins had a hat trick against Montreal Canadiens last week-ago and today he has seven. He collected four points on one goal and three assists.

The runner-up position now has four players bunched with 20 points each.

Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal Canadiens was the sole second-place occupant a week ago. Scoreless in one game and held to one point in another, he was tied with a gashed leg, Geoffrion still has 20. His count is 16 goals and four assists, the same as Howe's.

Horvath's last two line - mates, Johnny Bucyk and Vic Stasiuk, also pulled into the 20-point run-down spot. Bucyk collected four goals and two assists to move up from fourth place. Stasiuk stepped up from third on one goal and three assists. Both Bucyk and Stasiuk have eight goals and 12 assists apiece.

Behind them is Andy Bathgate of the New Rangers, whose four assists last week boosted his point total to 18. Bathgate is the league's top man on assists with 16.

PLANTE TOP GOALIE

Jacques Plante, Montreal's masked goalie gave up only two goals in three games and leads the netminders with a goals against average of 1.34 per game. Terry Sawchuk has 2.22 and Johnny Bower of Toronto 2.25.

Juniors Rack Up 2nd Victory With 9-2 Win Over Picton

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Lambert-Rollins chalked up their second log-jacked victory in as many starts here last night when they downed the Picton Merchants 9-2 in an Eastern Ontario Junior "B" hockey league fracas.

The Belleville club, perched atop the loop standings for the time being at least, will meet their first rough test of the young season when they visit Peterborough this Friday night.

Last night's fixture was an almost a replay of the winners' game with Trenton on Saturday as the Mercantilers were outplayed from the start and the penalty box was the busiest spot in the arena.

Belleville led 2-0 at the end of the first, increased the lead to 5-1 after two periods and outscored Picton 4-1 in the final twenty minutes. The winners drew ten minor and two major penalties while Picton had nine and two majors.

All four majors came in the final minute of the game and will likely cost both clubs money. Larry Mavety and Picton's Eldon Carson tangled at 19.18 and before it was over Dennis Kerruish of the L-R's and Picton's Gary Woodbeck were mixed up in the middle of it. The OHA has asked its officials to report all players who interfere in any way whatsoever in a fight. Kerruish and Woodbeck may end up with suspensions or fines, although it appeared as if Kerruish was merely attempting to halt the Mavety-Carson battle.

Five of the Lambert-Rollins played major parts in the 9-2 point scoring parade. Buck Ebbier and Gary Goyer each contributed two goals and as many assists; Jackie Elliott had one goal and three assists; Ralph Mavety had a brace of assists each while Gary Hall and Ron Ryan picked up singletons.

Dick Proctor and Don Taylor were the Picton marksmen, assisted by Leon Bryant and Bob Kennedy. Taylor was robbed of a second goal when he went right in on Belleville goalie Ebbier, only to have his short drive kicked out, probably the best save of the night.

After an early rash of penalities which caused no damage, Gave Belleville a 1-0 lead at 10.40 with a backhand shot while Picton's Carson was serving a tripping penalty.

"Bud" Goodbeer's crew survived scrapping penalties a minute later as the Picton boys seemed to lack finish around the Belleville net. The Merchants were a man shy when Elliott tipped in his first goal at 17.07 to end the period scoring.

Elliott and Goyer pushed back and fourth right to Jim Pendleton's doorstep before Goyer pulled the trigger at 1.47 of the middle stanza for a 3-0 lead. Wheeling the game along at fast for both sides at this point and Ebbier scored from close in with Storms off for holding at 2.15.

Reid and Mavety of Belleville were moving time together at one point but again the Picton attack fizzled out once it reached the locals blueline. Taylor finally beat Parker at 5.58, the whipping in Bryant's rebound for a 4-1 score.

Belleville were at full strength when Don Forsythe clanked a high, one past Pendleton for a 5-1 Belleville lead at the end of the period.

Proctor and Kennedy rushed a lone Belleville defenceman at 15.3 in the first minute of the final stanza, Proctor's own rebound after Parker came away out of his net to make the original save, beating the net-minder by his stick in front of his quick, hard shot. Taylor got a pat at 16.44 and Elliott cashed in his own rebound to close the scoring at 18.40, following the lead of Ebbier and Goyer.

PICTON — Pendleton, Woodbeck, Carson, Proctor, Kennedy, Wood, Bryant, Storms, Perreau, Taylor, Wisdahl, Branscomb, Webb, Delmage.

Phil Watson Gets Surgery; 'Boom' Crutches

NEW YORK (AP)—Phil Watson, who led the New York Rangers to coaching New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, underwent an operation Monday for the removal of a peptic duodenal ulcer.

The surgeon said Watson would remain in hospital for two weeks and then go South for an indefinite period of recuperation.

Alf Pike will be on the Rangers' bench as coach for the first time Wednesday night in the game with the Black Hawks at Chicago.

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, who suffered a deep cut in his right leg in a game with Boston Bruins Saturday, was put on the shelf Monday and is expected to be lost to Montreal Canadiens for at least 10 days.

NEAR SEASON'S END

TORONTO (CP) — The 1959 Canadian professional racing season ends Wednesday at New Westminster with the running of the $10,000 Valedictory Handicap at a marathon one mile and six furlongs. Despite poor weather conditions in October and November, a wagering record of more than $83,000,000 will be established on Ontario thoroughbred tracks when the season's record attendance of 1,587,321 already has been surpassed.

Willie McCoyey Named National Rookie of Year

BOSTON (AP) — Willie McCovey, who forced San Francisco to find another job for Orlando Cepeda, today was unanimously named 1959 National League rookie of the year. Cepeda won the title last year.

McCovey was the choice of each member of the 24 - man selection committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

An automobile salesman in the off season, McCovey joined the Giants from the Phoenix farm club and sparked Frisco's drive to the league lead. His slugging helped keep the club in contention the remainder of the season.

BIG SLUGGING AVERAGE

McCovey, 21, hit .354 in 52 games. He had 38 runs batted in, 13 home runs, nine doubles and five triples in one-third of a season. His slugging average was .660.

Cepeda, unanimous rookie choice for 1958, was moved to the outfield to make room for McCovey.

McCovey is the third unanimous pick since the National League rookie balloting was instituted in 1940. The first to sweep the votes was Frank Robinson of Cincinnati in 1956.

OTHER WINNERS

The earlier winners:

1949 — Don Newcombe, Dodgers

1950—Sam Jethroe, Braves

1951—Willie Mays, Giants

1952—Joe Black, Dodgers

1953—Junior Gilliam, Dodgers

1954—Wally Moon, Cardinals

1955—Bill Virdon, Cardinals

1957—Jack Sanford, Phillies.

In 1947 and '48, rookie-of-the-year honors were awarded on a major league basis. Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers was named in '47 and Al Dark of the Braves in '48.

In San Francisco, the club's four McCovey said he didn't think about getting the rookie-of-the-year honor because, "I figured I'd had enough for one season."

SYRACUSE STILL TOPS

NEW YORK (AP) — Unbeaten Syracuse for the fifth straight week is unanimous choice in the Lambert Trophy competition as the best football team in the East.

The Orange, headed for the Cotton Bowl after crushing Colgate 71-0 Saturday, wound up with a 10.0 rating to 9.0 for Penn State, which also won its unanimous second choice.

Pitt moved up to third after beating Notre Dame while Army was fourth, Navy fifth, Penn sixth, Boston U. seventh, Holy Cross eighth and Boston College and Dartmouth tied for ninth and 10th.

Ottawa Coach Says Bombers May Cause Trouble for East

OTTAWA (CP)—The Big Four football champions, either Ottawa or Hamilton, "are headed for a lot of trouble" against the surging Blue Bombers in the Nov. 28 Grey Cup final at Toronto, says assistant coach George Terlep of the Rough Riders.

Terlep, in a story phoned to the Ottawa Citizen from Wisconsin Dells, Wisc., after seeing Bombers win the western title in two straight games against Edmonton Esaimos, writes:

"The Bombers, in my book, must be regarded as the best offensive team in Canada. They'll be difficult to handle."

With halves Leo Lewis and Carver Shannon and fullbacks Charlie Shepard and Gerry Ford 3-1 at halftime.

James, "the Bombers are little short of murder on the ground."

"Individually I've seen the equal of Winnipeg's running backs but the Bombers boast the best set of receivers in the Canadian professional football today."

Bombers also have more than adequate aerial power and ends Ernie Pitts and Farrell Funston and backs Lewis and Shannon are outstanding pass receivers, he added.

RUSSIANS DEFEATED

LONDON (Reuters) — Tottenham Hotspur of the English League First Division beat Moscow Torpedo 3-2 in a soccer game Monday night. Tottenham led 3-1 at halftime.

Ticat Coach Thinks Morale Big Factor in Second Game

HAMILTON (CP)—Has success that spoiled the rock-ribbed Hamilton Tiger-Cats?

Coach Jim Trimble hopes it hasn't. But he admits Ottawa Rough Riders had more desire in their game when they beat the Ticats 19-5 Saturday in the opener of a two-game, total-points series for the Big Four football title.

And he says that if his team hopes to overcome the 13-point deficit Saturday, the momentum will have to come, for the most part, from the players.

"I'll go along to a great extent with the idea that a football team can be fired up by pep talk," he said Monday night. "But I don't think it applies as much to professionals. The fact that Ottawa has been hungrier longer may have been a big factor in Saturday's game. . . .

MORALE MAIN PROBLEM

"Our morale problem is greater than our mechanical problem. But don't hang out the crepe yet. It's not over. There's another ball to go—a 60-minute ball—and I think we can take it back, although anyone out there

Eye-Protection Necessary For Hunters in the Field Says Well-Known Authority

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

We are right in the middle of Sylvanaia's upland game season.

I just had a call from a good friend who is a top-notch eye surgeon.

"Jack, every year about this time," he said, "you have a column in our newspaper, urging the men and women who go hunting to wear shooting glasses or some sort of eye protection, such as polaroid eye shields or even sun glasses from the 5 and 10. This year I haven't seen any such reminder and I'm calling to ask you, to urge you, to have something prominently in the public print that will remind people to wear eye protection when they go afield.

"What brought it strongly to mind," he told me, "is a visit from a mutual friend (he gave me the man's name).

"As you know, his eyesight is important not only to him but to the whole community. Fortunately, the injury is not serious. In addition, scheduled during my normal lunch hour today, I must perform an emergency operation, made necessary by a hunting accident, on a man who very well could lose the sight of one eye. I'm hoping for the best.

"Meanwhile, my office is literally flooded with shooting-accident cases, all of which could have been avoided by wearing ordinary eye protection. The matter seems serious enough to me to justify the use of dramatic measures in warning the public to guard eyesight while hunting."

The gentleman to whom he referred is a judge in our county court. He is an able man in his profession ywise, understanding and possessed of keen personal interest in the cases and the individuals who come before him. Injury to his eyesight, from his own personal viewpoint, would be a serious loss to the community.

After talking to the doctor, I called an editor of our newspaper. He agreed with me that it would be wise to bring the matter to public attention. I sincerely hope his warning will keep intact at least some of the vision of its readers.

The gun man in our largest sporting-goods store points out some rather startling facts. He removed the glasses he was wearing and held them under a strong light. There in one lens, embedded, mind you, in the glass, were tiny particles of brass from an exploded shell casing, blown back against the glasses and his face while he was targeting-in a deer rifle.

Imagine, if you can, what those flying brass particles would have done to an unprotected eye. He said this was the second such accident he has had.

There is no such thing as a "cool-proof" or accident-proof gun. Although our ammunition companies do a wonderful job, constantly there is the risk of firing a defective shell. The resultant blow-back of powder blakes, brass fragments, etc., can and does do great damage to eyes.

"Anyone", the man said, "who presses the trigger of a gun without first putting on adequate eye protection, either does not realize the danger or is a psychopathic case. Sure, it's a million to one chance, but suppose the one happens to be you?"

That's a rather drastic statement, but as we and the doctor get a close look at the eyesight accident picture each year, even though they are in the minority, aider of the fence.

And guns are not the only hazard to eyes while you are hunting. Always, when you are going through brushy cover, there is the risk of being "twigged". (They even have a name for it — ill is to connect.)

Writing this, I am reminded that there is a case on the corner of my right eye, chipped out by the sharp point of a birch bud in heavy cover. On the corners of the left eye are seven or eight longitudinal scars, gouged in by a briar while hunting grouse. Both of these accidents would not have happened had I been wearing shooting glasses.

So this season, use commonsense precaution — wear shooting glasses or eye shields. Good eyesight is a precious possession. Guard it carefully when you go afield.

Clair Drilling Riders Hard To Stop Ticat 'Killer Pass'

By DON ATTFIELD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Rough Riders aren't known as a passing team, but their aerial offensive when they do use it is something to reckon with.

Over their last seven games the Riders, who carry a 12 - point edge into their final Big Four game with Hamilton Tiger-Cats Saturday, completed 32 passes for an average gain of 22.3 yards. Their opponents completed 81 passes for an average 14.4 yards, equalling Ottawa's complet i on percentage of 50.

Coach Frank Clair says "the long pass can kill you faster than anything else." He doesn't mean the short ones.

He has drilled his players hard on defence against the killer-pass, which Hamilton quarterback Bernie Faloney can unleash with devastating effect. And Clair, regarded as one of the better artists in pass-pattern design, has gone after the long pass in his own offensive.

Faloney didn't get much chance to use his strong throwing arm here Saturday, a muddy and windy day, and Ottawa won 12 to take a 1-point lead in the two-game, total-point playoff.

MAY HAVE TO TRY IT

In next Saturday's game in Hamilton, Ticats may have to go for the long pass to overcome Riders' lead. The game starts at 1 p.m. and is to be televised nationally by the CBC. The winner goes to the Grey Cup game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson, though considered much more dangerous as a runner than a passer, won the Big Four passing title this year on the basis of their average gain per completed pass or 22.4 yards—one-tenth of a yard less than the average he and alternate quarterback Babe Parilli have tossed to between them in their 1st seven games.

Faloney, third behind Tom Dublinski whom Hamilton released during the season, averaged 13.8 yards per completion.

Top Rough Rider end Bob Simpson, third in league passcatching statistics, gained more yards on pass receptions than anyone else—707 yards on 53 completions by Red O'Quinn on 102 passes thrown his way in the most passes.

In Saturday's game Ottawa tried only 10 passes, completing five for 79 yards, and Hamilton 17, completing six for 102 yards.

TO WORK OUT TODAY

Coach Clair scheduled a practice today after giving Riders a day off Monday. He also said he expects Jackson, 27, to go through a stiff workout against the ejector Moscrop, who led to the expulsion, wasn't picked up on film.

Clair said he expects all his players, including placekicker Gary Schreider who missed Saturday's game, to be ready for the Hamilton meeting.

In a radio interview Sunday night, Clair said Riders will have to play their best game of the year to take the series. He added his players will go into the game reminded of being 12 points ahead and with the idea that they have to win.

Cubs Purchase Pat Asselstine From Guelph

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cubs of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series Monday bought defenceman Pat Asselstine from Guelph Biltmores of the same league.

Asselstine, 18, who played with Guelph's Junior B club last year, is Hamilton's property until the end of the season and then return to Guelph.

In a "get tough" move general manager Jimmy Skinner and coach Gerry Brown ordered Cubs to practise Sunday night upon their return from Toronto where they dropped a 3-0 decision to St. Michael's College Majors.

Left winger Terry Labanich, who refused to work out, was given his walking papers. Bills were given permission to talk to Labanich and defenceman Bob Shannon, who has yet to make an appearance for Cubs this year.

Bilts' Gilbert Leads Junior Scoring Race

TORONTO (CP) — Guelph Biltmores, second in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series, have placed three players at the top of the scoreboard parade for the second straight week.

Ron Gilbert leads scorers with nine goals and 11 assists for 20 points, four more than teammate Jean Ratelle, who has four goals and 12 assists.

Official statistics released today, including games to Sunday, show Wayne Boddy of Peterborough Petes in third position, two ough Neal of Nelson Leclair and Dale Rolfe of Barrie Flyers Boddy has 12 points on seven goals and six assists, while Leclair has collected four goals and seven assists and Rolfe two goals and nine assists.

Jim Severn of St. Michael's College Majors, who has earned three shutouts, continues leading goaltender. He has an average of 1.5 goals a game. Len Broderick of Toronto Marlboros, only other netminder with a shutout, is second with a 2.17 average.

Kiniski Says He Did Not Push the Cop

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Gene Kiniski, 275-pound former Edmonton Eskimo football wrestler sort of Toronto, Monday pleaded not guilty to a charge of assaulting constable Robert Gilles during an Oct. 19 fracas.

Magistrate H. R. Howitt received judgment until Dec. 7.

Kiniski, 30, pointed out Fred Kiniski left the ring in the middle of the match to chase boys who had been throwing paper at him. He said he asked the wrestler to return to the ring and Kiniski swore at him and pushed him twice in the face.

Kiniski, 30, denied pushing the policeman. He said the officer grabbed him and he was just shaking free.

Controversy of The Cleats May Result in Rule Change

WINNIPEG (CP) — Football Commissioner Sydney Halter said Monday he does not expect the controversy over cleats to be revived before the Grey Cup game.

The controversy started when Winnipeg Blue Bombers used metal cleats on the frozen and snow-flurried gridiron at Edmonton in the first game of the best-of-three Western Interprovincial Football Union final. Bombers wrapped it up in two games 19-11 and 16-8.

Edmonton coach Eagle Keys protested their use. However, the Bombers had checked them with Halter in advance and when Andy Currie, Halter's western assistant, ruled them legal, his decision was not contested by Eskimos.

Halter, asked Monday if he had ever received any official protest or communication concerning the use of cleats, said: "None whatsoever" but added that at a Canadian Football League meeting in Toronto next week "there may be a suggestion that the rule in connection with cleats should be changed."

The rule says: "Metal cleats may be used provided that they come within the general specifications for cleats.

"To cleat, where it comes in contact with the ground, shall have a lesser end area than three-sixteenth square inch in no dimension less than three-sixteenth square inches."

Minor Hockey Notes

Red Wings, Bruins and Rangers picked up victories in the squirt section of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association, last night while the fourth game ended in a tie.

Black Hawks overcame a 2-0 deficit to tie the Barons 2-2. Eric Lane and Joe Lumsden scored for the Hawk. Gary Young and Wayne Williamson were the Baron marksmen.

Red Wings defeated the Browns 6-3 with Bruce LaRue and Harry Smith scoring two goals apiece. Paul Goodfellow and Paul Fickle had singletons. Larry Moore potted a pair for the Browns with Rick Johnston getting the other one.

Hickey Day fired three goals to spark Bruins to a 7-5 win over the Canadiens. Tom Hamilton, Jed Geyer, Larry Sarager and Alex Bradley scored one apiece. Canadien marksmen were Brian Milborne, Ronnie MacDonald, Doug Mason, Paul King and Bob Khuri.

Rangers took a close 3-2 victory over the Maple Leafs. Bill Buchenan, Melvin Wilson and Steven Hunter scored for Rangers. John Meens and Mark Hamilton replied for Leafs.

Durelle By K.O., Says Yvon 'an't See George Doing It

TORONTO (CP) — Yvon Durelle the scarred veteran who once came within a couple of seconds of a world boxing crown, still has the Canadian heavyweight championship to fight from tough young George Chuvalo.

The two meet at Maple Leaf Gardens in what most followers of the fight game believe will be a slugfest that won't go the scheduled 12 rounds.

Durelle, the fisherman from Bale St. Anne, N.B., is favoured at 7 to 5 over the Toronto hunky who sported high hopes in his early outings but flopped when he got his first big chance.

Both are hard - fisted belters who believe the best defence is a stiff and stand at the theory that boxing is an art.

DURELLE EXPERIENCED

Aside from his weight of experience, a factor the odds-makers view in Durelle's favor is the extra pounds he'll be allowed to carry around for the first time. The scrappy fisherman holds the Canada and British Empire light heavyweight but has grown tired of sweating down to the 175-pound limit.

He and his supporters say he won't help but be stronger at the 187 pounds he'll weigh tonight. Chuvalo, a big-boned type, has 10 pounds well distributed over a frame that towers half an inch over the star.

Durelle, 30, has been an off-and-on fighter. He drew with Roy Anthony in Detroit in 1954 the crowd felt he had won, and he was stopped by Anthony in two rounds in a return bout.

He met Archie Moore twice for a world light - heavyweight championship and was knocked out both times. The first time, in December, 1958, he had Moore down three times in the first round. The following July old Archi didn't fool around and left Yvon cold as a clam in the fourth.

ZOMBIED PARKER

Chuvalo, 22, won the Canadian title Sept. 15, 1958, after it had been vacant more than a year through the retirement of Earl Walls. He battered big but awkward Charles J. Parker of Harlem into unconsciousness in the first round.

The following month he made his first appearance in a Madison Square Garden main event. Whether because he was staggered struck or befuddled, he showed little except for a late flurry in losing a decision to Pat McMurtry.

Durelle's adventures have left him No. 4 among the world's light heavies. Should he best Chuvalo, the Canadian Boxing Federation says he can keep his 175-pound crown unless he decides not to fight in that division any more or refuses a valid challenge. On the Empire championship, the CBF will follow the ruling of British authorities.

The Record book shows Durelle has lost only 22 and drawn two of 159 bouts. Chuvalo is 11-3-1 for his 15 professional scraps.

Thought Beer Was 'Legal' at Football Games

OTTAWA (CP)—Four football fans were fined Monday in magistrate's court and four more were remanded until Nov. 23 for pleas on charges of disorderly actions during Saturday's game between Ottawa Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Five of the fans were for breach of the liquor control act; two for fighting and one for use of obscene language.

One defendant, fined $15, said it never entered his head that drinking was illegal at football games. He brought a bag full of beer pints from Hull, Que., and was starting to down the first when police interrupted.

Cowpokes of the TV Range Unhappy About Salaries

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The whole town's talking about the Burbank brutality.

Never have so many actors been so unhappy at the Warner Brothers television production here. Here is the scorecard on the series stars:

Wayde Preston (Colt .45) has walked off the lot and gone into the airplane business, complaining that his contract was "inequitable as a lynching party."

Ed Byrnes (77 Sunset Strip) refused to report for work until he got a raise. He gets $400 weekly, says he takes home only $284.

James Garner (Maverick) and Clint Walker (Cheyenne) are bitter about their contracts. Says Garner: "I feel like a slim Jim meat hanging there; every once in a while they cut off a piece." Walker (Lawman) is trying to get a new contract.

William T. Orr, television executive producer for Warner Brothers and himself once an actor, said:

"Warner Brothers contracts have made it possible for many players to develop from complete unknowns to stars. These contracts, signed in good faith by both parties, have opened the doors to opportunity and advancement. . . .

"The studio has every rightful reason to expect players to respect their contractual obligations.

"Look for yourself and see what some of these unhappy people were doing before they became associated with Warner Brothers. Their plaint reminds me of the story of an actor complaining that there must be an easier way to make a living. An office boy overhearing spoke up and said: 'There are a lot of easier ways to make a living—but not at the salary you're getting.' END ADV FOR NOV. 17 PMs

Brawl Marks Marlies Win Over Petes

TORONTO (CP) — Seventy-two minutes in penalties were handed out Monday night as Toronto Marlboros battled their way into a three-team deadlock for first place with a 7-5 victory over Peterborough Petes in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game.

Centre Gaston Brassard sparked Marlboros with three goals and rookie Tom Stewart scored two. Jack Martin and Rickie Hay fired singles.

Rookie Garry Monk scored twice for Peterborough, while defencemen Garry Roberts and Barclay Plager and forward Dick Dawson added one each.

A fourth-period developed after the game had been completed when Plager took a poke at Toronto's Don Curry. The two fell to the ice fighting. Peterborough forward Wayne Boddy and Duke Bob Sheffield, who had been dissuading their own private mailer, joined in.

Then players from both teams piled on, shoving and pushing with their sticks in the air. The quick thinking of Peterborough coach Scotty Bowman cut short the ruckus when he ordered his players to the dressing room.

Boddy, Plager, Curry and Sheffield were given identical minor conduct penalties, which carry automatic $10 league fines.

It was the only game of the night. Marlboros are tied with Peterborough and Toronto in Mitchell's Majors with 10 points.

Guelph Biltmores are one point ahead of Barrie Flyers with nine points while Hamilton Tiger-Cubs hold a one-point edge over the last-place St. Catharines Tee-Pees.

Easy to Tell Characters Of Horse Operas Today

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Once it was easy to tell the heroes from the villains in the television westerns: The white hats were the good guys and the black hats were the bad guys. Good old Hopalong Cassidy was the exception.

This simple method of establishing character in television horse operas has long since been the dust.

But shortcuts to characterization are still in use, so often that viewers scarcely notice them. Here are some of the most-used clues:

Liquor cabinet with whisky in decanters in foreground, grand piano in background—these people are rich.

Girl in an evening gown or cocktail dress, made of shiny material—this woman has class.

Woman wearing simple frock, single string of pearls and glasses —a lady.

Man wearing sleeveless sweater, smoking pipe, sitting in front of open fire—a happy husband.

Unshaven man—he has a hangover, has been shot and carefully wounded so that his way in the desert.

Girl in dress with Peter Pan collar preparing coffee in an expensively furnished and beautifully decorated apartment — a secretary living in the usual working girl's one-room flat.

CBS must have scouted far and wide to find a personality who, it hopes, will creep into the hearts of morning TV watchers as did Arthur Godfrey. Obviously they think they have found in Red Rowe, who made his network debut at 10 a.m. Monday. Rowe not only is reported to have red hair, but plays a guitar and sings agreeably, talks soothingly, informally, and with mild humor.

He comes to us with a bunch of regulars—a girl singer, a boy singer and a small orchestra. There is a lot of music and the half-hour is fractured constantly by commercials (Red isn't doing his own selling yet). Only time can tell whether the network has found the right man to fill some important shoes.

Recommended tonight:

The Big Time, NBC, 9:30-10:30 EST—a salute of vaudeville and its loud nostalgia, with George Burns, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel as well as today's Zoley Parks and the Kingston Trio.

Red Skelton Show, CBS, 9:30—with Peter Lorre and Mercedes McCambridge.

Garry Moore Show, CBS, 10-11—with Gene Barry, Gretchen Wyler, and the Marquis family of chimpanzees.

AT THE PARK — Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon, disguised as girls, carry Marilyn Monroe. They are all starred in Billy Wilder's "Some Like It Hot", now showing at the Park Theatre. Other well known stars, such as George Raft and Joe E. Brown are also featured. The added comedy feature, a first Belleville showing is "Lucky Jim", starring Ian Cardichael.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Wednesday, November 15

General Tendencies: The very ...ity part of the day is fine for ...hatever has to do with a better ...ppe... of your charm and well-...ing and for getting these arti...les and showing others how they ...an aid you in entertainment re...eative matters. Then the P.M. ...ands you pretty well disgusted ...ith most everyone about, but ...se tact in all dealings or you ...ay lose a valuable ally, contact ...ddrs (March 21 to April 19) — ...e certain you are with a clever ...ociates in A.M. to work out ...ore modern methods to make ...our mutual enterprises more op...erative and successful. Also with ...egard to social matters. Later, ...hich diplomatically what you ...ave started.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20)— ...M. put abode in better order ...uickly, or your office, studio ...r garden about you is a ...orrid and bad today. P.M. see ...hat you can come to better ...rstanding with others, persons ...ho affect your well-being.

Gem (May 21 to June 21) — ...uring earliest spare moments, ...onfer with the right people ...oncerning how to make future ...ighter and happier. Later, get ...greements working nicely by ...etting the example yourself. ...ood ethics and God-fearing ways ...ork wonders.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) Among other important things, getting house in order should be one of the first. Also, increase harmony between members of family. Then work methodically on whatever requires your immediate attention. Labor rolsered and diligently.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) — You will receive a letter or visit in early A.M. that will immediately help pick up your spirits. Be as gracious in turn. Then your work will become light and easy and you can accomplish a very great deal. Be a happy loo for a change.

Virgo (Aug. 2 2to Sept. 22) — Here is an unusual A.M. when others are very eager to assist you with your duties, especially around the home. But later you must show definite affection to correct ones, without my favoriti... him, or feelings will be hurt.

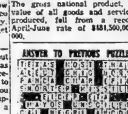
Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) — Clever compade gives fine solu... ers on how to get more backing from official in A.M. Follow advice in whatever sphere you are most interested. P.M. conclude your chores efficiently.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 22) — Be sure you confer with that diplomatic and clever bigwig in A.M. who can give you the right ideas to help you get up the ladder of success. Then begin some serious research or study along lines suggested. P.M. retire early.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) —You are lucky today to meet an interesting and informed individual who gives fine ideas to help you succeed. Then get busy taking steps to increase abundance, but do so cleverly and inexpensively. Be enthused.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)— Confer with your advisor today since you are interested in knowing what your true position is with an associate or a competitor. P.M. let your activities be such that you increase harmony and profits instead of the opposite.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)— Since labor is so vital a part in your life today you are lucky to have an intelligent expert show you how to earn more with no greater expenditure of energy. Continue to work in P.M. to get things smiling nicely.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — A.M. concentrate on how to put your ideas in best operation as well as get social life more nicely rounded out. P.M. be off to a jolly time but take care you keep that purse fairly well zipped. Happy weekend for a change.

If your child is born today . . The dear child born today is the type who will develop a dual personality if you do not early give the benefit of much training using philosophical and religious lines as well as the practical. Then the childhood can be very happy and well-rounded and upon reaching majority there will be a great desire to do and accomplish. A fine chart for leadership and big business whether male or female.

GNP FALLS FAR

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government disclosed Sunday that the steel strike held national output to an annual rate of $168,500,000,000 in the July-September quarter. This was a sharper drop than was estimated a month ago. The gross national product, or value of all goods and services produced, fell from a record April-June rate of $181,500,000,000.

Rate Cooper Favorite Over Joe Erskine

LONDON (AP)—Henry Cooper, fifth-ranking heavyweight contender, was rated a 5-to-4 favorite Monday to retain his British Empire and British heavy titles against Joe Erskine in their 15-rounder tonight.

Erskine is ranked seventh among world contenders.

This will be Cooper's second defence of the twin titles he won last Jan. 13 from Brian London. Bookmakers an impressive victory can't help him in line for a chance at meeting Ingemar Johansson.

Both Erskine and Cooper have fought Johansson. Cooper was knocked out in five rounds, Erskine in 13 rounds.

FORMER BOXER DIES

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Curtis E. (Kid) McDonald, a former welterweight boxing champion in Canada, died Sunday night at his home here at the age of 69. McDonald, 56, had been active in youth work here for many years.

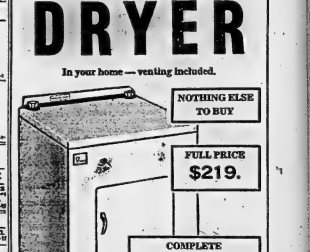
Smith, Stratton Lead American



NEW YORK (AP) — Teammates Floyd Smith and Art Stratton are 1-2 in the American Hockey League scoring race after a couple of sports that helped bolt Springfield Indians into first place.

Smith jumped to a five-point lead—largest of the season—with eight points last week for a total of 26. Stratton picked up seven points for a 23-point total, one more than rookie Stan Ballard of Providence.

Smith is tied with Buffalo's Larry Wilson for the goals lead with 11. Stratton is tops with 18 assists, according to official statistics released today.

Hershey's Bobby Perreault leads the goalies with a 2.41 goals against average and three shutouts.

1,800,000 Immigrants Have Arrived in Canada Since End of Second War

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Since the end of the Second World War nearly 1,800,000 immigrants have arrived in Canada, enough to populate a city the size of Montreal.

Native - born Canadians frequently ponder the effect of this large - scale movement of newcomers on Canada's economy.

Figures provided by the immigration department show that immigrants, especially in the post-war period, have established new businesses creating jobs, increased consumption of consumer goods and brought needed capital to this country.

BUILDERS OF CANADA

Immigration Minister Fairclough said in an interview that the story of immigration is the story of Canada. Today's immigrants are worthy successors of yesterday's pioneers.

"Immigration has built Canada," Mrs. Fairclough said. "Immigrants will continue to be needed to make possible further Canadian development."

Early immigrants mainly were farmers and a large percentage of them helped open the West. Today's immigrants include a large proportion of professional, skilled and semi-skilled workers needed to plug gaps in Canada's technological development.

Mrs. Fairclough said critics of immigration frequently state that immigrants take work from native - born Canadians. Both she and officials of her department dispute this claim mainly on grounds that only a relatively small proportion of immigrants seek employment on the open labor market.

Of the 124,851 immigrants who arrived in 1958, a total of 63,100 were workers. But the department says that only 13,000 of them could be classified as workers who competed for jobs.

FILLED ACTUAL NEED

Mrs. Fairclough said many of the 13,000 who sought jobs on the open labor market had skills and training and their emigration filled an actual need. This was especially true in remote areas where settled Canadians refuse to go.

She said that in 1958 the immigration department had little difficulty in finding jobs, for this type of newcomer.

Immigrants in the 1950-58 period established 2,338 small businesses and spent nearly $28,602,500 doing so. These businesses employ nearly 9,000 permanent Canadians and other immigrants.

More than half of these businesses were established in 1958. Many newcomers lacked capital and had to save for years to acquire funds to strike out on their own.

The department expects that many businesses will be established again this year by thrifty immigrants.

New Canadians in 1950 - 58 started businesses in eight provinces—803 in Ontario, 222 in British Columbia, 133 in Quebec, seven in Nova Scotia, two in New Brunswick, 40 in Manitoba, 22 in Saskatchewan and 72 in Alberta.

MANY BUY FARMS

Between 1950 and the end of last year newcomers bought 3,879 farms and rented 849 others. The overall price of these properties was $43,617,500 and down payments totalled $11,226,900.

In 1958 alone immigrants bought 786 farms, in every province except Newfoundland. They made a total down payment of $2,268,500 on an over-all investment of $10,063,900.

The contribution of immigrants as consumers has been enormous.

The department estimates that in the 1951-58 period they established 248,000 households. They bought nearly 173,000 electric or gas ranges, more than 195,000 refrigerators, 128,600 washing machines, 72,000 vacuum cleaners, 307,000 radios and 81,000 automobiles.

Immigrants have made a substantial contribution to Canada's over-all wealth in another field.

From 1946 until the end of 1958 they brought to Canada an estimated $800,000 in cash and securities and $300,000,000 in settlers' effects. In 1957 alone they paid about $190,000,000 in direct taxes and saved about $146,000,000.

Chairman of Civil Service Commission, Sam Hughes, Has Penchant for Reading

OTTAWA (CP)—If there's one thing Sam Hughes hasn't time for, it's wasting time.

For example, he describes himself as a "voracious reader." But his taste leans heavily toward history.

"I rarely read fiction," the 63,000-a-year chairman of the Civil Service Commission said in an interview. "It takes too much time for too little reward."

At 66, Samuel H. S. (Sam) Hughes can already look back on a life of rewarding experiences. He has been teacher, lawyer, administrator, military officer and judge—not to mention coxswain of a rowing eight at Oxford University.

RESIGNED JUDGE

This unassuming man with the dark-rimmed glasses and serious mien left a judgeship in the Ontario Supreme Court last July to take on his present job as a sort of personnel chief of the largest single collection of personnel in the country.

But the work of Chairman Hughes and the commission is more complicated, and more independent, than that of the ordinary personnel administrator.

The job includes deciding on who is hire to work for the federal government, what jobs are necessary and which can be eliminated, pay rates and ratios, organization of government departments, personnel transfers, hours of work and anything else affecting government employees.

Unlike a corporation's personnel section, the commission operates under legislation making it responsible only to Parliament for its hiring and firing policies.

VITAL SERVICE

Civil servants, Mr. Hughes emphasizes, are important people—all 150,000 of them.

"I don't know how the country would run without them," he said. "They perform vital functions for the people of Canada."

Good character, integrity and independence in civil servants were essential, and these were qualities widely recognized as being earmarks of Canada's civil service.

But he is not satisfied with the image he believes the average Canadian has of Canada's civil service.

"The average man thinks of the civil service as a safe haven for people who lack enterprise, initiative and energy. But it is not a place where people can mark time."

MILITARY FAMILY

Born in 1911 in Victoria, B.C., Mr. Hughes was off to England within a year His father, Maj.-Gen. Garnet Hughes, commanded the 5th Canadian Division during the First World War and took his family overseas with him. At the outbreak of the war, his grandfather, Sir Sam Hughes, was minister of national defence in the Borden Conservative government.

After the war his father, a civil engineer, stayed on in Britain to go into railway building and it wasn't until after his mother's death that he returned with his father to Canada in 1926.

It was while studying at the University of Toronto and Oxford that Mr. Hughes developed powers in rowing. It's his favorite sport, although he's got "a good average spectator interest" in hockey, football and other sports.

He was coxswain of a Toronto eight for two years. He graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in 1934 and went to Balliol College, Oxford, on a Massey fellowship to take his master's degree. There he was coxswain of the Balliol eight.

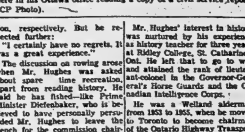
He didn't mention how his crew succeeded until he was asked. Then he answered: "Almost invariably we won."

LOSING CANDIDATE

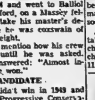
But he didn't win in 1949 and 1950 as a Progressive Conservative candidate for the federal constituency of Welland, Ont., in a general election and a by-election, respectively. But he reflected further:

"I certainly have no regrets. It was a great experience."

The discussion on rowing arose when Mr. Hughes was asked about spare time recreation apart from reading history. He said he has fished—like Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who is believed to have personally persuaded Mr. Hughes to leave the bench for the commission chairmanship. But, he said, "I'd sooner row the boat than fish."



At present, he said, he doesn't take any more exercise "than my children compel me to do." His children are Lynn, 13, and Sam, 11.



Mr. Hughes' interest in history was nurtured by his experience as history teacher for three years at Ridley College, St. Catharines, Ont. He left that to go to war and attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Governor-General's Horse Guards and the Canadian Intelligence Corps.

He was a Welland alderman from 1953 to 1955, when he moved up to Toronto to become chairman of the Ontario Highway Transport Board, which he left in 1958 for the Ontario Supreme Court.

IVANHOE

Veterans Hold Mem. Service

IVANHOE — Huntingdon township veterans held a memorial service in Bethesda United Church on Sunday in honor of the dead of the World Wars. A number of members of Legion branch 363 Madoc and the Ladies Auxiliary to 363, were in attendance.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Harold Stobbert, who chose for his text Rev. 2:11 "Run ye in and fro through the streets of Jerusalem and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it."

All those who assisted the minister in the service had served in either of the two wars.

Reg Haggerty, representing the veterans, gave a short address during which he read the names of those who paid the supreme sacrifice, followed by prayer. The Last Post and Reveille were sounded by a member of Madoc Legion.

Special music, under the direction of Mrs. Reg Haggerty, included: Duet, "Memorial Day," by Elsie Barnard and Sharon Wickwood; Bethesda and Beulah united choirs, "A Song of Thanksgiving" and "Nearer, My God Our Help In Ages Past"; "O Valiant Hearts" and "Abide With Me."

SEARCH PROVES FUTILE

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP with searchers and a helicopter searched student buildings at the University of British Columbia without finding any trace of some $40,000 in art stolen last week-end from the university art gallery. RCMP say they now are convinced the theft was the work of professional art thieves. Insurance adjusters have offered a cash reward of up to $4,000 for leads in the case.

Russia Building Subs Designed To Fire Missiles

One Plant Turns Out 250 H-Rockets in Year

WASHINGTON (CP)—Admiral Jerauld Wright, NATO's Atlantic commander, said today he has conclusive evidence that Russia is building submarines carrying intercontinental missiles and is showing increasing interest in the east coasts of Canada and the United States.

"We have conclusive evidence that the Soviets are constructing ballistic missile submarines and will be able to launch via the seas a significant threat against NATO within a year, with a serious threat developing by 1963," Admiral Wright told a NATO parliamentarian conference.

"We have conclusive evidence that they are showing an increased interest in the east coast of North America, a key area and an industrial complex of the first importance not only to America, but to our NATO alliance."

"DRASTIC MEASURES"

Because of this Soviet interest, North Atlantic sea defences had taken on "drastically different" importance in addition to radar warning forces continuously on the alert off the coasts, "we are taking drastic measures to develop and improve our Atlantic anti-submarine defences."

"Together with Canada, we have dollenised an anti-submarine warfare defensive sea study and placed all under a specific ally designated commander. The area is divided into seven sectors, each with a headquarters for controlling all anti-submarine warfare operations and forces in that sector."

"This chain of areas extends from Newfoundland to the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico."

LACK HITTING POWER

Wright observed, however, that because of a lack of money, NATO Atlantic forces lack full hitting power.

"The economic policies of our NATO nations on defense expenditures presently permit only token coverage of the sea area we have developed the technique, applicable to both sides of the Atlantic and are able to extend our coverage if and when the forces are made available."

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev says one Soviet factory alone has turned out 250 rockets with hydrogen warheads in one year—enough to "raze all our potential enemies off the face of the earth."

"You can well imagine that if this lethal weapon is exploded over some country there will be nothing left there at all," Khrushchev told a meeting of Soviet journalists. But he said the Soviet government is "ready to sink all this in the sea in the interests of ensuring peace on earth . . . if other countries will follow our example."

Khrushchev's speech was made Friday, but the text was not released until Tuesday night.

The Russian leader said he was making public the rocket production figures "in order to put the lie to the announcement that Russia was lagging in intercontinental ballistic missiles. He did not indicate whether this plant referred to was producing all of Russia's nuclear-headed rockets.

"NO CAUSE FOR ALARMISM"

"Some in the West claim that the Soviet Union has changed its foreign policy drastically. It has come easier to talk with us," Khrushchev said. "This is wrong, of course. Communists we were born, Communists we live—and will not die but continue to march onward as Communists."

Khrushchev said a sincere desire for peace, not any military, economic or political weakness, prompted the proposal for total disarmament he presented to the United Nations during his American visit. He said he was prepared to "sign immediately" a disarmament agreement during that visit.

"I believe that the president (Eisenhower) also wants this, but unfortunately the time for it became there are still strong quarters in the United States opposing disarmament."

He listed New York's Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller among those who would "turn back the pointer of the barometer which is tending towards the lessening of international tension."

Winnie Better, Able to Receive Several Callers

LONDON (CP) — Sir Winston Churchill today recovered from a "slight bellyache" and received several callers at his London home.

This afternoon a spokesman at the elder statesman's home said: "Sir Winston is much better. There will be no further information at present." He declined to make the picture of Churchill's illness.

Workmen on the road outside Churchill's home refrained from using their pneumatic drills for fear of disturbing him but said they were told to go ahead.

Churchill was forced to cancel plans Tuesday night to visit with visiting Chancellor Adenauer and also had to decline an invitation to a dinner given for the West German leader by Prime Minister Macmillan.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: It was a cold night across Ontario. Overnight temperatures ranged from 10-15 degrees above zero in Southern Ontario to a few degrees below zero in the north.

A disturbance rapidly moving through Manitoba is bringing a southern flow of milder air over the province which will bring moderating temperatures to the province today. This weather pattern will cross into Ontario during the day and is expected to move into Quebec early Thursday morning.

CANADIANS GOOD CREDIT RISKS MEETING TOLD

Less Than One PC 30 Days in Arrears

TORONTO (CP) — Here is a picture of the average Canadian as given by those who grant him credit:

He is a good manager of his own affairs; he is well able to look after obligations which he takes on; and he shows little tendency to remain himself beyond his ability to pay.

The picture comes from officials of the Personal Council of Sales-Finance Companies, as given at a press conference following the organization's annual meeting here Monday and Tuesday.

Backing up their view, they say that less than one per cent of the hundreds of sales finance companies is more than 30 days in arrears. Even in instances of long strikes the record is good.

Sales finance companies finance sales made on credit, both in the retail and wholesale fields. In effect, they take over the account.

RISING PERCENTAGE

In the year ending Sept. 30 sales finance companies in Canada extended $1,250,000,000 worth of wholesale financing of new motor vehicles.

In the retail field they granted a total of $1,200,000,000 of which $666,000,000 was for automobiles; $142,000,000 for trucks, buses and commercial trailers; $192,000,000 for industrial and commercial equipment, and $200,000,000 for household appliances and other types of durable goods.

At Sept. 30 the total amount of their outstanding credit was $1,135,000,000 of which—assuming the current good payment record—70 per cent will have been paid off within 12 months; 86 per cent within 18 months; 93 per cent within 24 months.

The average terms for which new cars and trucks are now made or vehicles 25 months; used motor vehicles 18 months; industrial equipment 27 months; other durable goods 25 months.

Stop Sale of War Surplus Rifles Described as Ideal Holdup Weapons

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has acted to remove from public sale a war surplus rifle which police consider a menace to society.

The weapon—a .22-calibre gun specially designed for use by airborne forces down in wild country—has been declared surplus by War Assets Disposal Corporation.

Justice Minister Fulton said Tuesday night that on instructions from the government—issued last month—the corporation stopped selling the gun to merchants.

The order came too late, however, to prevent about 3,500 of the compact, 14-inch-barrel guns from reaching salesmen, mainly in Ontario. Of these some 700 had been recovered and the government was attempting to recover as many as possible of the remainder.

Police say the gun would be dangerous in the hands of a criminal. About 20,000 had been declared surplus.

Reg. Axcell, Ottawa city police chief, said last week the gun could quickly be converted and is too well suited as a holdup weapon to be sold generally. Toronto, Montreal and Quebec provincial police have expressed similar views.

Chief Axcell said it could be fitted with a telescope sight and silencer for use as an assassination weapon.

"Such a weapon as this, in the hands of persons with criminal intent, would make them extremely dangerous," he added.

Mr. Fulton said that after he heard of the planned release of 20,000 of the weapons, he conferred with police officers. Then he asked Defence Production Minister O'Hurley to stop the movement of the guns to market.

Manned Interceptor Needed Soon to Replace CF-100

OTTAWA (CP)—Gen. Lawrence Kuler, chief of North American Air Defence Commander, says now it is the time for the Canadian government to plan the replacement of the RCAF's CF-100 jet fighter with another interceptor.

He told a press conference Tuesday that a replacement is needed "at an early date" for the subsonic CF-100 which would be "obsolete in a few years."

He said discussion of the nine RCAF interceptor squadrons in Canada—they now are equipped with the CF-100—would be a "secret."

He is confident, he said, that both the Canadian and U.S. governments are discussing replacements for obsolescent planes.

He indicated he feels Canadian interceptors should be armed with nuclear weapons, as American interceptors are.

The modern, normal combat weapon is the guided missile, he said. "I don't know of any U.S. combat aircraft made in the last four years which is not capable of carrying atomic weapons."

Gen. Kuler, accompanied by his deputy, RCAF Air Marshal Roy Slemon, conferred Tuesday with Defence Minister Pearkes and the chiefs of staff. They left Tuesday night by RCAF Comet jet fighter for Washington where they were to meet today with U.S. Defence Secretary Neil McElroy and Gen. Nathan Twining, chairman of the U.S. chiefs of staff.

Asked whether he had discussed with Mr. Pearkes a replacement for the CF-100, Gen. Kuler said this was for the government to say.

Officials have said the government's likely course is to dismantle the nine squadrons progressively during the next two to three years and rely for air defence on the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile bases to be built at North Bay, Ont., and Montlaurier, Que., by late 1961.

UN Endorses Canada's Plan To Study Atomic Radiation

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) — Canada's main "initiative" at the United Nations ended in success Tuesday as the General Assembly voted unanimously for a Canadian plan to study and Canadian External Affairs Minister Howard Green said this reflected the concern felt by everyone in the world about the risk of mankind in the atomic age.

The show-of-hands vote was 78 for, none against and no abstentions—four delegations being absent, not an unusual occurrence in the Assembly. President Victor A. Belaunde of Peru said that made it unanimous.

The plan calls on the Soviet Union, Britain and France, all open to favor of increasing, although none had been asked to be co-sponsors in view of Canada's aim to keep the issue from becoming entangled in cold war politics.

Communist Czechoslovakia, one of the 11 co-sponsors, said Russia emphasized the need of ending nuclear tests, and Green spoke in similar vein when he said:

". . . We are convinced of the need to reach agreement on the effective international control of tests, of all nuclear weapons test explosions. We have given suggestions to this end and in the general field of disarmament will be glad to hear the views of others on these items . . . Canadian "initiative" had won Eastern support for the plan in recent years, and it was considered significant in that it touched on disarmament.

Australian Ambassador J. Plimsoll said he wanted to extend "tribute to the Canadian delegation and Mr. Green especially for the way they prepared this item."

The resolution came up during debate on a progress report of the UN scientific committee on the effects of atomic radiation, whose 15 members include Canada.

The report cites the need for "more and better information" where specific problems related to radiation hazards arise in any practical application, and natural sources, as well as for further genetic and biological studies.

Number of Jobs Drops at Slower Rate Than Usual

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian unemployment moved up gradually during October, while employment dropped more slowly than the seasonal normal.

The government reported today that at Oct. 17 persons without jobs and looking for work had increased 18.3 per cent in October, compared to 227,000 and employment had dropped by 23,000 to 6,653,000.

All of the decline in employment came in farm jobs, where there was a drop of 32,000, while those at work in non-farm industry increased by 27,000.

The unemployment figure was considerably higher than it was earlier, a period when Canada has always had a seasonal heavy unemployment that reaches a peak of 538,000 in January. Those out of work in October, 1958, numbered 313,000.

EMPLOYMENT AT LAYOFF

Besides those without jobs for October, the bureau of statistics which estimated the labor force survey figures — listed 14,000 on temporary layoff in October, against 12,000 in September and 16,000 a year earlier.

Unemployment in Jobs in October showed a sizeable jump over the previous month, but a year ago there were 8,384,000 persons at work, 180,000 less than this year.

In the meantime, the labor force—those available for jobs—had risen to 8,290,000 from 8,177,000.

Besides those listed as unemployed, the government made public totals of those registered for work with National Employment Service, showing that at Oct. 15 there were 270,768 registrations compared with 258,591 in September and 342,302 in October of last year.

On the employment side, a government statement accompanying the figures, described the drop in jobs as "less than seasonal."

The wrist radios operate over a radius of 26 miles and can be carried in a woman's handbag or a man's pocket.

Public Interest Should Be Guide In Combine Laws

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Chamber of Commerce, in a brief made public today, recommends that public interest be the criterion in any legislation regarding business or the field of business operation.

The brief was submitted to Justice Minister Fulton, who invited the chamber to submit its views to a bill to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code.

THE GROUND RULES

The council expressed belief that preservation of the competitive economy can be accomplished by a central authority of ground rules. These would embrace rules by which the individual business man seeks to govern himself and by which the public can judge which society as a whole seeks to govern business practices.

The brief said new businesses are constantly starting and progressing and existing ones formerly available. Existing businesses were sometimes engaged in a line for which there was but restricted demand.

Until someone was prepared to risk investment and talent to become a competitor, "such businesses may be considered monopolies, but this is not to say they should be considered as bad practice. . . ."

ANTI-COMMUNIST SLATE WINNER IN UNION VOTING

Record Turnout Of Voters at Sudbury

SUDBURY (CP)—Miner Don Gillis today retained control of the Steelworkers union local, defeating an old-guard faction seeking to win back Local 598 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.).

But his winning edge, which was 6,000 to 5,000 last March, was trimmed by Nels Thibault, who tackled Gillis after stepping down as national president of the Red-tinged international Union.

Final unofficial returns from Tuesday's voting by nickel industry workers gave Gillis more than 7,000 votes against nearly 6,000 for Thibault. All on Gillis' Steelabor slate were elected.

Election officials said a record 13,255 members voted in Tuesday's election, ending out in the wake of a vigorous campaign. The heavy vote had pushed the Gillis victory against Thibault, 43, and Gillis' Steelabor slate high in Mine-Mill leadership echelons.

The apparent clincher came with Gillis' pledge to a Monday-strike polling station, traditionally a stronghold of supporters of the national union. Gillis captured it with a personal vote of 1,000 against 200.

Previous elections in the local's 23-year history have been close, heavy election turnout favors opponents of the so-called anti-communist clause which banned the local's affairs for some years.

LIVELY CAMPAIGN

It was a free-swinging campaign—as bitter as any in Canadian labor history although no precedent for Local 598—climaxing in a strict code to make Tuesday's voting free of any interference. But violence was narrowly avoided when it had reached traditional proportions earlier in the unions' history.

Police protection was given in collecting ballot boxes from 36 polling stations in Sudbury's nickel industry. Voters had their hands stamped with ink before they went to the polls to prevent attempts to cast ballots more than once.

Ballot counting was slowed by the checking of names and signatures against a master list.

The all-a miner and district reeve, rode to victory last March.

Offering Prizes For Slogan to Tell Difference

LONDON (Reuters) — So many people complained to the British Broadcasting Corporation that the Indonesian embassy here has announced a competition to find a slogan or picture illustrating the BBC's difference.

Three winning competitors between the ages of 14 and 18 will receive wrist watches and transistor radio and television sets. They will be presented at the embassy on Dominican Republic Day, Feb. 27.

Under the rule, the BBC said it is designed to promote friendly exchanges by allowing a station to broadcast programs featuring visiting musicians or players, and have the program counted as Canadian.

But the BBC would keep a close watch to see that this "spirit and intent" are observed and that the rule does not "displace the use of Canadian performers."

As for news broadcasts and commentaries, all of them will be counted as Canadian regardless of sources of information or material.

The Canadian content classification also will be given to all broadcasts of events occurring outside Canada and in which Canadians are participating, and, in the event is of general interest in Canada—even if Canadians are not taking part.

The board said this is designed to provide for such events as Canada's world series, an address by the president of the United States, or a meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

FILMED CONTENT

For the purposes of the Canadian content classification, films made in Canada, commonwealth countries and French-speaking countries will be considered as Canadian content.

However, no station may use for this purpose more than one-third its total programming time in any broadcasting week or more than one-quarter for French language programs.

The board's regulations concerning the preparation and filing of program logs, political broadcasts, advertising content and advertising general introductories, chain broadcasting and other regulations are direct copies of the radio regulations.

Until now, TV stations have operated under radio regulations set by the board earlier this year.

In a statement announcing the regulations, the board said:

"Television stations in this operation will have until April 1, 1961, to build up a prospectus of programs of Canadian content to 45 per cent, and a further year in which to increase the Canadian content to 55 per cent.

"For new stations licensed and coming into operation between now and April 1, 1961, will be required to show a progressive increase in Canadian content in keeping to reach 55 per cent by that date."

Toothache Reason He Signed Statements Accused Asserts

Donald Dion, 22, of Tweed, stood in the dock of County Court here yesterday and denied statements he gave police in which he admitted setting fire to two cars to avoid finance payments.

The accused claimed he signed the statements only because he had a toothache and wanted to get out of the Whitby police station in which they were made.

"I would have signed anything to get out of there," he said. "The police officer (to whom he gave the statements) offered to take me out to a restaurant for something to eat if I signed."

FACES THREE CHARGES

Dion is being tried before a judge and jury on two counts of arson arising from the burning of two cars he owned in 1957 and 1958, and on one charge of public mischief.

Ron Way, a car salesman from Tweed, said Dion had bought a 1957 car from him in Dec. 1958. Early in 1957 he brought the car back to Mr. Way's garage to be repaired. There was sugar in the engine.

"Later he showed me a threatening note he had received," said Mr. Way.

A phoned Tweed Chief of Police Walter Higgins and told him about the note," said Mr. Way.

The accused testified he had found the note on the wheel shield of his father's car.

The 1957 car was totally destroyed by fire in April 1957. Chief Higgins said he had investigated the fire and at the time asked Dion if he could think of anyone who might set fire to the car.

The chief said Dion had given him a list which included the name of a former chief of police in Tweed. Mr. Higgins said he checked the list but found no suspects among the names.

He said the accused gave him a similar list when another car owned by Dion was destroyed by fire in 1958. Again all were cleared of suspicion.

INSURANCE PAID

In both fires, Dion's insurance company paid off the finance companies to whom Dion owed money for the time payments.

Carlo Fire Marshal's Office who are Fire Marshal's Office who had investigated the fires said in both cases the fires had been purposely set.

Inspector Harold Graham of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Provincial Police in Toronto and he and Chief Higgins interviewed the accused in Whitby.

He told the accused a report from the crime laboratory in Toronto stated there was the writer of the threatening note he had given him if he had anything to say.

Dion then told Insp. Graham and Chief Higgins that he had put sugar in the tank of his car but didn't burn the car.

Later the same night, he made another statement in which he stated he had burned the cars because he was not getting ahead with the car payments.

When Dion took the stand, however, he denied the statements and said he had only signed them because his teeth were causing him pain and he had not had anything to eat for several hours.

KEPT BUGGING ME

"The police officers kept bugging me," he told the court. "I was feeling really bad."

An official of the Seaboard Finance Company said when the accused had contracted to buy the two cars installed Dion was behind on payments.

Dion's father claimed that at the time of the fires — both of which occurred in the backyard of the accused's home — there was sitting inside with his family during the time immediately preceding each fire.

The trial continues today.

Postage Stamps To Be Available In Packages

The advance sale of postage stamps in handy one-dollar packages, inaugurating as a special service to the public by the Post Office during the last Christmas season on a trial basis, is being continued and expanded this year, it was announced today by the Postmaster General, the Honorable William Hamilton.

The Postmaster General said that the use of the pre-packaged stamps was part of a campaign to help postal patrons and to ease the pressure at stamp counters in crowded post office lobbies during the Christmas rush. He said that experience in 1958 showed that advanced pre-packaged stamp sales were convenient for small Christmas purchases of the public and the Post Office, that they resulted in a saving of time for the buyers and in reduction of congestion at post office lobbies.

In announcing the "package deal," the Postmaster General pointed out that Canadian mail volume jumps to some 500 per cent of normal during the Christmas rush period, and that frequently postage has had to be taken to avoid inconvenience to patrons and to maintain efficient service during this peak period. He urged all Canadians to do their Christmas mailing early—and to buy stamps in quantity before the rush begins.

This year, the stamps will be sold in special envelopes containing $1.00 worth of stamps. One envelope, printed in green, will contain fifty 2-cent stamps and the other, printed in blue, will contain twenty are on sale at larger city post 5-cent stamps. These envelopes offices.

The Postmaster General emphasized that the scheme does not interfere with the present arrangements whereby the public may buy whole sheets of postage stamps or even individual stamps. He will continue it was in the public interest to purchase postage supplies in advance of the Christmas rush.

Meeting Given 'Selected' List of Candidates to Run For Office on December 7th

Approximately 50 people attended the meeting of the West Belleville Ratepayers' Association held last night in King George School.

Purpose of the meeting, which was under the chairmanship of Ward Lang, president of the West Belleville Association, was to present to the ratepayers a "selected" list of municipal candidates which will run for office in the December 7th municipal elections.

The 13 candidates, seven for administrative positions, one each for mayor, public utilities, and separate school board, and three for public school board, were selected by the Voters' Committee, from a list of 80 candidates suggested by each of the Belleville ratepayers associations.

In a report of the Voters' Committee, read by Mr. Lang, it was explained 80 names were "screened"—evaluated according to administrative ability, record, personnel experience, education and community service, civic progression, impression, health, affiliation and personality.

Those finally nominated were chosen without regard for race, creed or political affiliation, Mr. Lang stated. He added that the present list may not be complete and that other candidates may be nominated before nomination closes on December 26th.

He also stressed the candidates were selected on the basis of being capable, conscientious, intent and willing to give to the best interests of Belleville citizens.

Mr. Lang also disclosed the four ratepayers' associations have asked the Voters' Committee, to contribute $150 each toward a $1,500 advertising budget to publicize the selected candidates.

TEAS GIVEN

The remaining $900 of the budget is to be raised by public subscription.

Three of the aldermanic candidates, George Wishart, Jack Ellis and Walter Hunt, are members of the present city council. Others are W. E. Jarvis, Dr. J. Barlow, Ben Corke, and Eugene Harrison.

A. Meyer Hall was selected as a candidate for mayor, P. A. Thompson selected for Public Utilities; W. McKibbon and E. K. Vallance, for public school board; and C. Langabeer for separate school board.

Brief addresses were given by four of the candidates, Messrs. Harnch, Harrison, Dickson and Langsbere.

A brief address on behalf of the Voters' Committee was given by Bram Humphreys one of the representatives who disclosed the West Belleville Association was not "100 per cent in agreement" with the Voters 'Committee's decision to include three of the seven candidates suggested by the West Belleville Association from the final list.

Rex Nix, a West Belleville representative to the V.C. described the evaluation sheet, and said he was always agree with the results, but the majority rules." He added that it up to the ratepayers to straighten up the men in city hall."

Doug Mannon, a former city alderman, then took the floor to argue against the association contributing $150 to help advertise the selected candidates. Mr. Maxam said he felt each candidate running for municipal office should pay his own advertising expenses.

"I recommend a motion be passed that we not pay one cent for advertising for municipal candidates. A $1,500 budget for advertising is ridiculous," he stated.

Mr. J. W. Hamilton then queried: "Wouldn't it be worth $1-500 to his that bunch out of city hall?"

Mr. Moxam later clarified his stand against the Association's financing of candidates and the setting up of an advertising committee for that purpose.

He said he felt candidates should not take free advertising from any organization because of the danger that successful candidates might feel obligated to that organization. He explained he was not against any candidate contributing to the advertising fund if he so desired.

The motion that the West Belleville Ratepayers' Association not contribute towards the advertising budget for aldermanic and mayoralty candidates presented by Mr. Moxam, and seconded by Mr. J. R. Rolh, was passed by majority vote.

Both Mr. Nix and Mr. Lang stated they felt the motion should not have been passed since it was felt the other three associations had accepted the plan, and therefore the West Belleville association should cooperate with them.

Mr. Lang also stressed the need of organizing a "get-out-to-vote committee," since only 28 per cent of the city's eligible voters turned out to cast their votes in the last municipal general election.

"This time we are aiming at getting at least 72 per cent of the voters out," he said in suggesting a telephone committee and possibly a baby-sitting group to provide convenience for mothers with small children at home, be set up. Several volunteered for the telephone committee.

Out of those who volunteered to telephone voters on his street, was Mr. Moxam. He also stated that "the citizens will get the council they deserve." He said this was not at the last municipal election because only 28 per cent of the voters took the trouble to get out and vote.

Mr. Lang also stressed the association is not dominated by the arbitrary list of candidates the ratepayers named last night.

"Don't get the idea you are being told how to vote here. We will possibly be another 30 candidates nominated before nominations are closed — we are just presenting candidates we think capable of doing a good job," he said.

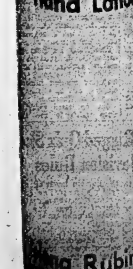
ASSOCIATION COMMENDED

One of the association members, Mrs. Mannon commended the association for the way they made the selection of candidates.

"I have attended several council meetings, and I believe they (city councillors) are still playing politics," Mrs. Mannon added the city needs industry and therefore aldermen should be elected who will "co-operate with the Industrial Commission."

Oshawa Hunter Walks Unharmed From Dense Bush

BANCROFT — Object of an intensive search after being missing from his hunting camp since Monday, Oshawa hunter Douglas Johnston, 27, walked unharmed from the bush to Lake St. Peter area this morning.



Tuesday a search by helicopter from Trenton joined in the hunt with an organized search party under the direction of O.P.P. Constable John Hawkins of Bancroft.

The search was being resumed this morning when the lost hunter walked out of the bush. He was taken to Foster's General Store at Lake St. Peter for nourishment.

During yesterday's search for the missing Oshawa man several shots were heard in the bush but today Johnston is reported as saying that these shots were not fired by him.

This has led police to believe that a second man may be lost in the same general area. Police are investigating the report that a hunter from Hay Lake near Cedar Algonquin Park is missing in the bush in that area.

Chrysler Forced To Stop Making Valiant Cars

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corporation said Tuesday it will be forced to suspend production of its new compact Valiants tonight.

About 2,700 hourly rated employees will be laid off at the Jefferson Hamtramck assembly plant — so far the only location where Valiants have been built. Chrysler hopes it will rise to 30 by 390 because of the suspension. The corporation said seven modifications are that sufficient steel will become available to resume production July 6 in December.

Chrysler shut down production at Imperials last weekend and previously had discontinued assembly of Dodge trucks. Other Chrysler lines are being built on curtailed work weeks.

The mounting Chrysler layoffs came as General Motors, hardest hit of the automakers, began returning some of its 220,000 idle to their jobs. The first of some 18,-000 terminated division employees came back Tuesday.

General Motors has not built a single car since last Wednesday, when the Oldsmobile, Pontiac and Cadillac divisions have been closed since Nov. 1.

Vehicle Jumps Curb, Smashes Into Building

TWEED (Special) — A vehicle driven by Mr. Brice Brown of Marlnaw jumped a curb and smashed into the Van's barbershop of the late J. J. Luffman on the main street of this town this morning. Apparently the driver's foot slipped from the brake pedal and as the accelerator as he was parking his car, causing the vehicle to leap forward. The accident caused considerable damage to the brickwork of the building and broke the plate glass front window. Mrs. Luffman was also working in the building at time, was frightened but not hurt by the accident.

Neither Mr. Brown nor his wife, who was a passenger in the car, was injured, although Mrs. Luffman suffered a bit of shock age to its front end. Police from Madoc investigated the accident due to a traffic police being in Belleville today for court.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market was mixed to higher today in slow, uninteresting morning trading.

The 11 a.m. volume of 302,000 shares was less than one-half the 763,000 shares at the same time Tuesday.

Industrial issue changes, with the exception of Anglo Canadian Pulp and Paper, which gained two points to 28, were fractional.

In the lower-priced issues Brazilian gained 6 cents at 84.85.

Mines were quiet but in the senior uraniums Algom dropped 2¼ to 23¾, while Rio Algom was off ¼ at 19¾.

On Tuesday the market ramblied on a lower level.

Base metal and index losses. More winning among industrials brought the index back up.

The final volume of 1,876,000 shares was the lowest since Nov. 3. Monday's final volume was 1,938,000.

Coordination Life was the biggest industrial loser, dropping seven points to 142 on a small turnover of shares. Dominion Stores lost 1¼ points at 51 and Royal Bank of Canada was up 1¼ points at 79½.

Golden Age Beers were solidly lower but declines were fractional. Silver - priced issues were off in a 10-to-20 cent range with Preston East Dome down 10 cents to 85.35.

Most western oils showed modest losses.

Index losses: industrials .25 at 511.02; golds .39 at 129.39; base metals 1.5 at 166.36; and western oils .42 at 89.22.

Jumper Weighs Chances of Winning Show

TORONTO (CP)—Tom Gaylord, the continent's leading horse jumper despite a setback to the Canadian team Tuesday, says he thinks it will be largely a matter of luck if Canada wins the international team jumping competition at the Royal Winter Fair here.

"Things have to break right for you," the 40-year-old Toronto stockbroker said. "Rub a pole one way one time and it stays on. The next time it comes off."

It came off Tuesday night. After taking first place in individual event Monday and Monday, Gaylord, riding Blue Beau, crashed into two fences to take second-to-last berth.

First rider for Argentina's captain, Pedro Mayorga, who swept over a tight-cornered 10-fence course with two clears for the evening's only clear round. Because of the time allowance, riders were penalized six seconds for every fault.

Two Italian riders, George Morris and Frank Cahpot, placed second and third and Canada's Jim Elder was fourth. Each had one fault before the audience that included Governor-General Vanier.

Canada still leads in the international teams with 22 points, the U.S. is second with 13, Argentina is third with 11, Brazil has six and Mexico trails with four points.

Those Auditors' Reports

At the judicial inquiry into Belleville's financial affairs, Ald. William Argue stated that he did not believe that five per cent of the people understood an auditor's report.

If Ald. Argue will permit us to join voices with him, we should like to support this contention.

We are aware that in doing so we invite the scorn of chartered accountants, certified accountants, auditors and their offspring in managerial and executive positions, whose prestige and earning capacity depend primarily on their ability to prepare, read and understand these reports.

We suspect accountants and auditors of welcoming the general public inability to understand auditors' reports and of doing little to lessen this general ignorance.

Nor do we speak entirely without acquaintance with auditors' reports. In another city, in other years, it used to be our frustrating duty to attempt to bring the sweet light of reason and common sense into the maze of figures with which the auditors (plural and of different firms be it noted, an excellent idea), sought to present a picture of that city's financial status. What has it hand, tongue in cheek and rage in our heart, we would spend our way to t and query plaintively: "Jimm
After the figures had been tra where auditors put them to t demands they should be, we w that the auditors were just difficult. "Jimmie," we wo reasonable this way?" "Well way, I suppose so," he would s not yet far enough from his sc belief in a form of mathematics and that mathematics is a reasonable science and that the simpler an equation the more in keeping it is with the soul of the science. "But - - -", he would add, revealing that already the mysticism of accountancy had invaded his blood stream and was in the process of infecting him with the deadly disease which demands that everything balance, even if it is necessary to treat accounts receivable, and indubitably incollectable, as the exact equivalent of cash in the bank, just because bad debt write-off time has not yet arrived.

We should not object to auditors retaining their precious balances, which seem to be as essential to their art as the balance of a ballet dancer to hers, if they would only agree to translate their meaningless figures into a few paragraphs of prose which would bear some remote approximation to actual facts, all this for the benefit of those not familiar with accountancy.

This is not an impossible task, as a few financial corporations and industrial concerns have proved in recent years, winning awards for the presentation of financial statements which are understandable to a man of average intelligence and some knowledge of mathematics, say by a lawyer, or an electrical engineer or even by a newspaper editor.

Roberts Issues Warning

Attorney General Kelso Roberts has announced that he will warn automobile manufacturers that they are making cars too wide for Ontario highways.

This is good news on which he counts. Firstly, we will confess that we had not known that the Ontario Highway Traffic Act prescribed a legal limit to the width of cars. We are delighted to find that it does. Secondly, we are pleased that Mr. Roberts proposes to draw the attention of the manufacturers to the existence of this law. We think his action will be any more than a warning appears doubtful, since although there are said to be nine 1960 models which exceed the legal 80-inch limit the widest of these is only an inch and a half over this measurement. Manufacturers, though, ought to have it made clear that in future no infringement will be permitted, by as much as even a millimetre.

While Mr. Roberts is issuing these warnings, could he include some comment on the danger, and the uselessness, of those sharp-pointed hood ornaments which every year claim a few lives?

Gifts are friendship's symbols fine;
Men like to give to them they love;
They come to earth with gifts divine
To do the tasks of God above.
And there where all is understood,
Where it is known how they have striven,
Not what they've kept shall mark them good,
But what to others they have given

The happiest man is he who gives
To cheer the life of him who takes;
Who smiles on all with whom [illegible]

And for them all a pathway makes.
And he has lived his life the best
Who has not toiled for selfish needs,
But has at every chance expressed
His kindly thoughts and kindly deeds.

Nor is it quite enough to give Unselfishly unto the few.
There is a larger life to live,
There is a bigger work to do.
That day-when man shall stand alone,
And all his record lies unfurled,
This shall his service here be known
By what he gave unto the world.

Compulsory Deposit Puzzles Newcomer

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

As a newcomer to this city I would very much appreciate an answer to a question regarding the compulsory deposit of ten dollars to the City of Belleville Utilities Commission for Hydro service.

Following is a question and answer game I played with an employee of the Commission when I paid my deposit.

Q. Do I collect interest on my deposit?

A. No. If you should leave this city you will be given a straight deal.

Q. Are all the ten dollar deposits put in the bank?

A. No. They are kept here under lock.

Q. Do you mean to say all the deposits made by the people of Belleville are just kept around the office?

A. No, they are put in the bank.

Q. Who collects the bank interest?

A. I really don't know.

The latest statistics I can find on the number of homes and [illegible]

[illegible] Manitoba [illegible] would stand to reason that the dividends should be even higher.

Certainly we the citizens of Belleville deserve a more straight forward answer than we received. (Perhaps the interest on our deposits is collected by the city treasury which would be another form of taxation.)

Also since the ten dollar deposit consists of $5.00 for electricity and $5.00 for water heater, this, being supplied as converted their water heaters will be entitled to a $5.00 withdrawal.

Winston Set Bad Example

Hamilton Spectator.

Many famous and successful men, the record tells us, were dull or mischievous boys at school. Sometimes, according to them, school was the prison of their spirit. Only later did they display marvelous gifts, when they had escaped from the confines of the classroom and spread their wings in the great world outside.

This metamorphosis from dull lad to genius appeals to all of us because it has the magic of the fairy tale, or reveals a truth of nature, as when a butterfly emerges from a chrysalis. And again, less respectably, it confirms for some of us the deep anarchical conviction of our boyhood that school is an awful waste of time that could be spent upon outdoors.

The most comforting living example of the naughty schoolboy who made good is Sir Winston Churchill. His distaste for the curriculum at Harrow School is famous and he has confessed without shame that in most subjects he was a very dull boy indeed.

People are so enchanted by the startling results in the life of Sir Winston's boyhood laziness and inability to learn — in contrary to the precept that tells us diligence is richly rewarded! — that few pause to think what bad pub-

Captain the Rev. Norman Rawson, of Hamilton, famous war veteran minister and lecturer, declared here last night Britain and France are not fighting Hitler, they are fighting Jitlerism, for the German people are behind by 85 per cent of the German people. They are solidly in support of him, and we will not defeat Hitler until we defeat the German people. We must defeat th the de... make them feel own soil; not in a spirit of re... but any nation outside the confines of its own land and ... Hitler. He says, on small nations, should know its destruction, and the terror that is abroad in the night and noonday, in its own country. And if there is in the British Empire went to war with a government with unwilling blood, with everything to lose and nothing to gain, that time we have heard it said that certain sections of a denomination were not in favor of war, but I sincerely believe that irrespective of denomination, Roman or Protestant, that the Church and its people are solidly behind the Empire in this crisis in its history. Religion in the totalitarian states is a halting, limping thing. Captains of industry, the army, bankers, all kowtow to Hitler but the glorious Gospel still flickers in the hearts of that small minority of preachers in that country. If liberties must come back to Russia and Germany you will find the salvation ... a small group of Christians who refuse to bow the knee to the dictators. In Canada in the last war, we mobilized 500,000 troops, fed them and clothed them. We will send as big an expeditionary force as the last time, but it is sincerely to be hoped that no dumping will mar the final air-training depots that will put us in the front rank of contributors to the cause, and that no penny-pinching will prevent a full spiritual conception, and ultimate victory.

Everybody Takes Rest

Hamilton Spectator

Nobody works at full steam all day, be he or she president of a manufacturing or transportation concern, shirt or housewife, nor should he or she. Everyone needs some time in the midst of the day for relaxation and contemplation.

In case of the broom-leaning worker, we can conjure up this picture: a housewife passes while sweeping the living room floor to look out her window. Indignantly, she sees a city worker leaning on his broom. So this is the picture: She's leaning on her broom watching him lean on his. Fair enough?

Four People In Every Marriage

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

At dinner the other evening, a sentimental friend took issue with a recent paragraph of mine in which I said that a successful marriage is mostly luck.

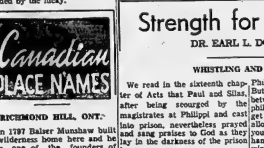
I didn't mean that a couple doesn't have to work hard to keep a marriage healthy and hearty; I meant that no one can really know what the other person is going to be like before the stresses of marriage.

What my sentimental friend overlooks is the plain fact that scientifies change as circumstances change — and it is almost impossible to predict the nature and extent of these changes.

The couple before marriage and the couple after marriage are usually four different persons. He and she, during courtship, are shy and lovely and unselfish and totally involved in each other. They have a great deal to talk about, and when they are not talking they are auxiling and holding hands in blissful repose.

But when furniture must be bought, the bills paid, a few children dispersed, and dinners served and pictures hung, and visitors found, and the whole routine of domestic life — then two more realities must be shaped by the strains and demands and responsibilities that are not at all in evidence during the courtship.

NOT DISAPPOINTED



In a sense, everybody knows this; in another sense, nobody does. That is why we are unready for the vexations and adaptations and compromises that come in a year or two after the honeymoon. Many couples are disappointed because what they expected has "changed", but every organism changes to meet changing conditions.

Here lii where the element of surprise often lies. Not all the changes are harmonious. If the two people have not met new friends without resentment or rebellion, then the two may grow apart, and the whole relationship on a solid basis.

It is part of the talk about character, and maturity, and give-and-take, and all the other platitudes of family living. But the plain fact is that nobody, before marriage, can know what he or she will be like after marriage, or how can he or she know what the other person will be like?

Luck is a tremendously important factor in all aspects of life, and only the smug and self-satisfied believe in the essential innocence. Of course, as Pasteur said, "chance favors the prepared" — and those who are emotionally prepared for the changes are better able to cope with them.

But let no one be proud, or think himself wiser, before a good marriage. It is enough to be grateful for it. The attempt at drawing up rules that are unusable by the luckless, and unneeded by the lucky.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

EMPHYSEMA IS PREVALENT—AFTER MIDDLE AGE

"Dear Dr. Molner: My brother-in-law has a difficult time breathing, and was told by his doctor that he has emphysema. It is inherited, is it contagious, is there a cure for it Is it caused by dust, etc.? I would like to know as I am concerned about my husband. — Mrs. M. V., M."

I have received many letters about emphysema. (em-fi-SEE-ma). It will continue to be more prevalent as we continue to live longer lives.

When we talk about "periics," emphysema is one of the things we should consider. As people learn more about how to take care of it, they will find life far more comfortable and pleasant.

But if you intend to understand emphysema, you must keep in mind what the lungs are like. The lungs are made up of many tiny spaces containing air — exchanging and discharging air.

With each breath, they expand; each time we exhale, they contract, squeezing the air out.

When these little air spaces lose their ability to contract, we have what is known as emphysema. The spaces no longer expel as much air, and consequently do not draw in as much fresh air.

Certain occupations sometimes lead to it — glass blowing, playing wind instruments, and others. But many persons who have had asthma, or patients who, for some other reason, have been subject to prolonged coughing. Again, age itself is sometimes a factor, as the tissues lose their elastic tone.

Emphysema is very much a matter of degree. Alarming figures that 80 per cent of us have emphysema after 40 mean we don't really mean much, because a mild presence of emphysema often isn't noticeable.

At the other extreme, it may be progressive, producing symptoms on the order of dry cough, shortness of breath and gasping.

Keep the cause in mind, and you will see why I say there is no cure for emphysema. You can't put the stretch back into tissues that have lost their stretch.

But what do we really want — to "cure" or to be comfortable in spite of whatever ails us? Why, we want to live comfortably!

We can do a lot, with emphysema, to achieve just that. Smoking should be stopped to halt irritation to the bronchial tubes and the lungs — both of which aggravate cough. If there is any infection, it, of course, must be checked, but the corrected for the same reason.

Prompt attention to every simple cold is also very important.

For those with asthma, there are drugs which make breathing easier by relaxing the bronchial tubes — and easy breathing is what we want. (Some drugs are taken by mouth, some by inhalation.)

A band worn around the abdomen is sometimes helpful. It forces the patient to use the upper chest and air spaces in the lungs which ordinarily aren't much used.

In severe cases, reducing the patient's activity to a level which matches his breathing capacity is sensible — and important.

The goal, as I said before, is to make breathing easier, and make the need for air match the amount available.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible to have diabetes and not know it? — R. F."

Absolutely yes. Many cases are discovered accidentally through routine tests for emphysema, or for other reasons, as the case will it a "sneaky" disease.

Note to F. L. L.: No, orange juice is not "bad for arthritis". God. I cannot conceive how an idea ever gained so much unwarranted credence.

Class Plans Unique Gift

Montreal Gazette

The medical students of McGill University have agreed — and agreed unanimously — upon a new and excellent means of showing their university.

They are planning to give McGill in the year 1985 a gift of $100,000 — a sum that is the equivalent of the interest on an endowment of $2,000,000. This sum will be created by every member of this class paying an annual payment into an investment fund. A special investment committee (elected for five year periods) will manage the fund. It is believed with steady annual contributions, and with the compound interest that will accrue, this expression of its loyalty will be possible.

This special fund will be quite apart from the Alma Mater Fund, and will be in addition to it. Members of the graduating class will also be making their annual contributions to the Alma Mater Fund. But this other scheme — the $100,000 gift, in 1985 — is something done by these graduates as a class — a class of 96 students.

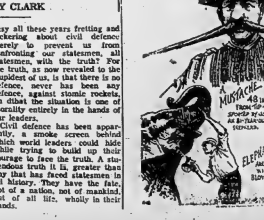
Under the annual payments to this $100,000 fund were laid by the members of the class last night. The medical class of 1961 has created a precedent in the plan. If each succeeding medical class should undertake the same kind of project, and if other faculties could follow the example, there would be assured important and significant income in the years ahead.

Strength for The Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WHISTLING AND SINGING

We read in the sixteenth chapter of Acts that Paul and Silas, after being scourged by the magistrates at Philippi, and cast into prison, nevertheless prayed and sang praises to God as they lay in the darkness of the prison house.



Suppose in a modern attitude to ward life today which tells us that the way to be victorious over life is to be cheerful. Go through life whistling, and you will go through it happily. Pay no attention to the things that happen to you and the things people say about you. If you believe everything will turn out all right, it will.

At first glance whistling in the face of difficulty appears very much like Paul's song in the Philippian prison at midnight. But there is a world of difference between the two. The modern philosophy says that the way to happiness is found by refusing to allow the events of life to trouble you. The Bible, on the other hand, counsels us that the way to win triumph over life is by getting the heart right with God and keeping it right. Can we imagine Paul and Silas lying in the darkness of the Philippian prison and whistling? Their backs were lacerated with the scourge. They could not whistle that way. They did not try to. They prayed and sang praises to God.

Whistling one's way through life and singing in the midnight of one's troubles are as different as shadowboxing and sincere religious faith.

High School Board Decides To Postpone Administration Building as Tenders High

With tenders for the construction of the proposed new administration building for the Bay of Quinte District High School Board being higher than was anticipated, no action with respect to the new structure will be taken this year.

This was indicated today by Board Secretary Roy Dulmage following opening of tenders at a special meeting.

Plans called for construction of the new administration building on College Street and tenders were called. Tender prices were considerably higher than expected, however, and the matter may be up for reconsideration by the 1960 board.

At the regular meeting of the board held last night at the board offices on John Street, little more than routine business was transacted.

The board directed Mr. Dulmage to write to the Ontario Department of Education protesting the department's request that a number of teachers be released from classes a week earlier in June to arrange schedules for marking of examination papers.

The possibility of instituting a driver-training course as part of the curriculum either for day or night school classes, or for after school participation, will be considered by the board at its December meeting. The board has requested that a representative of the Ontario Safety League attend its December meeting to discuss the matter.

Authorization was given for the final purchase of equipment for the new Moira Secondary School, provided the supplementary grant from the Federal government was received.

Commercial students at the city high schools next spring will have the opportunity of obtaining practical experience in city business offices or other establishments. The board members authorized a co-operative scheme whereby commercial students may go out for a week in the spring and for a week again in the fall to work in commercial offices.

Ways and means will be considered whereby rural students might take part in International flowing matches. Other high school boards will be contacted to determine their policy with respect to such participation in matches and also what coaching might be provided.

A letter of commendation will go forward to Mr. Lloyd Doran, city correctional director, and others for their work in planning the recent Hallowe'en program at the Belleville Armouries.

The board authorized the purchase of a used piano for the orchestra pit at B.C.I. Purchase of the additional piano will obviate the necessity of moving the stage piano to the orchestra pit for various public functions.

Consideration will be given to the removal of a set of hallway doors at the Quinte Secondary School. The doors were left in place following the construction of a school addition but are found now to create a traffic congestion.

The Board will assist in financing a banquet to honor members of the Quinte Secondary School football team which this year won OCSSA honors for the first time for Belleville in 20 years.

And the lack of a chief instructor may force the disbanding of the BCI cadet corps. However the matter is still under consideration and a report will be made at the December meeting of the board.

Did Not Miss An Hour When Rope Broke

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — The bells of St. Mary's Cathedral here rang so long Tuesday in honor of cardinal - elect Aloisius Neunch that the rope broke and nearly knocked out the bell-ringer.

Rt. Rev. Msgr. L. J. Arrell, pastor of the cathedral, said the young bell-ringer, whose name is unknown, was knocked down when the rope came tumbling down.

However, the bell was repaired immediately and the hourly peals honoring the new cardinal were not interrupted.

Msgr. Arrell said, "we didn't miss an hour."

16 Privileged Kiwanis Club Members Feted

Memories of past exploits and accomplishments of the Belleville Kiwanis Club over the past 19 or 15 years were revived Tuesday when the local club held a special luncheon meeting in honor of its privileged members.

Sixteen privileged members, two of them charter members, attended the meeting, which was under the chairmanship of a past president, Jack Trudeau.

The hall was decorated for the occasion with blue and white streamers, and a new member, George Rogers, formerly of the Bath-Millhaven Kiwanis Club, acted as special waiter for the privileged members.

Seated at the head table, the honored guests were introduced by chairman Jack Trudeau. Special mention was made of the two charter members, Dr. Sam Cronk and Charles Hyde.

At the conclusion of the dinner, all of the privileged members entertained their audience with brief addresses describing some of the more outstanding activities and projects undertaken by the club over the past 15 years. These included the Robin Lake Camp (now under the sponsorship of the Salvation Army) for less fortunate children, organized by the club in 1950, the now defunct "Be A Buddy Club" started by Fred Rawson in 1948, Kiwanians undertook to be "buddies" to less fortunate kiddies, the renting of quarters for the Y.O.M. in a house on Pinnacle Street, the week-long Kiwanis Carnivals; the formation of nine clubs softball league; the many entertainment projects sponsored by the club, the most notable being the present Kiwanis "Boutique" series, originally organized by Staff McKenna; and the numerous trips which were taken by the club. One of them a trip to Marinaw, will long be remembered by several of the "old-timers".

The speakers were Fred Rawson, Taylor Franklin, Lawrence Keils, Jack Trudeau, Ed Logan and Norm Edwards.

Mr. Edwards, in his address, took the opportunity to thank fellow Kiwanians for donating blood when he was seriously ill.

Several visitors were introduced to the club, among them Earl Dicknother, the new secretary-manager of the local Chamber of Commerce and manager of the Industrial Commission.

At the conclusion of the program the meeting was turned over to club president Gerry Wishart who expressed the appreciation of the club to its privileged members for an enjoyable meeting.

"When we look back on the activities of the club in 1959, I'm sure this meeting will be remembered as one of the most outstanding we've ever had", he stated.

President Wishart singled out two "members of the elite" for special thanks in Dr. Harold Craig, who organized the meeting, and Jack Trudeau, who acted as chairman.

Next week's meeting will feature the induction of new members. The speaker will be Kiwanian George Hume.

Privilege members who attended were: Addison Lloyd Dr. Harold Craig, Gregory Cvkota, Bill Cook, Dr. Sam Cronk, Taylor Franklin, Charles Hyde, Larry Langlois, Ed Logan, Abe Maier, Leonard Reid, Ray Roblin, Norm Edwards, Fred Rawson, Lawrence Keils and Jack Trudeau.

Avondale Ratepayers' Body Endorses Voters' Committee Selection of 8 Candidates

Chairman of Avondale Ratepayers' Association Robert Murphy last night offered, by resign, a selection of potential candidates for the municipal election — endorsed by the Belleville Voters' Committee — was supported by the meeting.

The Belleville Voters' Committee is composed of two executive officers from each of the four Ratepayers' Associations in city.

Eight BVC-endorsed names were put forward last night for a new city council. Three, George Wishart, Jack Ellis and Walter Elliott are members of the present council. The other four, W. E. Jarvah, J. Barlow, Ben Cocke and Eugene Harrison, are inexperienced. For mayor, the BVC will support ex-mayor A. McLean Hale.

The Avondale meeting was told that through their representation of the BVC — one of whom is Chairman Murphy — they had already been committed to support the eight names.

They were also under a commitment to spend $1,500 — to be split between the four associations — for advertising the merits of the aldermanic and mayoralty candidates.

A questioner asked from the floor . . . "What if a ratepayer disagrees with the choice?"

Replied chairman Murphy: "If I am willing to vacate my office and let someone else take the job".

The chairman added, after his offer was refused, that no other names had been suggested by the BVC because the ratepayers did not want to give the impression of trying to "beg" council nominations.

"If we suggested 14 names", explained Mr. Murphy, "it might look like a move to get rid of the entire city council".

As many of the ratepayers come from annexed areas, he said, it might also be thought of as an effort to get higher representation from annexed areas.

On the raising of $1,500 between the four associations, the Avondale meeting, after a lengthy discussion, agreed to the proposal which asks for an initial payment of $150 plus whatever other monies could be raised to finance the remaining $900.

CHAIRMAN SAYS NO

Another questioner asked if the advertising cost could not be cut by not actively supporting the candidates who had mentioned their intention of running independently previous to being asked by the ratepayers.

Chairman Murphy said no. Avondale was committed. He then asked the treasurer of the Association for the current balance in the Avondale account.

"Just over $30", came the answer.

Several delegates to the meeting then offered to solicit door-to-door for contributions for the advertising campaign.

The meeting agreed to organize a telephone campaign to explain the Ratepayers' choice of candidates to voters; to organize members for transportation, help-sitting and other duties on Election Day.

Critical Analysis of Pictures Made From Artist's Viewpoint

A portfolio entitled, "The Artist as a Social Critic", was utilized by the Belleville Art Association at their November meeting.

The artist is ordinarily thought of as a man unconcerned with the social problems of his time, and in general the history of painting bears out this assumption. The most enduring paintings are not likely to be comments on the passing scene since art is concerned with permanent values, not transient ones. However, the 31 paintings in this portfolio seemed directly from affairs of the moment when the artist appears in his least familiar guise, as a social critic or reporter.

The subjects of the first four pictures examined were specific instances of social error and injustice. While the observer is impressed with knowledge of the events for full understanding of their meanings, without this knowledge they are still works of art of interpretative power or, at least, of curious fascination.

"Rue Transnonain, April 15, 1834" illustrates how much a picture can lose when its topical associations are no longer current. On the other hand Goya's "The Executions of the Third of May" rises above topical level, even when it begins with a topical subject.

Honthorst's "Calumny", painted just before 1500 in renaissance Italy, accuses the Florentine government of ignorance, surfiction, envy, calumny, fraud and deception. It depicts it as unworthy of the crown and sceptre of authority, proclaims the victim's innocence and prophecies the city's remorse, all this in allegorical resentment. In contrast, Ben Shahn's "Passion of Sacco and Vanzetti", a contemporary American picture painted in 1932, shancons all subtleties and indirections for an uncompromising indictment.

DULL AND UNIMAGINATIVE

As a further contrast, John Trumbull's "The Declaration of Independence" was studied. It is a little dull and unimaginative when forced to compete with other pictures as a complete and impressive statement in itself, yet it has an appropriateness in the setting of its own time and its own place that dignifies and enriches it.

"Liberty Leading the People", by Eugene Delacroix, is a fine, stirring highly charged exposition of the social ferment that led to revolutionary disorders in France in 1830. This painting, like Goya's is an imagined and created version of an actual event, not a reproduction of it.

"The Death of Socrates" by Jacques Louis David, is a work of almost icy elegance, immaculately drawn and painted. Although the subject is drawn from the ancient world, David's reference is to his own France.

Boucher's "The Toilet of Venus" was painted for an eighteenth century French court society in which women determined much of the policy and taste which they certainly practiced the taste. It is a superb professional job created for a limited audience. Indirectly a picture such as this is a social comment even though the painter did not intend it to be.

Diego Rivera commemorates the social rescue of the Mexican peasant by the Agrarian Revolution in his "The Liberation of the Peon." Rivera's frescoes are unusual decorations and, frequently, works of art of high calibre aside from their function in style, the insistent propagandistic fervor shot sometimes defeats itself.

COMPARISON OF TYPES

"The Orgy" from a series of paintings entitled "A Rake's Progress" by William Hogarth, was the next picture examined. Hogarth also painted two other sets, "Marriage a la Mode" and "A Harlot's Progress." These pictorial tracts have become classics in the history of art as social comment. For comparison Toulouse-Lautrec's "Salone in the Rue des Moulins" was displayed. It is an intensely moral picture, in spite of its "immoral" theme. Hogarth is interested in people typed as social phenomena, and Toulouse-Lautrec is interested in people as individuals affected by the structure of society.

"Into the World There Came A Soul Called Ida," by Ivan Albright, is an image of the mortality of the flesh and of the spirit.

The portfolio was concluded with the discussion of Peter Blume's "The Eternal City," which was painted in the Fascist day of Mussolini's power as Il Duce. This painting was unfavorably received upon its first exhibition in America but has advanced steadily in critical appreciation. It is a picture that grows and changes in meaning, seeming to have a life of its own independent of the artist's intentions.

At the next meeting, which will be held in the recreation building on the lawn, the association will conclude this series of seminars with a portfolio entitling "The Artist As A Visionary."

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Joseph Foshay are pictured following their recent marriage in Holy Rosary Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Miss Beverley Ann White, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney F. White, of Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. Foshay are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Henry Foshay, of Trenton. FOSHAY — WHITE

A lovely double-ring ceremony was performed recently in Holy Rosary Church, Belleville, when Beverley Ann White, of Belleville, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney F. White, became the bride of Donald Joseph Foshay, of Trenton, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Henry Foshay. The Reverend Michael Simson officiated before a background of beautiful white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. W. G. Grant presided at the console of the organ and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Helen Jeffrey, as she sang the "Wedding Hymn," "Ave Maria" and "Mother At Thy Feet Is Kneeling."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming lovely in her white Chantilly lace bridal gown in ballerina-length, fashioned with fitted bodice having a scalloped bateau neckline, with long, lily-pointed sleeves. She wore a coronet headdress and waist-length veil of tulle illusion and carried a cascade of red roses mingled with white stephanotis. A cultured pearl pendant completed her nuptial costume.

Mrs. Wilma Pukancik, aunt of the bride, was bridesmaid, gowned in a brocaded peacock blue sheath in street-length with bateau neckline, and short sleeves accented by an overskirt of net. She wore a white floral headdress and blue flowers, and carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations.

Mrs. Bernard Hogan of Trenton attended the bridegroom, while Messrs. James White, of Belleville, uncle of the bride, and Milton Pukancik, cousin of the bride, ushered the guests.

The reception was held at Parkdale Community Centre, where the bride's mother, wearing a wine-colored sheath of bitton-a-bitton with matching hat, and corsage of white carnations, received. Assisting in the receiving line was the bride-groom's mother, in pale wool crepe with pink accessories, and corsage of pink carnations.

The bride's table was appointed with white linen damask, centred by a three-tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom beneath a half arch of pale blue flowers.

For the wedding trip to Lake Placid and other southern points the bride chose a blue and black wool tweed ensemble with black accessories, and corsage of pink groom's mother in pale blue wool are residing at 30A Meyers St, Belleville.

Guests attended from Dundas, Oakville, Toronto, Peterborough, Perth, Deseronto, Ottawa, Consecon and Hamilton.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride, luggage; to the ushers, cuff links, and to the groom's man a cigaret lighter. The bride's gift to her attendant, an evening bag.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was entertained at the home of Mrs. Wilma Pukancik, of Belleville, with Miss Karen Bishop as co-hostess; at a shower given by the office girls of Corby Distillery, and also by the personnel of the distillery when she was presented with a hostess chair.

15th Boy Scout Aux. Plans 'Parents' Night'

On Monday evening at Sir Winston Churchill's, the 15th/13th Boy Scout Auxiliary held a regular meeting with only four members present.

Mrs. S. Hoard, treasurer reported a profit of $31.32 from the October bake sale conducted at the Boys' and Girls' "Open House".

A program, starring Scouts and Cubs, is being planned by the leaders, as entertainment for the "Parents Night" to be held instead of the regular Cub meeting on the 12th of December. The Ladies' Auxiliary will give each of the boys a dime, and as a door prize, Mrs. A. Hoard kindly offered to make a lapel purse.

A suggestion, from the group committee and leaders, hoped that the annual "Father and Son" banquet be sponsored in March, received favorable vote.

A lively discussion, led by Mrs. C. Agar as how to stimulate and hold the interest of all the members for future meetings produced many good ideas. So if is hoped that on the third Monday in January all the members will be present to see some of these suggestions put into practice.

Before Mrs. Jantish served coffee, Mrs. Bud Bateman conducted the Scouts "Flint's game." Although no one could remember all the items named.

Mrs. R. Brett, Mrs. G. Holgate and Mrs. J. Brown tied for the prize.

St. Michael's P.C. Has Full Agenda

St. Michael's Parish Council of the C.W.L. monthly meeting was held on November 9th in St. Michael's Academy auditorium with the president, Mrs. Herbert Rivers, presiding.

Mrs. H. Ackerman, membership convener reported 448 paid-up members.

Miss Molly Waller, spiritual convener, reporting the rosary said at funeral home for three deceased members, and that all members had attended a retreat at the Cenacle, Toronto, on October 30-31, and November 1st, also that a book display would be one of the banner features.

Mrs J. Boyd asked members to have used clothing for missions at her home, 36 Oak St., before December 10 so that it would arrive at its destination before Christmas.

Mrs. McFadden sent her report on St. Michael's Academy commencement exercises of November 2nd, at which Mr. Kenneth Ferren, Director of Guidance at Trenton High School, was guest speaker.

Donations were voted toward the purchasing of a uniform for a Guide leader and to the Civic Arena Committee.

Mrs. E. Logan reported on donation sent to League of Sacred Heart to help defray the cost of the Catholic Hour on TV and radio.

Mrs. A. Wilkinson accepted the responsibility of collecting used white linens and fine cottons for the leper colony.

Mrs. J. Sheridan was appointed convenor for the Queen of Hearts Ball to be held in Peterboro.

Mrs. J. Boyle reported all plans complete for the tea and bazaar to be held this week at St. Michael's auditorium.

Mrs. T. J. Fleury accepted the convenorship of the pickup of food for members who could not arrange delivery to auditorium, to phone Mrs. Meade.

The Reverend Peter Murphy addressed the meeting in the absence of the Very Rev. Dean Gervin. Father Murphy congratulated the group on its organization of members by wards and asked the councillors to call on all members on their lists, new parishioners in their districts, and lend a hand to good neighbors. He also urged the members to continue prayers for peace.

Miss Molly Waller conveyed the highlights of the October Catholic Social Life Conference held in Sudbury which included parent-child relationships and the love the child requires; that through baptism the child is born into the life of Christ; economics and family life; the co-fraternity of Christian doctrine; total preparation for marriage and the Liturgy and of the Christian family, and the role of home and school in the life of the child.

Cana and Pre-Cana talks were also given.

Monsignor Feeney blessed the home and the things which can be done to assist in living the Liturgy.

After the meeting adjourned Mrs. R. Root and her committee served refreshments.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

We are sure you are not going shopping for Christmas ivory just yet awhile, but we thought a mention of them might startle you. We imagine from our own experience that few people who buy Christmas trees know exactly what they are buying. We are told that the needles provide the best source of identification. Try to roll the needles between your fingers. If they can be rolled the tree is spruce. If the needles are soft and can't be rolled, then it is a balsam fir. Scotch pine can be identified by its reddish-brown bark and short bluish-green needles borne two in a bundle.

The needles of the white pine come in bundles of five and the red pine and jack pine carry their needles in bundles of two. Red pine has long needles and bark that is light red, and the jack pine can be known by its short, yellowish-green needles and greyish-brown bark. Tamarack trees vary. Balsam fir is the most popular with Eastern Canada and the States, but the douglas fir gets the nod from most fish in Western Canada. Here we understand the many kinds of pine are also finding in popularity for Christmas.

NOT GRADED

Christmas trees so far are not graded on just "take your choice". Many other products we buy, we would be lucky to be because as the slogan goes, we can "Buy by Grade and Buy with Confidence". That has become the guide for the housewife for she knows that Canada's grading system is probably the most complete and efficient in the country. Buying by grade means better food buying. Graded foods carry a distinct grade marking either on the container or on the product itself. They are symbols of quality which can be relied upon.

Plants under registration with the Canada Department of Agriculture account for practically all fruits and vegetables processed in Canada. All products canned, frozen or dehydrated in these plants must be graded according to quality and labelled as such. The plants are inspected by department inspectors before the grade mark is put on the can or package. When canned, frozen or dehydrated fruits and vegetables are imported they must comply with Canadian grading regulations.

In the case of fresh vegetables, the grade mark must be shown on a suitable tag, or on the bundles, or ends of baskets or other containers in which they are packed.

Consumers who "buy-by grade" have an important part to play in maintaining the standards of graded foods sold in Canada. If he or she buys foods that are graded and believed to be below the grade designated, the product should be purchased and the matter reported to the department of agriculture inspector.

Speaking of grades, budget watchers should remind themselves that grades B and C are the best for scrambling and for cooked foods such as puddings and cakes. However, we found a more delicate flavor, as in poached or fried eggs and angel food cakes, when we have been satisfied with Grade A. We have mentioned this before, but again — the color of eggs, ranging from white to brown, or brown, does not affect flavor, food value or quality. Eggs are always a bargain in flavor and nutrition. Two or three eggs give you about the same amount of protein as an average serving of meat.

PROPER STORAGE

If you store eggs properly, they will keep fresh longer. Place them large end up in a covered container and store in the refrigerator. The covering keeps them from absorbing odors and losing moisture. The protective film around the shell, which helps keep out bacteria, can be destroyed by undue washing, so clean eggs lightly with a damp cloth.

Speaking of storing, our most common vegetable, the potato is often not treated well enough. They should be stored in a cool, dark place with high humidity. The best storage temperatures is 35 to 40 degrees F. Higher temperature cause shriveling if the air is dry and sprouting if the air is humid. Lower temperatures cause a sweet flavor and less cooking quality. Both daylight and electric light will eventually turn stored potatoes green and bitter.

Did you know that that other old standby, the turnip, is a very good and economical source of vitamin C or ascorbic acid, especially when eaten raw. Taste some, it's very good. Otherwise cook them quickly in a small amount of boiling water. Good and careful shopping.

Ivanhoe W.I. Holds Pot Luck Supper

The November meeting of Ivanhoe W.I. took the form of a pot-luck supper for the members, their families, and several visitors, at Ivanhoe Hall, on Wednesday evening.

After all had partaken of a bountious supper, Mrs. Bray, the president, called the gathering to order and welcomed all present. Mr. John McInroy acted as chairman for the following program.

Miss Jayne Gay led in community singing with Mrs. Reg Higgerty at the piano. A reading was given by Miss Margaret Wright, followed by a musical monologue by Karen Bray. A duet by Elsie Barnard and Sharon Wickens, "Heartaches" by the Number" and a demonstration of the girls club work with Heather Bray assisting quality. Both a presentation of books to the grade 2 pupil with the highest marks was made by Mrs. Bray to the following pupils: — Barbara Twiddy — Reveal's School, Ross Sarles—Minto School; Archie Medill —Shannonville School; Grant Thompson — West Huntington; Barry Bray — Ivanhoe; Brian Bailey — White Lake.

As this was "Remembrance Day" a short but impressive Memorial service was held with readings given by Mrs. Bray and Reg Twiddy. All sang a "Song of Peace"; a duet by Sharon Wickens and Elsie Barnard.

Mrs. Barton Haggerty read the names on the cenotaph of the Second World War 1939-1945. Mrs. Keith Bray read the names for the First World War 1914-18.

Mrs. George Wood played, "O Valiant Hearts", on the accordion and the singing of the National Anthem closed the program.

Games and Bingo ended a pleasant evening.

HARTS-RIGGS W.I.

MADOC — An interesting program followed the general business period of Harts-Riggs W.I. meeting held at the home of Mrs. Carl Fleming on Wednesday afternoon.

An excellent report of the area convention held in Belleville was given by Mrs. Bristol and Miss Walsh. The motto, "A Wise Community Preserves Its Record," was prepared and given by Mrs. Field Allan. The program convener for the meeting were Mrs. Newell Broad and Miss Walsh. The roll call was to be answered with an historic event in the Harts-Riggs area and a most enjoyable period of reminiscing was the result when many of the members related anecdotes both serious or humorous, which they had remembered or of which they had been told.

It is expected that several of those present will be entered in the Tweedsmuir book, which is now in the process of being compiled.

Mrs. Broad presented a map of the Harts-Riggs school sections which had been drawn by Mr. Newell Broad and which included all the names of the original owners of the farms in these sections. This map was examined and commented on considerably, as many of the family names have been all but forgotten.

Miss Walsh read a newspaper clipping which described the Madoc gold rush in the 1860's and how it proved to be a hoax and therefore a great disappointment to the surrounding area.

Arrangements were made for the purchase of a Tweedsmuir book so that many articles and pictures which have been collected may be safely entered for the information of future generations.

The hostess and her assistants served refreshments.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Evelyn S. — I hate to quit now.

Frank S. — Age will catch up with her too.

Evelyn S. — My husband and I are in our 60's, in good health and have four married children. Our problem may seem funny for people at our stage of life, but it is serious to us. It is my career.

About ten years ago, when our youngest son left for college, I took a job to keep myself busy. I found that I loved to work and I was quickly advanced by my company. I took courses to fill out my background and got an even better job.

Now I am in a supervisory position, making good money and enjoying life to the hilt. The problem is that my husband has been steadily slowing down over the past few years and he wants me to quit work so that we can take it easy together. I hate to quit at the peak of my success.

Frank S. — I think it's a lot better to quit at the peak of success than to wait until you start going downhill. Evelyn could retire now with the full satisfaction of knowing that she has really made it. If she was out to prove her ability in the business world.

What gets me is that she always used to beg me to take it easier so that we could enjoy more time together. Now that I am able to retire she argues against it, pointing out that most men "fall to pieces" after they retire.

Evelyn seems to get a kick out of the fact that she is "going places" while I have difficulty keeping up with the things I have been doing for the past ten years. But she's only two years younger than I am. Age will catch up with her too.

The Council: We sympathize with Frank in his desire for more of his wife's time and attention in these late years when they are able to enjoy one another's company without all the responsibilities of parenthood. Yet we suspect that more than this is involved in some of his complaints.

While Evelyn has come into a new sense of her power during the past ten years, Frank apparently feels only a waning of his powers. He appears to be rather bitter and jealous about this and his real argument to his wife might well be, "Stop being so young and energetic. You're supposed to grow old along with me."

On the other hand, Evelyn has apparently been so intoxicated with her own achievements that she has had little inclination to concern herself with her husband's feelings. She might have enjoyed her success and avoided wounding him had she been a little more sensitive to his feelings.

In short, we think both partners in this case are being a bit selfish. Frank seems to demand that Evelyn sacrifice the fruits of her work over the past decade as proof of love for him. Evelyn asks only to be allowed to go on as she has been without consideration for any wifely responsibilities.

Frank needs something to give him a new interest in life. It might be the exploration of a new aspect of his work or a hobby. In either case, he will probably find a resurgence of energy. Evelyn on the other hand, should accept the fact that her work slow-down will come sooner or later and that her relationship with her husband has the possibility of growing richer and fuller with the years if it gets the proper nourishment.

SCOTT'S W.A. AND W.M.S.

ST. SIDNEY — Scott's W.A. dinner was well attended when the ladies served a potluck dinner at noon on November 11 in the church hall.

In the evening the same ladies met in the WMS meeting at 8 p.m., opening it [illegible] were nine members and three visitors present.

The president, Mrs. C. Copeland, opened the meeting.

Mrs. A. Martyn render a solo, "In the Garden," with Mrs. C. Frost at the piano. Several readings were given: "On Remembrance," Mrs. G. Sine; "Because" by Mrs. A. Sine; "You Don't Have to Tell It," by Mrs. M. Sine; "Just For Today," by Mrs. C. Copeland.

A temperance reading by Mrs. C. Frost. The supply secretary, Mrs. B. Dafoe, read the list of supplies needed for overseas work. The treasurer reported that she was sending $50 to the Presbyterial treasurer.

Mrs. K. Faul acted as leader for the devotional.

Scripture was read by Mrs. A. Martyn, Mrs. G. Sine, Mrs. E. Sine, Mrs. M. Dafoe and Mrs. Martyn.

Mrs. R. Dafoe, Mrs. A. Sine and Mrs. M. Dafoe took part in the meditation.

The hostess served refreshments and the ladies enjoyed a social hour.

Mrs. C. Copeland, who has been president, and is leaving the community, was presented with a lovely gift from the ladies of the WA and WMS.

United Church W.A. Elects 1960 Officers

FRANKFORD — The W. A. of Frankford United Church met on Thursday afternoon in Rose Lowery Hall. President, Mrs. Arnold Stickle, was in charge of the meeting. As an armistice theme of worship, Psalm 46 was read.

Mrs. Stickle was in charge of the devotional and commented on the theme.

Business was conducted and the annual W.A. bazaar will take place, November 16th at 2.30 p.m. in Rose Lowery Hall.

The W. A. catered to the Presbytery at the noon hour.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Charlie Hanne's group, and included: reading, Kiplings Armistice Hymn, by Mrs. Bruce Servos; vocal solo, Mrs. M. Grills; reading, Mrs. T. Babel. The W.A. attended Presbyterial at Wooler last week and Mrs. F. Babel brought a fine report.

Election of officers was conducted by the Rev. C. Judd, as follows: honorary president — Mrs. C. Judd; president — Mrs. Arnold Stickle; 1st vice-president — Mrs. Frank Babel; 2nd vice-president — Mrs. Blake Stickle; treasurer — Mrs. Bruce Servos; recording secretary — Mrs. M. Grills; corresponding secretary — Mrs. W. Scott; pianist — Mrs. Walter Meadowcrow; assistant pianist — Mrs. Fred Charlesworth; parsonage committee — Mrs. F. Babel, Mrs. B. Fenn and Mrs. J. Fryer; representative to the official board — Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel; auditors — Mrs. G. Montgomery and Mrs. Harry Bleecker; flower committee — Mrs. J. Fryer.

Mr. C. Judd closed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served.

Fine and Fitted

By TRACY ADRIAN

The fitted coat, always a success with slender types, is shown here in a particularly chic version.

This style is done in a dashing black and white tweed with width across the top via dropped shoulders. The handsome calf belt cinches a permanently shaped waistline that opens into a full, pleated skirt. A long, low, notched collar and huge patch pockets are other details.

Miss Mallabone Like a Mother To All Sailors

VICTORIA (CP)—To the Royal Canadian Navy she's Lieut. Mavis Mallabone, but to the sailors she's like a mother.

Lieut. Mallabone is the personnel selection officer at HMCS Naden here. She interviews new naval recruits, officer candidates and men wishing to transfer to other branches of the RCN, and conducts aptitude tests.

Do men resent unburdening themselves to a woman?

"Sometimes," she said in an interview, "but although they may be suspicious at first they soon react normally once they find they have a sympathetic audience. Then I become just another mother."

WELL TRAINED

Slim, dark-haired and 36 years of age, Lieut. Mallabone came well equipped for her unusual career. After graduating from the University of Alberta with a degree in education, she took psychology courses at Acadia University.

Before joining the Canadian navy the native of Canmore, Alta., was a member of the women's naval service in England. A desire to travel had taken her there, and in laughing her stay in England she joined the naval women's branch and completed her service as a petty officer.

Determined to see as much of Britain as possible, she spent many weekends hitch-hiking.

"We always hitch-hiked in uniform," she said. "Drivers in England would ordinarily never pick up a woman, but they knew we were perhaps 'broke' and trying to get back to base.

"As soon as they found I was a Canadian they were just marvellous. We received all sorts of invitations to have meals and stay with them for holidays."

FANCY GLOVES

Dress gloves were a fashionable item among the European nobility as early as the 11th century.

Brocade Suit

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Silk brocade with an Oriental motif is used for a useful suit well geared for the theatre or for any evening activity that is not too formal. The jacket, cut with a mandarin collar, is designed in one with the sleeves for an elegant shoulder line. The straight skirt has a separate, criss-cross buttoned belt. The blouse matches the yellow tone in the green, yellow and blue brocade. It is sleeveless, with a high, round neck and a three-button closing.

More Cookies That Keep Well

by Mary Moore

A full cookie box of fancy cookies will make your supply of rich fruit cake last longer. I gave you sandwich cookies and frozen squares last week. Use them and today's cookies to vary your plate of fruit cake when you pass it to callers.

CHERRY GLOBES:

1 cup butter, 1-4 cup icing sugar, 2 cups sifted flour, 1 cup finely chopped almonds, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 dozen maraschino cherries, drained.

Cream butter or margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg, beat well, add anise seed (crushed with rolling pin) and add sesame seed. Add sifted dry ingredients gradually. Blend thoroughly until smooth. Divide dough, shape into long rolls about 1 1-2 to 2" in diameter. Wrap in wax paper. Chill thoroughly. Slice and bake as needed at 400 deg. Fahr. about 10 minutes.

Lat. this summer I received from one of our readers in Regina a recipe for another covered cherry cookie called Cherry Flips. It is less expensive than Cherry Globes (above), consisting chopped almonds and including 2 egg yolks. I am including them because they keep well and may be varied in their coating to make your cookie or coconut. Makes 2 1-3 dozen.

ANISE AND SESAME SEED COOKIES:

1-2 cup butter or margarine, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon crushed anise seed, 1-3 cup sesame seed, 1 3-4 cups sifted flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 1-2 teaspoon baking powder.

Cream butter or margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg, beat well, add anise seed (crushed with rolling pin) and add sesame seed. Add sifted dry ingredients gradually. Blend thoroughly until smooth. Divide dough, shape into long rolls about 1 1-2 to 2" in diameter. Wrap in wax paper. Chill thoroughly. Slice and bake as needed at 400 deg. Fahr. about 10 minutes.

WEDNESDAY

Mushroom Omelette (with bacon if desired — see Tuesday); Baked Stuffed Potatoes; Cabbage and Apple Salad; Bowl of Assorted Fresh Fruits; Sample Fruit Cake (or Crackers and Cheese); Coffee.

Cream butter with sugar until fluffy. Add remaining ingredients, except cherries, mixing well. Flatten a small amount of dough, (about 1 1-3 teaspoonfuls for each cookie) in palm of hand. Place a whole drained cherry on circle of dough. Cover cherry by pinching dough up and around it; roll between hands to form smooth ball. Bake on greased baking sheet at 325 deg. Fahr. about 25-30 minutes. While still hot, roll in fine granulated sugar. Makes 3 dozen.

To save food and money, half sugar in the lower part of a double boiler while cereal is cooking in the top.

plate dainty and attractive.

CHERRY FLIPS:

(Courtesy Mrs. Mona M., Regina).

1 cup butter, 1-3 cup icing sugar, 2 egg yolks, 2 cups sifted cake flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 or 2 teaspoons almond flavoring, 30 cherries (drained — and reserve juice for icing).

Cream butter and sugar, add egg yolks and beat well. Blend in flour and salt, sifted together. Add flavoring. Pinch off pieces and press flat in palm of hand. Insert a cherry and fold, and roll dough around it, forming it into a ball. Place on a greased baking sheet and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes or until golden. When cold, dip in thin icing sugar made from 1 1-2 cups icing sugar, 1-3 cup cherry juice. Roll in nuts or coconut. Makes 2 1-3 dozen.

Belts Are More Fanciful Than Ever This Year

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Ideas gleaned from the Paris couture fashion houses offer suggestions for gilding and glorifying a limited wardrobe.

Last year's clothes, like last night's dinner leftovers, often can be recreated into an appetizing new dish if the cook is clever, and the woman has studied and evolved a sound fashion plan.

Starting on the assumption that every woman possesses at least one plain basic dress, one looks for the perfect accoutrements that personify the special new fashion look of winter 1960.

A favorite theme is to give last year's dress a "facelift" with a set of gaddy and glittering new buttons.

Popular buttons in Paris this winter are as large as spectacle lenses, worked in convex shapes of clustered caviar beads.

SPICY BELTS

Anyone with a trim waistline knows the style value of decorative dressmaker belts, more fanciful than ever this winter. Salvage the full skirt of an evening dress to be worn with a simple sweater top, and add the poise of a jeweled or bow-trimmed cummerbund.

Pierre Balmain shows six-inch-wide corselets combining such unlikely media as leopard fur with black velvet. Madeleine de Rauch evolves simple calf belts draped around in serpentine effects with bias cut fabric strips of Paisley, jersey, shantey chiffon or wide ribbon. This idea, matched with a neckline filler or hat of the same fabric would be simple for almost any amateur dressmaker to achieve.

Another dress-up trick for home dressmakers by Nine Ricci's satin cummerbund with oversize bow tied at the front and light embroidery scattered across the ends. In the same mood, beaded fabric belts often provide the only adornment on simple dinner dresses at Lanvin - Castillo and Gres.

PAINFULL ARRIVAL

BOSTON (AP)—A 24-year-old blonde divorcee was showered with a powerful acid when she arrived home at 2 a.m. today and found her 71-year-old former husband there. Mrs. Frances Mustrullo was taken to hospital where a doctor said she suffered first- and second-degree burns to the face and chest. The former husband, Vincent Mustrullo, was arrested at the apartment and charged with suspicion of maiming them.

Bracelets In Pairs Provide Wrist Beauty

It's not always easy to come up with an exciting idea for a personalized Christmas gift sure to please right "off the cuff", but your jeweller advises that the new, shorter-sleeved suits and dresses give an excellent gift clue for Christmas lists this year.

The higher rate of exposure on wrist and forearms showing beneath the sleeves of new ready-to-wear points up the need for a jewelled cover-up — and bracelets — in pairs — are the answer.

There's an exciting new look to fashion's latest bracelets that are designed to give color and eye appeal to new costumes. New bracelets include colorful, dome-shaped beauties, encrusted with bright stones, and others that give a dimensional look through textured metal surfacing. There are twisted effects, octagonal shapes and even metallic fringe accents in new bracelets as well as the classic narrow bangles that remain popular.

Give her bracelets in pairs, suggests your jeweller, for matching jewelled wrists are not only fashionable this gala holiday season, they give balance and eye interest to fashion's new simpler silhouettes.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Hagner Shaw

GIVING A PARTY?

I would like to offer the suggestion that you stop and think before issuing invitations to those to whom you wish to extend hospitality during the coming Christmas festivities. Be kind, and make your invitation specific. Tell your prospective guests what they may expect and then they can act accordingly. .

For example, don't say "cocktails, six to eight," indicating drinks and something to nibble on, nothing more, when you plan to serve a sumptuous buffet with everything from hors d'oeuvres to turkey.

This isn't fair to those you invite. Expecting just cocktails, the recipients of your invitation will undoubtedly make plans for dinner, after attending your party. Completely superfluous, if they had but known. The thoughtful hostess will take the time and trouble to clarify just what form her entertainment is to take. This applies not only to meal planning, but to the old bugaboo of "what to wear, when."

As the printed variety of these parties are on the informal side, the following example of such an invitation may prove helpful. The folded-over informal card is an excellent medium. In the centre of the outside of the card the name may be engraved "Mr. and Mrs. John Fiancis Proper" and the address placed in the lower right hand corner. Plain white cards may also be used, and the name and address handwritten instead of engraved. On the inside of the card, facing you as you open it, may be written "Cocktail Buffet, Tuesday, December 22, 6 to 8." In the lower left hand corner "Please respond" or the initials "R.s.v.p." will indicate that you would appreciate an answer to your invitation.

By using the words "cocktail buffet" you have made it clear what kind of party it is to be. There is no need here to wonder whether one should plan to eat dinner after attending. Obviously a buffet supper is to be served along with the cocktails. The word "cocktails" alone should indicate that only beverages and hors d'oeuvres are to be served.

It isn't necessary to specify what type of clothes should be worn for any party that is supposed to end at eight o'clock, or before. A street-length afternoon dress, or a not too mannishly tailored suit (with hat and accessories), for the ladies and a dark suit with a white shirt and business-like tie for the men is the correct attire for any afternoon function.

If, however, you plan an evening party, one starting at eight o'clock, for example, specify on your invitation whether it's to be a dress-up affair or not. By using the word "informal" you indicate that pretty much the same clothes that would be worn at an afternoon function are in order.

Note: It is perfectly permissable in this case for the ladies not to wear a hat.

For the more formal evening entertaining, placing the words "Black tie" on an invitation indicates that dinner gowns for the ladies and tuxedos for the men are expected. "White tie" of course means full evening dress for both.

One parting suggestion! Never, under any circumstances, type-write an invitation. No matter how informal it may be, always hand-write your desire to extend hospitality to your friends.

Question: I am to be married shortly and I am having quite an argument with my parents. It is my understanding that I pay for my bridesmaids' dresses and it is considered my gift to them. My parents say this is not correct. Please help me out on it.

— Miss J.E.B.

Answer: Your parents are absolutely right. The bride selects the gowns that her attendants wear. However, they pay for them themselves. The bride's gifts to her attendants are usually all the same. Gifts such as jewelry, compacts or anything for their personal adornment are acceptable.

Loneliness Of Scientists May Be Broken

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—The bleak white loneliness of scientists in the Antarctic may be broken during the 1960-61 season.

The first team of women scientists is expected to join the all-male population of McMurdo Base, main American establishment in the South Polar continent.

This was disclosed today by Charles Bentley, University of Wisconsin seismologist, who said "it's time to find out how women would fit into Antarctic life."

He is one of 150 experts attending a 12-country Antarctic symposium on the International Geophysical Year which opened here Tuesday.

"There seems no reason why women should be excluded," Bentley asserted. "Next summer some may be sent to McMurdo. It is one of the bases nearest to civilization and we have some biological and geological work to be done in the dry valleys nearby."

Bentley, who spent two years at isolated Byrd Station in the Western Antarctic, said "We were very comfortable there but missing something. We all thought 'Why not take our families down here?'"

The American women who may go to Antarctica will probably be the first scientists of their sex to do so. But Russians are reported to have women cooks and other non-scientific workers in their Antarctic expeditions.

More and More Women Find Skin-Diving Excellent Sport

VICTORIA (CP) — Anyone for diving—it's the coming thing for the ladies.

So thinks Mrs. Lyle Hayden, vivacious mother of two children who now joins her husband in weekend skin-diving beneath the sea, winter and summer. She says more and more women, both married and single, are finding it a fascinating sport.

"And why not," she asked in an interview. "It's far better to join husband in the depths of the sea than to sit at home worrying about what's happening to him.

"Anyway, if you can't beat 'em, join 'em."

100 MEMBERS IN CLUB

Mrs. Hayden is a member of the Reef Rovers, one of three active clubs in the Victoria area with an active membership of almost 100, including about a dozen women.

But Frank White, who has been diving for years and now is safety director of two of the clubs, says there are some 300 amateur skin-divers in the Victoria area. He has turned this growing interest into a business, and started a diving - equipment supply shop that keeps him busy.

Mr. White, as safety director of his club, has the job of teaching safety techniques to his 50 club members.

"It's so easy for anyone nowadays to put on some breathing equipment and go down and find knowing what they are doing," he says. "Only recently we found one of our members, a boy of only 14, down close to 150 feet and that's just too deep. He suffered no ill-effects but we gave him a lecture."

Properly handled, Mr. White believes diving is as safe as any sport.

Mr. White says the amateur diver finds much to interest him in the depths — exploring, spear fishing, collecting shells and participating in underwater photography—"expensive but the coming thing."

There is as much diving activity, if not more, in winter than in summer. The waters around Victoria's rocky shores are clearer then.

Mrs. Hayden has been diving only seven months but already she's been at deep as 40 feet.

"It's amazing what a diver sees down there," she says. "The waters around our island are filled with sea animals and plants."

She admitted to being "a little frightened at first but once I was down for several minutes I got so wrapped up in the beauties I forgot me I forgot my nervousness."

She recommends skin-diving as a family sport. And she can't wait for the day when her two youngsters, Pattie, 8, and Russell, 4, are old enough to don suits too.

"Then it will be our home away from home—under the sea," she says.

LIKES DIVING — Mrs. Lyle Hayden, a mother of two, is one of about 12 women members of three skin diving clubs in the Victoria area. She has been diving for about seven months and looks forward to the day when her children, Pattie, 8, and Russell, 4, join mom and dad in the water. (CP Photo).

Women's Activities

JOHNSTOWN W. A.

JOHNSTOWN — The polyanthown Women's Association met on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clayton Curtis with a good attendance.

Mrs. C. J. Brunt opened the service with the hymn song and prayer and welcomed the members and visitors present. The Wash-day money and birthday money were received.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Earl Stickle for her kindness in providing the Lady Orange Hall, Front St., Trenton, in which to hold the Interdenominational also to Mrs. Fred Meyers and Mrs. Maitland Harder for accepting the responsibility of the care of the communion table.

The Christmas meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Maitland Harder, with Mrs. Douglas Harry, Mrs. W.S. Harry, Mrs. Arnold Harry and Mrs. Alvin Meyers, in charge of the bake table and Mrs. C. A. Pattesham in charge of the program.

It was decided to exchange gifts at this service, not exceeding $1. each.

A pot-luck supper will be held on the evening of the congregational meeting in January. Each lady will supply an item toward the supper and the hostess of the supper contest will be in charge.

The Bible lesson, found in Ephesians 6th chapter, was read by Mrs. Pattesham, and the story was given by Mrs. W. Smith. Mrs. Fred Meyers read, "Oh Brother's Keeper," and Mrs. W. S. Harry, "The Size of Your Heart." A record of "The Old Rugged Cross" sung by Ernie Ford was played, followed by "When They Ring Those Golden Bells for You and Me." Two poems, "Dirty Dishes," by Mrs. Arnold Harry and "Yesterday and Today" by Mrs. Earl Stickle were read. The meeting closed with the benediction.

A contest was won by Mrs. Arnold Harry.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

O.R.M.T.A. Plans Year's Work

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association was held recently at the home of Mrs. G. H. Rennie 18 Eleanor Gardens, with Mr. John Withers, president, in the chair.

After routine business, Sister Bibiana read a letter from a Council member, telling news of the last council meeting. A letter from the president of the Provincial Registered Music Teachers' Association was read by Mr. Withers, giving information about the new magazine for music teachers which is soon to be published. Mr. Withers also read excerpts from the Federation executive committee meeting held last summer in Calgary.

An agenda was drawn up for the coming year and a number of interesting meetings were planned. A special fee for all teachers will be the December meeting when a member of council is expected to be the speaker and the teachers will have an opportunity to discuss their problems.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a social half hour was enjoyed.

Killed by Truck

NEW DURHAM (CP) — Walter Earl Daniels, 7, of New Durham, was killed Tuesday by a truck as his mother watched from the window of her home.

Police said the boy was let out of a truck, in which he was returning from school, and walked into the path of another truck. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wray Daniels.

NO NEW VOTE

BARRIE (CP)—County Judge D. F. MacLaren said Tuesday he has dismissed an application to hold a second Wasaga Beach municipal election. Maurice Bent, defeated candidate for reeve had said unqualified persons had voted in the August election. Bent himself was later found to have voted when unqualified.

Kiwanis Presents 'Mountain Holiday'

On Thursday evening in the Collegiate auditorium, lovers of adventure will be treated to another delightful travelogue, "A California Mountain Holiday," second this year in the Kiwanis Travelogue Series. The narrator will be Mr. Stan Midgley.

Mr. Midgley, a graduate in chemistry from Princeton University during the depression, decided that for "chemistry's good" he would seek another vocation, that of vacations. His first vacation-travelogue movie centred around a bicycle trip in Utah, for which he won first prize of $1,000 in a nation-wide contest. Since then he has become the "Mark Twain" of the camera.

The California Mountain Holiday will take his audience through its finest playgrounds from sea level up, beginning at the sea shore in the Redwood empire of Northern California, winding up months later on top the highest mountain in the United States.

Between the sea level and the mountain peak are many wonders, some well known, and some least known: many far off the beaten track in unspoiled wilderness, as well as play resorts, national parks, and more than 5,000 lakes and waterfalls: mighty trees; sandy deserts and icy glaciers, in short one of the finest travelogues ever produced.

Point Anne

POINT ANNE — Several men from here have left for the north country to hunt deer.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. William Juby and family in the death of his sister and her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Royal of Belleville, who died on Wednesday morning in the Belleville General Hospital.

Congratulations to the proud parents on the arrival of their baby babies: to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sedore, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mitchell, a daughter, and to Mr. and Mrs. Graham Hancock, a daughter. All babies were born recently in Belleville General Hospital.

The weekly euchre club was held at the home of Mrs. Alvon Lloyd. Winners were: Mrs. Agnes Whalen, Mrs. Pearl Genereaux, and low, Mrs. Eva Juby. After euchre was concluded Mrs. Lloyd served refreshments and a social evening was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Bradshaw had tea on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Akey at Canada Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Akey and family spent Sunday at Bancroft with Mrs. Rene Parks and family.

ORANGE SOCIAL

In the Orange hall at Point Anne on Friday evening the Orangemen held a social evening for their friends and friends. An enjoyable and pleasant evening was spent by all playing euchre and dancing. Euchre winners were: ladies, first, Mrs. Percy Akey; low, Georgie Botting; men's first, Mr. Wesley Gray, Mr. J. Henry; low, Howard Botting; lone hands, Percy Akey. Dancing was then enjoyed by both old and young to music provided by Mr. Charlie Thorn and his orchestra.

Refreshments were served after which Bro. Earl Brown, past master, extended a vote of thanks to all present.

2nd Sidney

2nd SIDNEY — The Bay of Quinte Institute held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Palmer of Bayside, on Wednesday evening, with a good attendance.

Mrs. Sandwick presided.

At the business session it was moved that the March meeting and February meeting be exchanged.

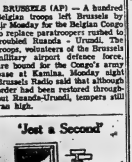
Mr. H. A. Sowerbutts will give a pottery program at the March meeting which will be held at Bayside school.

A donation was made to World Refugees in answer to the provincial president, Anne Hegerty's plea, each one has a responsibility to those people, so they are going to try to take them out of the camps.

Mrs. Fred Wilson, who is in charge of resolutions opened her program with a moment of silence, it was Armistice Day. She also read a couple of poems pertaining to this day.

PANEL DISCUSSION

A panel on "Resolutions" was held by Mrs. F. Wilson and Mrs. C. Holmes with one asking questions and the other answering them. Mrs. Wilson said "from resolutions we find out what people think. Several laws of Canada have been passed because of the Women's Institutes sending in resolutions, such as a degree course for OBC and in five years this came to pass, also asking the government to have flour bags made of something that would be useful around the house and that the Indians were better cared for.



Mrs. Palmer gave a hilarious reading "Kind of Hogs Not to Raise," which was supposed to be a letter from a farmer in the U.S.A.

A contest was given and won by Mrs. Don Sandercock. Another was won by Mrs. C. Holmes and Mrs. Arnold Ketchem. Mrs. Cecil Jeffery won the lucky cup prize. Mrs. Percy Ketchem had the nearest birthday.

Refreshments were served.

TEMPERS STILL HIGH

BRUSSELS (AP) — A hundred Belgian troops left Brussels by air Monday for the Belgian Congo to replace paratroopers rushed to troubled Ruanda - Urundi. The troops, volunteers of the Brussels military airport defence force, are bound for the Congo's army base at Kamina. Monday night Brussels Radio said that although order had been restored throughout Ruanda-Urundi, tempers still ran high.

Busy Shipping Season Looms For Canada's All-Weather Ports; Quebec City Benefits

By ROBERT RICE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prospects of a fairly busy winter shipping season loom this winter for Canada's all-weather ports.

One inland port not normally considered a winter harbor is looking to a sharp increase in activity during the icy months from December to next April.

This port is Quebec City, about 400 miles from the salt water of the Atlantic.

Quebec shipping sources say they expect between 22 and 25 ships to arrive during the winter. The port had one caller last winter.

MARITIMERS PROTEST

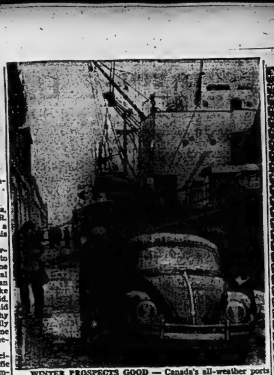
"Extensive damage" will be caused to Maritime seaboard ports by winter shipping on the lower St. Lawrence, the royal commission on transportation was told recently by the Saint John Board of Trade, backed by the Halifax Board of Trade.

E. H. Smith, executive director of the port and industrial bureau of Saint John, told the commission that the winter navigation "will cause a chain reaction that must eventually produce the loss of all winter trade by Canadian ports."

While other Canadian ports won't see such a massive jump in ship arrivals as Quebec they are generally optimistic about trade.

Halifax, Vancouver and Victoria anticipate good activity.

"It will probably be as high during the winter as it has been during the summer," says Capt. B. D. L. Johnson, Vancouver port manager.



AFFECTED BY STRIKE

A 69-day lumber strike affected Vancouver shipping to a certain extent this summer and total tonnage was down about three per cent from 1958. However, waterfront activity was also hit in 1958, and tonnage then was down about 11 per cent from 1957 largely because of a prolonged dockside strike.

Capt. Johnson based his prediction for a good winter on the trend of grain shipments, which he says are no longer seasonal. Export of grain, apparently moving through Vancouver largely at the expense of Montreal, has become consistent throughout the whole year, he said.

The British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association reports that lumber exports are starting to pick up, and that business more favorable on the docks.

Victoria, handling about a tenth of the traffic moving through Vancouver, also expects winter traffic to keep pace

WINTER PROSPECTS GOOD — Canada's all-weather ports —and one inland port not normally considered a winter harbor— are looking forward to a busy winter shipping season. The port of Quebec, which had only one caller last winter, expects 25 this year. Two ice-breakers will be employed to keep the inland harbor open. Dock workers at Halifax are shown here unloading European-manufactured cars during 1957 winter operations. Ship in background awaits a load of grain. (CP Photo).

Alberta Tries to Maintain Reputation as Only Populated Rat-Free Area in N. America

Actions Stupid, Not Criminal, Says Judge

EDMONTON (CP)—Alberta is waging a relentless battle to maintain its reputation as the only populated rat-free area in North America.

"The rats invade the province's western boundary in the summer and are wiped out in the winter.

"Then one night soon we patrol—full time—along the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary," says J. B. (Joe) Gurba, superintendent of the department's pest control department which conducts a systematic campaign to wipe out rats.

"They make farm checks and advise the farmers whether they have rat colonies and how to act. Most farmers are public rodents," he said.

BOUNDARY PROBLEM

Rats, likely, live only where there are people, are a problem only on the 300 miles along the Alberta - Saskatchewan boundary from the international border to Lord Lake, 25 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Areas along Alberta's northern, southern and western borders present no problem because of natural barriers. In addition, the Rocky Mountains form a natural barrier against invasion from the west.

Rats, which caused an estimated $10 million damage, have been found at times 30 miles inside Alberta. "But they were only odd ones," said Mr. Gurba. "We have kept them in check for years.

They move 12 to 13 miles inside Alberta each year, usually when they can live in the fields. They must find winter quarters before the first frost sets in to establish themselves. That's when we step up our wipe them out," Mr. Gurba said.

Medicine Hat, a city of 21,000 persons, south Alberta 30 miles from the Saskatchewan boundary, is the department's headquarters.

The CPR transcontinental line and the Trans-Canada Highway both pass through Medicine Hat. Considerable unloading is done in the city.

"The heavy traffic and farm shipping, including baled hay, make a special rat problem in Medicine Hat," Mr. Gurba said.

At one time, experimental rat - killer from Winnipeg was hired by the provincial government department, with its employees and the co-operation of city officials, to individual farmers, directs the flight.

The poison, warfarin and pival, are widely used. They take four or five days to kill, by causing internal bleeding, and are safer to use, safer for both humans and livestock, present. Now

USE GASES TOO

Poison gases also are used to kill them in the fall when they are under the ground.

The department is doing some extermination on a local basis, but nothing on a provincial level.

"Some municipalities are very good about the extermination of everyone all the time. All the good work it erases is a couple of years when nothing is done," Mr. Gurba said.

Some idea of the rat problem can be gained by the fact that a female rat can produce 15 litters and the litter averages 10. Under ideal conditions, one pair of adults and their offspring, 1,500,000 rats in three years.

HEAVY DAMAGE

Rats cost the United States reports rat damage estimated at 1,000,000,000 a year. Canada is estimated at $375,000,000 in Canada.

One official said the easiest way to keep the province rat-free is to keep a check on the supply and places where they can nest.

"Rats can't live without manmade food and shelter."

The rats of Alberta's fight only a small portion of what the rat is $1,000 annually. But this is against the rodents is estimated cost to residents would be if no efforts were made.

Forty years ago Saskatchewan was rat-free. The animals overran the province nine years ago.

Demolition Crew Changing Face of Piccadilly Circus

LONDON (CP)—A demolition crew smashed through the old buildings of Piccadilly Circus Tuesday, a fierce attack was launched in Parliament against other historic structures that will replace them.

Commons and Lords lashed out in unison against the £7,000,000 13 - storey building that will change the face of Piccadilly.

They used such terms as "vulgar," "prostitution," and "unthinkable" in pleading for a halt to the modernization program around "the heart of the British Commonwealth."

As they spoke, workmen hurled through the advertisement - fronted buildings on the north side of the Circus. Within a few weeks they will be flattened.

"What has London done in all its glorious history to deserve this?" asked Lord Conesford.

"No other nation in Europe would permit this prostitution of the centre of their capital."

In the Commons, similar criticism was voiced. Kenneth Robinson, a Labor MP, said the new building would be "vulgar and unimaginative."

BOLSTER ATTACK

Lord Beveridge bolstered with blasts from Anerin Bevan, deputy Labor leader, and Sir Desmond, Liberal leader. Conservatives entered the battle, too.

Housing Minister Henry Brooke said he didn't want to take any responsibility himself. The London County Council, which had approved the design.

But the London companies are behind the project and they intend to go ahead with the controversial late next year. Like existing buildings, they are covered with advertisements, and a permanent crane will swivel on the roof. Height: 387 feet.

Unlike other structures in the area, it will be a modern, contemporary design. The new building, including offices, exhibition halls, restaurants and shops, will be built farther back from the circus to allow wider new structures—still in the planning stage —erected on the statue of Eros. Piccadilly will become a rectangle.

Company Closed Ten Breweries Court Is Told

TORONTO (CP) — The Supreme Court of Ontario was told Tuesday Canadian Breweries Limited, a chain of 10 plants operating a combine, closed 19 breweries it acquired in the 1930s to cut

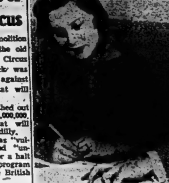
Crown prosecutor H. F. Wilson told the court Canadian Breweries Limited threw other breweries over which it had gained control because it wanted to.

Kris A. Mapp, Toronto chartered accountant, gave testimony that showed Canadian Breweries' net profits increased out of eight Ontario firms and two in Manitoba.

Mr. Mapp said the Taylor and Bate plant, acquired in 1930, Welland Breweries in 1934, Riverside Brewing Corporation in 1935, Hofler Brewing Company in 1939, Hazel Brewing Limited in 1941, Dominion Brewery prior to Oct. 31, 1941, Grant's Spring Brewery in 1945, Crown in 1955, Hamilton Brewing Association prior to Oct. 31, 1952, Empire Brewery prior to Oct. 31, 1956, and Kiewel Brewing Company after Oct. 31, 1953, in 1952. Mr. Wilson said previous evidence had shown that the London, Ont., brewery of the Carling company was sold by 1940.

The Crown case added that Bodega Service Brewing Company of Canada Limited, Reinhardt Brewery Company Limited, City Club Breweries Limited, Walkerville Brewery Limited and Tecumseh Brewery Limited, all in Ontario were eliminated after Canadian Breweries obtained control.

LED IN SALES



Vancouver chartered accountants Dodwell and Selman testified to the Canadian Breweries' share of the beer market.

He said sales in Ontario increased from 11.2 per cent in 1931 to 59.9 per cent in 1958. He added that in Ontario John Labatt Limited had increased 11.2 per cent of the province's beer sales in 1931 while Molson's had 3.7 per cent. In 1958, Labatt's had 29.7 per cent of the Ontario sales and Molson's 16.1.

Canadian breweries' revenue from beer sales increased in Ontario and Quebec amounted to $146,-713,000 in 1955 and $161,173,659 in 1958, Mr. Mapp said.

TRESPASS AGAINST INDIA

SRINAGAR, India (Reuters)—Communist Chinese have built an airfield on Indian territory on Aksaichin Plateau in Ladakh, according to a report considered reliable, received by the Kashmir state government.

SUCCESSFUL IMMIGRANT — Bob Grant, 39, engineering personnel administrator at Avro Aircraft Limited, Toronto, is one of many post-war immigrants who have helped ease a shortage of professional and skilled workers in Canada. Mr. Grant, a wartime pilot and graduate of the University of Manchester, came to Canada 9½ years ago. He is shown here in his office with secretary Evelyn Kelley. (CP Photo).

Many Undesirable Persons Seeking Entry to Canada as Immigrants Checked by Dept.

OTTAWA (CP) — No country supplies the United States with as many professional and technical workers as Canada.

They flow across the border in search of higher pay and greater opportunity at a higher rate and in more volume than they arrive from any of the five main countries which the U.S. draws immigrants.

Among them are scientists and engineers, teachers, doctors, nurses, teachers, auditors and accountants and clergymen.

Nearly one-fifth of Canadians with occupations who decided to stake their future in the U.S. in the five-year period from 1953 to 1957 were in professional groups. About one - third were skilled or semi-skilled workers.

FIGURES SHORTAGE

There are the two labor fields in which Canada has experienced a serious shortage in the past few years.

But Canada has more than offset this loss of trained Canadians and met a growing demand for professional and skilled workers by a vigorous immigration program in Europe. Since 1945 there have been eased by an increasing number of professional and skilled workers graduating from Canadian universities and technical training institutions.

The U.S. Immigration Service says that Canada in 1953-57 supplied the American labor market with the highest percentage of professional, professional and technical workers.

"No single country in Europe was as large a source," the service says. "The only factors of percentage, but in total volume, more professional and technical workers from Canada."

Of 141,849 Canadians admitted to the U.S. in 1953-57 as immigrants, 70,400 had occupations. Some 14,000 were professionals and 20,000 were skilled workers.

200,462 NEWCOMERS

Immigration to Canada in this period totalled 200,462 and included 211,343 professional, skilled and semi-skilled workers.

Immigration Minister Fairclough said in a statement these figures show the extent to which Canada is acquiring valuable people and assets of experience whose education and training has been at the expense of other countries.

Bringing such people to Canada was the only way to offset the loss of trained Canadians through emigration. It could be argued that immigrants to the highly-trained skills need professions caused unemployment, she said.

"The inflow to Canada of skilled immigrants has been a primary factor in excess of departures to the U.S. in all but a few callings, notably nursing.

An average of 1,100 trained Canadians were emigrated to the U.S. annually in the 1953-57 period. In the same period 1,248 nurses came to Canada annually, mostly from Europe.

LOSS WELL-COVERED

Canadian engineers who went to the U.S. in that period averaged 685 annually. But this loss was more than made up by the 2,000 engineers who came to Canada in each of the five years.

A total of 150 doctors left Canada annually for the U.S. but 439 arrived as immigrants. The comparative figure for teachers was 330 compared with arrivals of 1,-114 and for auditors and accountants it was 22 as against 458.

Canada ranked third among the five countries which com- sons bined supplied the U.S. with 58 U.S. immigrants in 1953-57.

Movement of American immigrants to Canada in the five years was far below the number of Canadians who went to the U.S. Arrivals in the 1953-57 period totalled 50,666, an average of 10,-133 annually.

Emigration to the U.S. accounts for the bulk of Canadian losses to other countries. In the last 10 years this movement has averaged about 20,000 annually.

For every seven immigrants who entered Canada in the five-year period from 1948 to 1957 one person left Canada for the U.S. Canada for every 10 persons who entered Canada nearly three persons left.

But emigration to the U.S. in the five years 1953-57 is only a fraction of the 10,000 annual movement of the 1920s. Emigration once was so heavy that by 1931, 86 per cent of Canada's 1940 year population rise from 2,600,-000 in 1851 was, due to natural increase.

While 7,109,000 immigrants arrived in that period, 6,500,000 persons emigrated, nearly all to the

Gov.-General Pays Official Visit to Fair

TORONTO (CP) — Governor-General Vanier paid an official visit to the Royal Winter Fair Tuesday night. It was his first fair since he assumed the office.

During a colorful ceremony he inspected a guard of honor formed by cadets of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and later presented the Governor-General's Cup to Toronto's Gaylands Farm.

Gen. Vanier gave the red-uniformed cadets an old soldier's scrutiny as he walked down the ranks, and later doffed his top hat as they marched past the reviewing stand.

Earlier Gen. Vanier toured the fair in a motorized golf cart, accompanied by Mrs. Vanier. They spent most of their time in the Queen Elizabeth Building.

Judging for the flower show began Monday.

Three Girls Die In Montreal and Hamilton Fire

By The Canadian Press

Four separate fires in Ontario and Quebec Tuesday took the lives of three young girls, destroyed four business establishments and a warehouse and damaged two homes.

Two of the girls died of smoke inhalation in the Montreal business fire in northeast Montreal Tuesday night. They were Jeanne Frechette, 2, and her sister, Diane, 2. Their mother, Mrs. Alice Frechette, 30, was overcome but is in good condition in hospital.

The other death was that of Roxanne Green, who was found in a Hamilton fire that swept through her home and spread to two others. Her brother, Kenneth, 2, was rescued but suffered first and second degree burns.

The four establishments were destroyed when fire raced through a two-storey brick building on Ottawa Street in Hamilton, Ont., Tuesday night. Damage was estimated at $40,000.

Five firemen escaped injury when they ran for their lives as one wall of the building collapsed in a shower of embers.

The other fire was early Tuesday at Kingston, where a downtown warehouse was burned out and an adjoining apartment building damaged. Damage was estimated at $38,000. No one was injured.

Red Deputy Premier Mikoyan Makes 14-Hour Halifax Stop On Journey to Mexico City

HALIFAX (CP) — One of the world's most powerful Communists, Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan, slept Tuesday night in his city where Canadians fought for their first responsible government.

But he was up before dawn to pursue his 7,100-mile flight from Moscow to Mexico City. His four engine turbo-prop Ilyushin aircraft took off from the nearby Shearwater airport at 5:36 a.m. after a 14½ hour stopoff.

Across the street from his bedroom window Mr. Mikoyan could see the bold outline of a memorial to Canadians who died fighting Russians in the Crimean War more than 100 years ago.

Premier Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia told Mr. Mikoyan Tuesday night: "I sincerely hope that in the last time such a thing will happen."

The Soviet leader said "we want only peace among all peoples—peaceful co-existence."

RECALL NOVY FIGHT

They spoke at Province House, where Joseph Howe, Nova Scotia's most famous patriot, led the fight for freedom of the press and responsible government for the people.

"The responsible government," the premier said, "we mean a government that changes with the will of the people rather than by domination of the crown. . . . We have always been greatly concerned our equality under the law."

Mr. Mikoyan said he appreciated the respect Canadians have for "your traditions, your democratic institutions." He said the Russians were not such evil people as they were painted.

"Many people speak about us Russians. They say: 'We want war.' Those are lies! They demand peace. Do they really want war?"

Wearing a spoon to emphasize his point, Mr. Mikoyan said: "We are Marxists — Socialists — and Socialists have a right to build as they wish — nobody seems to understand us. They think we eat this with our things."

He said "The standard of living in Canada is high. You are richer than we are. To catch up with you we have to work hard."

GREETS PLANE

Fisheries Minister MacLean greeted the Soviet visitor at the airport for the federal government.

Mr. Mikoyan drew only small crowds as he was driven through the city.

RCMP and city police mobilized a guard around the hotel. A group of Hungarian immigrants gave a cool reception as the Mikoyan drove up from a press conference a few blocks away. A person refused to shake Mikoyan's hand.

CD VITAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Forces master-General William Hamilton said Tuesday night that the Fournier Tuesday night said as all-out nuclear war is highly unlikely but that does not lessen the importance of civil defence, Mr. Hamilton, speaking with Mayor Fournier to a civil defence meeting in suburban Pointe Claire, admitted there had been some confusion in the past over the role of civil defence but he decided it will be "clarified" in the near future.

Cigaret Smoking Could Cause Bronchitis

LONDON (AP) — A pack of cigarets a day for 30 years can make you turn blue and cause your lungs to lose elasticity, a British physician said Tuesday.

Dr. Brian Flavelle, consultant physician at London's St. Stephen's Hospital, said cigaret smoking is the biggest single cause of bronchitis.

He wrote in the Medical Press, a publication for British doctors.

"Some 30 years is required at 30 cigarets a day to produce symptoms of bronchitis and other effects, including inelastic lungs in about one-fifth of smokers."

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — A leading Danish cancer specialist proposed Tuesday a red "danger" mark on cigarets to cut down lung cancer.

Dr. Tage Sondergaard told the newspaper Ekstrabladet in an interview: "The last 3¾ centimetres (about 1½ inches) of a cigaret are the most dangerous. Sondergaard said every eighth heavy cigaret smoker died of lung cancer.

Kingston Man Charged With Theft of Cigarettes

KINGSTON (CP)—Police Tuesday charged Ronald Gerald Hall, 20, of Kingston with theft of cigarettes valued at $1,000 from a warehouse here.

Hall was arrested after police found 1,000 cartons of cigarettes in a car he was driving.

Mikoyan Gets Chuckles From Press Conference

HALIFAX (CP)—Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan got chuckles from a press conference Tuesday for his deft parry of questions relating to sport and television.

Would he care to predict that Canada will beat Russia again in the next world hockey championship?

"I can't give answers so far in advance without fear of making a mistake."

Did he know what was happening to last year's champions (Belleville McFarlands)?

"I don't follow this sport too much. My sons are great hockey fans."

Operation of the McFarlands recently brought about an investigation by Belleville's Board of Control.

What was the reaction in Russia about the United States television quiz forces?

"I am not aware of this but when I was asked about the American TV . . . I did or didn't know."

Former Member For Frontenac Dies Suddenly

KINGSTON (CP)—David John Rankin, 56, former member of the Ontario legislature for Frontenac-Addington, died suddenly here Tuesday night after being stricken with a heart attack at his home in Collins Bay Monday.

Mr. Rankin represented Frontenac-Addington from 1943 until this year's provincial election, when he was ousted as Progressive Conservative candidate by L. R. Descoteau. He followed in the footsteps of his father who represented the South Frontenac riding in the provincial house for more than 15 years.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Robert Kennedy (Marion) of Guelph and a nephew.

Sekou Toure of Guinea Doing All Right in Visits to Allies

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

For a young man who left school at 13, smiling Sekou Toure is doing all right as an international salesman of goodwill.

In visits to Allied capitals, the president of Guinea is charming with a dazzling personality and left a trail of superlatives in his wake.

"Almost electrifying" says Ghana's Nkrumah of the tall, slender politician who is Guinea's president, prime minister, foreign minister and planning minister.

His intelligence and capacity to work around the clock are a subject of wonder to his colleagues.

"A whirlwind," says the observer.

From these comments, it can be guessed that Western officials may be revising their views on this magnetic man who is Africa's newest black leader.

Sekou Toure's decision to vote "no" in the referendum which gave Guinea its independence from France brought about a split with General de Gaulle, left the young African nationalist without an ally in the world's power politics.

There is a Canadian economic interest in Guinea. Bauxites du Midi, French subsidiary of Aluminium Limited, has a $13,000,000 mining operation under way on Los Island, off the Guinea coast, and the Canadian inter ests are considering a large $163,000,000 enterprise at Boke north of Conakry. Much depends on the international market for aluminium.

French-Speaking Members Given More Chances to Talk With New House System

By JOHN H. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian House of Commons has taken an important step toward increased bilingualism.

A simultaneous interpretation system, used for the first time last session, has resulted in a big increase in the volume and frequency of French speeches by both English- and French-speaking members.

Last session French was spoken on 332 occasions, compared with 884 in the 1957-58 session, more than a three-fold increase.

The proportion of French spoken in the 1950 session amounted to 10 per cent of the wordage recorded in Hansard, verbatim report of Commons debates. This compares with three per cent or less before installation of the simultaneous interpretation system.

BOTH OFFICIAL

Under the terms of Confederation, both English and French are recognized as official languages for parliamentary debates. But since 1867 the use of English has always been greater than French.

More French was used immediately after Confederation than today because the proportion of Quebec members was greater at that time. Its use declined with the entry into Confederation of Prince Edward Island and the western provinces.

French has been used only sparingly in recent years because English-speaking members have been in the majority. Many French-speaking members in previous sessions also spoke English out of courtesy to English-speaking colleagues who were not bilingual.

Now, the interpreting system, employing a staff of seven interpreters, has made it possible for French-speaking members to speak in their own tongue and be understood by English - speaking members. It also is helping the few French members without a command of English to understand speeches made in English.

1958-59 ESTIMATE

Henriot Mayer, chief of debates translation and interpretation, estimates that from 1950 until the first session of the current Parliament from May to September, 1953, the amount of French spoken was three per cent or less of the wordage recorded in Hansard.

In the 1957-58 session, lasting from October, 1957, to February, 1958, the proportion of French spoken was about 3.2 per cent. This increased to about six per cent in the 1958 session before the interpretation system was installed.

The reason was that more members of the Liberal Opposition were French-speaking than in the days of the Conservative Opposition. During the Liberal administration most French-speaking members were on the government side and spoke infrequently and then often in English.

With the installation of the interpretation system last session, the amount of French spoken rose to 10 per cent.

Out of 75 sitting days in the 1957-58 session, there were 36 days in which only English was used during debates. Last session, in 127 sitting days, there were only 16 days in which only English was spoken.

USED 882 TIMES

The 882 occasions in which French was used last session included 701 speeches or brief statements by 56 French - speaking members, and 81 speeches by 24 English members.

In the 1957 - 58 session French was used on 264 occasions. Fifty-two French members spoke 222 times and 16 English members spoke 42 times.

"There were three days in the 1958 session," Mr. Mayer said, "when the proportion of French accounted for 20 of the day's 80 pages of Hansard. This has been unheard of for many years."

It's doubtful that more French than English will ever be spoken in a single Commons sitting. However, this could happen on a day in which a French-speaking private member's bill of special interest to Quebec is before the House.

Before installation of the interpretation system, French speeches usually were restricted to the throne speech and budget debates or to private bills sponsored by French-speaking members. Speeches were intended more for consumption of voters back home than for the benefit of other members.

NOTABLE CHANGE

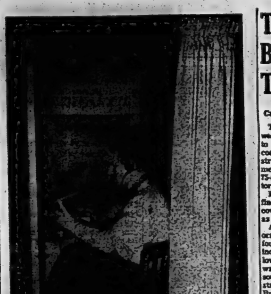
But this pattern has changed. During the last session most French-speaking members spoke in their own tongue on all main debates and in discussion of departmental spending estimates.

The most noticeable change was during the opening period of the day's sitting when members direct questions to ministers.

In past sessions, most French-speaking members asked their questions in English, many of them with a heavy French accent. But last session they spoke in their mother tongue.

An English - speaking minister received simultaneously an English translation provided by an interpreter and answered in English. The interpreter then passed his answer to the questioner in French.

Sometimes, an English - speaking minister ventured briefly into French with such stock phrases as "Oui" (yes) or "Non" (no) or "Je prendrai la question comme avis et repondrai plus tard" (I shall take the question as notice and reply later).



TRY OUT FRENCH

Occasionally, too, English-speaking ministers gave a full, direct answer in French, albeit somewhat haltingly.

Such efforts were always warmly applauded by Commons members as a whole.

The only translator who works in either language—from French to English or English to French is Raymond Robichaud of Ottawa. Anthony Martin, a Briton, interprets only from French to English. Other members of the interpreting staff of six translate only from English to French. They are Mrs. Valerie Sylt of Montreal; Raymond Auyp, a naturalized Canadian from France; Ernest Plante and Maurice Roy, both of Ottawa.

The interpreters listen to speakers over earphones hooked to the Commons amplifying system and translate simultaneously. If a speaker uses figures they will occasionally jot them down; otherwise they do no writing.

He is shown practising in a special booth in the west block of the Parliament buildings. Mr. Auyp, who translates to French from English, learned basic English in France but became proficient in the language during the eight years he has lived in Canada. (CP Photo).

Thirty Years Ago Tidal Wave Brought Death, Destruction To Nfld. Fishing Settlement

By JAMES R. HUSSEY
Canadian Press Correspondent

Thirty years ago today a tidal wave, the worst catastrophe ever to strike Newfoundland's south coast, brought death and destruction to the fishing settlements of the Burin Peninsula, a 75-mile-long boot-shaped promontory jutting out into the Atlantic.

Monday, Nov. 18, 1929, was a fine, sunny day and people in the coves and villages were working as usual.

About 5 p.m. severe earth tremors were felt throughout Newfoundland and the Maritime provinces. These shocks were followed at 7.30 by a huge tidal wave all along the Newfoundland south coast. Within two hours destruction was general around the Burin Peninsula.

22 LIVES LOST

Twenty-seven people, mostly women and children, were drowned and battered to death in several settlements. Property damage amounted to $2,000,000.

Houses, barns, wharves, fishing boats and equipment drifted out to sea. In some places buildings were washed far inland and smashed to pieces. What had been neat little garden plots and children's playgrounds lay covered with wreckage and boulders.

In one settlement a house was found in a pond 300 feet from its original site. The building was demolished and had summerged. On the lower floor a mother and her three children were drowned. Upstairs a small baby lay in its cot unharmed.

A rescue ship found one house fast at sea. A woman inside was still burning in a top storey room. Downstairs a mother and her child lay drowned by the swirling waters.

Because communications were knocked out between the peninsula and St. John's, the Newfoundland capital, it was three days before the first message about the disaster reached the rest of the island and the outside world.

The message was sent by wireless from the Newfoundland Railway's board "yacht", which was on her way up the coast. In those days there were few roads and no direct overland connections between the peninsula and St. John's.

On the western tip of the peninsula the hardest-hit settlement was Point au Gaul in the Lamaline area. Near Burin is Point au Gaul in the little village of Port au Bras. Here six lives were lost. Thomas Fudge, a fisherman, saw his house, with his wife and two daughters imprisoned inside, washed from its foundations and swept to destruction.

Through the night men and women performed great deeds of heroism. In the darkness, people climbed floating buildings to search for survivors. Men, forcing their way through the doors and windows of half-submerged houses and then swimming and leaping to safety with women and children in their arms, were common sight.

Next morning relief parties in 46 settlements saw quantities of food that had been stored for the winter washed up on the beaches. Furniture, houses, hay from cattle barns, boats and fishing equipment drifted with the tide.

In some places the tidal wave rose 50 to 60 feet. When it receded it swept everything before it. At other harbors the water took a rotary motion, sweeping large buildings from one point of land to another.

In addition to direct losses fishermen on the south coast suffered for more than a decade because of the disaster. All marine growth was swept clean and it was not until the early 1940s that cod and other fish began to return to the local fishing grounds.

When the disaster became known to the outside world relief committees were set up and money poured in from all over the island, the Canadian mainland, Britain, the United States and other countries.

Says Oversight To Be Corrected In 1961 Models

TORONTO (CP)—Attorney-General Roberts and Transport Minister Yaremko criticized Tuesday the Big Three automobile makers for building cars wider than the 80-inch limit permitted by Ontario regulations.

If they exceed that width, the cross is on the driver to place a green or amber light at the front left top of the vehicle and a red light at the left rear top.

Mr. Roberts, who said width was a problem not only of safety but of road space, said it's up to the manufacturers "to give a good explanation and make changes in their assembly lines. We're going to alert them pretty fast."

Mr. Yaremko said it would be unfair to penalize driver and his department was seriously considering recommending changes to put the onus on the manufacturer and the vendors to cut down the size or put on the required lights.

Nine 1960 models produced by the big three companies exceed the limit by amounts ranging from a fraction of an inch to more than an inch.

Edwin Walker, president of General Motors of Canada, said there had been an oversight which would be corrected in the 1961 models. Frank Hogan, vice-president of staff for Chrysler of Canada, said his company would have to get back in line unless the law was changed.

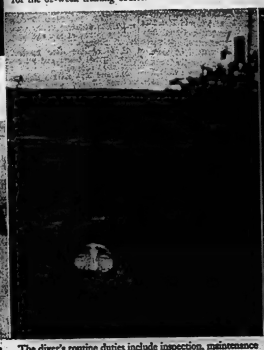
School for Frogmen

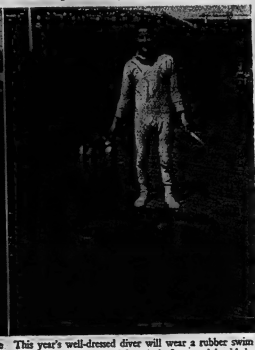
Top of the Crop Goes Under

A small but active unit of the Canadian Navy has established an enviable reputation for itself during its brief 5-year history. Officially formed in February 1954 as the RCN Clearance Diving Branch, its beginnings go back to 1949 when the growing need for a mine disposal organization was recognized. Today the unit consists of a small peacetime nucleus geared to expand as needed in time of emergency. Above, an instructor takes 3 trainees on a "dry dive" in a recompression chamber, their physical and psychological reactions are carefully noted.



A wide variety of duties have taken Canada's underwater sailors to chilly Arctic waters and to many inland lakes and rivers. At Lake Winnipeg, near Gimli, Manitoba, Frogmen cut through 4 feet of ice to dive for the wreckage of a jet aircraft. Working underwater for 2½ hours at a stretch, divers recovered 2,000 pounds of the plane in a two-week operation.

National Film Board of Canada Photos by Chris Lund.



Trainees are recruited from naval personnel on a voluntary basis. They must be 25 years of age or under, able to pass a strict medical and mental examination, before qualifying for the 62-week training course.

Men who show no signs of claustrophobia in the recompression chamber sometimes revolt at being sealed in a diving suit. By the end of the course, only the best in the class are graduated as qualified divers.

The diver's routine duties include inspection, maintenance and repairs to ships' hulls and jetties, salvage operations and underwater demolition jobs as well as dealing with any enemies that may be washed ashore.

This year's well-dressed diver will wear a rubber swim suit, tight fitting hood and face mask, fins, a weighted belt, aqua-lung breathing apparatus which contains pure air, and angora wool underwear.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — On Sunday morning Mr. Harold Brimmell of Madoc, guest speaker for the Ontario Temperance Federation, spoke on John 12:21, "Sir, we would see Jesus." He gave many pertinent facts on alcohol. He also assisted Rev. Roy Rickard, B. A. The choir sang, "Yield Not to Temptation," with Mrs. W. Jeffery as pianist. An offering was taken for temperance work.

White's Women's Association under the leadership of Mrs. Ernest Curtis and her "Drones", held a successful rummage sale at the Belleville Armouries on Saturday, despite the inclement weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Nowton Demille and family were Sunday evening supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cross.

A number of local teachers attended the Banquet at the Superior Restaurant, Napanee on Friday evening, and enjoyed the illustrated talk on the Upper Canada Village and Parks Development given by Mr. G. W. Arthurs, public relations officer for Ontario St. Lawrence Development. Following this, the delegates to the federation convention, Mrs. Duff and Mrs. Jack McLaren, gave their reports.

The guest speaker creates a desire in each one to visit the development at Chrysler's farm and offered his services as a guide to a group of interested teachers. It is expected the completed project will attract tourists by the thousands from all parts of Canada and the United States as well.

The interesting reports brought back from Toronto also stimulated a desire on the part of each teacher to attend a summer federation convention held each year in Toronto.

Ring Sleuths May Produce Startling Fight Disclosures

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congressional sleuths have uncovered evidence which a Senate committee lawyer said Tuesday will produce "a big fight disclosure at a prizefight hearing next year."

Big names from the ring and from the underworld will be drawn into the investigation as the Senate anti - monopoly subcommittee attempts to decide whether boxing needs a federal housecleaning.

Paul Rand Dixon, the lawyer, declined to name fighters who would be questioned but said the inquiry as planned would necessarily involve mysterious dealings behind the ingemar Johansson-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title bout promotion last June.

Named as shady characters already have come out in public investigations of the champion ship fight which Johansson won in New York. There has been no charge that the bout itself was rigged but there have been complaints that its promotion was tainted by irregularities.

STUDY JORDAN CASE

Dixon indicated that the subcommittee probably would look into the tangled case of welterweight champ Don Jordan, his manager and allegations that efforts were made to muscle in on Jordan's ring earnings.

That brings in Frankie Carbo, who recently pleaded guilty in New York to an undercover rule as manager and matchmaker. He and Frank (Blinky) Paterno, former fight manager with a police record, are among five men charged in Los Angeles with conspiring to extort money from Don Nesseth, Jordan's manager, and Jackie Leonard, west coast promoter.

Jordan, a chum of onetime gangland figure Mickey Cohen, has split with Nesseth.

"With the information and material we are working on, I think there will be some startling developments," Dixon said.

Meanwhile in New York, District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Tuesday his office has taken legal action in Miami to require Anthony (Fat Tony) Salerno, alleged "Mr. X" in the Patterson-Johansson fight promotion, to testify before grand jury in New York.

Hogan, describing Salerno as an associate of gangsters, said he had named Vincent Velella, an east Harlem Republican leader, as his "front man" in the fight promotion. Velella has denied he was a front for Salerno.

Cus d'Amato, Patterson's manager, was subpoenaed Tuesday for questioning in the state attorney-general's investigation.

Attorney - General Louis J. Lefkowitz said d'Amato is scheduled to appear for questioning today. The investigation is to determine if any of the state's anti-monopoly laws were violated, particularly in the distribution of the radio-television-movie rights for the fight.

Aussies Lead Canada Cup By 7 Strokes

MELBOURNE (CP) — A brilliant three-under-par 67 by Peter Thomson sent favored Australia into a seven-stroke lead in the first round of the Canada Cup golf competition today.

Thomson's round and a par 70 by Kel Nagle gave the Australians a total of 137, seven fewer Canada, South Africa and Wales. The United States was on stroke back with 143.

Stan Leonard of Vancouver fired a 33-37-70 and Al Balding of Markham, Ont., a 37-37-74.

The U.S. was saved from humiliation when Sammy Snead staged a strong finish for a 73. His partner, Cary Middlecoff, had a 72 over the 6,555-yard Royal Melbourne course.

Thomson, the only man who apparently found pleasure in the massive lightning-fast greens, took a three-stroke lead for individual honors over Nagle. Leonard and Flory Van Donck of Belgium. Balding was tied with three other golfers for 14th.

Snead was a disappointment for a record first-day gallery of 12,500 when he duckhooked tee shots on the first three holes and took a two-over-par six on the 12th.

Canada might have been in a more dominant position except for one bad-luck hole for Balding. He took a nightmarish eight at the par-four fourth where he hit his second shot into bushes, his third into a heel print and is fourth over the green. He wound up three-putting.

CENTRE CUT

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Rangers of the National Hockey League Tuesday returned centre Bill Sweeney to the Springfield club of the American Hockey League. Sweeney, 22, was up for four games and scored one goal, against Boston Bruins.

Nylon Cleats Are All Right, No Tips, Please

PHILADELPHIA (CP)—Nylon cleats are all right but if they have metal tips they are illegal under the rules of the National Football League.

That is what acting commissioner Austin Gunsel indicated today in directing NFL clubs to brush up on the league rules dealing with nylon cleats.

The league invoked equipment say shoe cleats made of metal (includes aluminum) or material liable to chip, fracture or develop a cutting edge, are illegal.

The commissioner's directive came in directing NFL clubs to brush up on the league rules dealing with nylon cleats.

The commissioner's directive came in directing NFL clubs to brush up on the league rules dealing with nylon cleats.

That is what acting commissioner Austin Gunsel indicated Tuesday in directing NFL clubs to brush up on the league rules dealing with nylon cleats.

The Browns 31-17. Washington objected to metal tips on the cleats of some Cleveland players.

The game was delayed while the cleats were changed. Washington owner George Preston Marshall protested that the Browns should have been penalized for delaying the game, which they weren't.

Under the league rules, use of illegal equipment calls for a five-yard penalty for delay of the game and suspension from the game for at least one play. The offending player or players then may return to the game when legally equipped.

Gunsel said there may have been a misunderstanding on the part of some clubs about the regulation.

Three Rivers Nip Canadiens

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trois - Rivieres Lions, hottest team in the Eastern Professional Hockey League, have earned their present five-game winning streak the hard way.

In little more than a week, they've whipped all the teams in the top half of the league, holding them to just four goals while scoring 22.

Their latest victim was added Tuesday night on home ice at Trois-Rivieres, Que., where they beat the second - place Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 2-1. In the other league game, fifth - place Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds downed last - place Kingston Frontenacs 5-3 at the Soo.

STANDINGS SAME

The results left the standings unchanged with Sudbury Wolves the leaders and Montreal Royals tied two points back with Hull-Ottawa. But the Lions' sizzling pace has kept the leaders bunched and put Lions within a point of Montreal and Hull-Ottawa after a poor start.

The winning streak, which started Nov. 3 with a 5-1 win against the Soo, has also left goaler Claude Evans with the lowest average in the league. He hasn't had to handle many shots, though, as the Lions' attack has zipped away with scores of 6-0 and 8-1 against Montreal and Sudbury respectively. They edged the Royals 2-1 in the return game.

Quebec Aces Buy Collins

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League announced Tuesday the purchase of left winger Gary Collins from Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League for $10,000.

Collins, 24, was with the Maple Leafs last spring during the Stanley Cup playoffs and has been playing with Rochester Americans, also of the AHL, this season.

The Aces, in last place in the AHL, earlier this week obtained defenceman Norm Guimond from Sudbury Wolves of the Eastern Professional Hockey League in exchange for John Bailey, a forward.

Aces also announced they have reached a working agreement with Chicoutimi Saguenens of the Saguenay-Lac St. Jean junior hockey league.

Under terms of the agreement the Aces obtained the rights to the players on the Chicoutimi roster. In turn, the Aces will sponsor the Saguenens and also play an exhibition game at Chicoutimi in January.

PATRICK FAIR

VICTORIA (CP) — Lester Patrick, 76, one of Canada's hockey idols, Tuesday in hospital here where he is fighting pneumonia. But hospital authorities said the hockey great is not in serious condition.

Minister Bets Two-to-One On Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Hees let it be known Tuesday his money is on Ottawa Rough Riders to next Saturday's final game of the two-game, home-and-away Big Four playoff series with Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"I've got a two-to-one bet on Ottawa in the round," said Mr. Hees, a former Toronto Argonaut player. "And I'll be in Hamilton Saturday to see it through. You can quote me on that."

Toronto Fans Help Manitoba In Cup Parade

WINNIPEG (CP) — A group of Winnipeg Blue Bombers fans —including a dozen Torontonians —will carry Manitoba's standard in the Grey Cup parade.

The Manitoba Travel and Convention Association said Tuesday it has received about 15 replies to advertisements in Toronto newspapers inviting fans to join "12 good Toronto sports-minded citizens who would volunteer to drive their golf carts, motorcycles or scooters" in the parade.

M. J. G. McMullen, general manager of the association, said the idea of calling on Toronto scooter drivers is to fill out the Manitoba parade contingent without having to transport the small vehicles from Winnipeg.

Fights Last Night

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toronto—George Chuvalo, 218, Toronto, knocked out Yvon Durelle, 195½, Baie St. Anne, N.B., 12 (Chuvalo retained Canadian heavyweight championship).

London—Henry Cooper, 189½, England, stopped Joe Erskine, 193½, Wales, 12 (Cooper retained British heavyweight championship).

Seattle—Chico Santos, 139, Lisbon, Portugal, outpointed Bobby Hicks, 141, Seattle, 10.

Billings, Mont.—George Logan, 200, Boise, stopped Herman Henry, 191, San Francisco, 3.

Miami Beach, Fla. — Freddie Blades, 179, Ft. Lauderdale, stopped Joe Rowan, 189, Phoenixville, Pa., 7.

Honolulu—Stanley Harrington, 132½, Hawaii, stopped Jerry Martinez, 133, Menlo Park, Calif., 4.

To Helmet The Helmet, Now Sorry

WINNIPEG (CP) — Farrell (Fanso) Funston, impulsive end with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, would like his helmet back please, at least for the Grey Cup game.

When Bombers won the Western Interprovincial Footb a l l Union championship Saturday, the hefty import from Los Angeles threw his helmet into the air in celebration. It came down in front of a young fan who was rushing onto the field to congratulate his heroes. The youngster did some fine broken - field running into the crowd with it.

Funston said he would ask no questions if he got the headgear back in time for the Nov. 28 Canadian championship game in Toronto. He would even guarantee to return it after the championship game to the boy who "found" it.

After all, the six-foot two end, a late cut last year by Cleveland Browns, has four youngsters of his own.

THROWN TAKE DIKES

ORILLIA (CP) — Police are investigating the theft Monday night of a 19-point buck deer from the back of a car parked outside the home of local hunter Brian Fairman.

Laufman Leads Senior Circuit

KITCHENER (CP) — Fred Eicher of Whitby Dunlops picked up 10 points in the week ending Nov. 15 to take over fourth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A scoring standings with 18 points, three behind teammate Bob Attersley and Cliff Pennington of Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

Centre Ken Laufman, who with Attersley added nine points during the week, still leads with 39 points on six goals and 33 assists.

The Dutchmen also have the penalty leaders — Don Labelle, 40 minutes, and Darrell Sly, 33.

Windsor's Don Head boasts the best goaltending average — 2.43—in 11 games. John Henderson of Whitby follows with 2.91.

KILLED IN FALL

MONTREAL (CP) — Henry Vivian, 53, of Forest, Que., was fatally injured Tuesday when he fell 35 feet from a scaffold to the bottom of a new steel storage tank. Vivian was employed as a rigger by Horton Steel Works of Montreal. The accident occurred at the refinery of British Petroleum of Canada Limited, in suburban Ville d'Ankou.

Stamps Shade Seattle 4-3; Cougars Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seattle Totems lost 4-3 to Calgary Stampeders in one of two Western Hockey League games Tuesday night but individual statistics drew Totems a haven't much to complain about.

Victoria defeated Winnipeg 4-2. The Stamps-Totems game was highlighted by a fist - swinging second period. Coach Gus Kyle was banished from the game and Stampeders took 13 minutes in penalties. Totems had 13 minutes and their trainer, Les Bellis, was also thrown out.

Marc Bolleus, who scored twice for Totems and added an assist, took the lead in the scoring race with 28 points. Rudy Filion scored the other goal and is three points behind Bolleus.

Sid Finney, Jack McLeod, Lou Jankowski and Ken Leopold scored for Calgary.

Victoria's margin of victory against Winnipeg came from two unanswered goals in the second period. The clubs traded goals in the first and third.

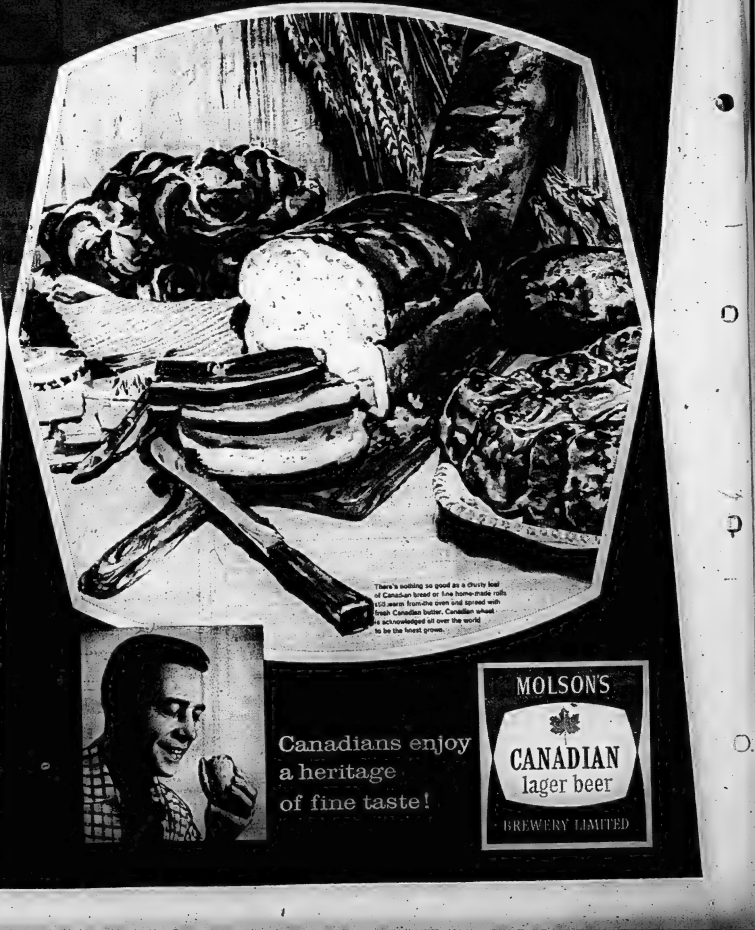
Teep Player Fined $29.00

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Terry McGuire, St. Catharines TeePees defencemen in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league, Tuesday was fined $20 when he was convicted of creating a disturbance in a public place during a hockey game here Saturday.

The veteran TeePee player was involved in a fight with a hockey fan who McGuire said had been heckling him during the game.



He was also fined $10 by the OHA.

Oldham Blanks Shildon 3-0

LONDON Reuters — Oldham Athletic defeated Shildon 3-0 in a Football Association Cup first-round replay at Oldham Tuesday.

Oldham now will meet Barry in the second round Dec. 5. Watford blanked Cheltenham Town 3-0 and Carlisle United lost 3-1 to Rochdale in an overtime game.

Johnson, Folley Fight Tonight

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Zora Folley, second - ranked heavyweight contender from Chandler, Ariz., fights promising Alonzo Johnson of Pittsburgh tonight in the strange surroundings of a swanky motel patio with tux - clad fans sipping champagne cocktails.

The 10-round bout from the Caravan East Inn on Phoenix's motel row will be televised and the Phoenix-area will not be blacked out.

Promoters have set two ticket prices and two modes of dress.

For those in the $25-a-seat section, black ties, tux and evening gowns are required. After the fight, a 10 - piece orchestra will strike a note and customers can dine and dance under the stars.

One source told The Associated Press some first - floor rooms at the motel were going at $100 a night so the fans can relax and enjoy the bout.

It's a come-as-you-are affair for those in the $5.50 temporary bleacher seats. These fans are entitled to 10 rounds of boxing, or less, with no fancy frills.

Pre-fight promotion has been as bizarre as the setting surrounding the fight.

Johnson chased a mechanical rabbit around the greyhound dog racing track as part of his early morning road work.

Training sessions were held at two of Phoenix' biggest shopping centres, where patrons could buy a week's groceries or get a haircut while watching the boxers perform.

"Stop that yawning! I told he blabed the bankit OVER!"

AT THE PARK — An all comedy program opens tomorrow night at the Park Theatre. Featured are Marjorie Main and Parker Fennelly in "The Kettle's on Old MacDonald's Farm", with the co-feature of "Abbott and Costello Go to Mars", starring the late Lou Costello and his long time side-kick, Bud Abbott. More comedy is provided with a 3 stooges comedy and a color cartoon.

AT THE ROXIE — Alfred Hitchcock, the screen's master of suspense, has come up with a new thriller, "North By Northwest," which opens tomorrow at the Roxie Theatre. He has chosen Cary Grant, Eva Marie Saint and James Mason for the starring roles. Like all Hitchcock dramas, there's a mystery involved in the story as the movie, in full, will unfold a tale of a fascinating battle of wits.

Stars Tell Why They Walk Out of Television Series

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Why does a star walk out of a television series and go into another business?

Wayde Preston, the lead in Warner Brothers' Colt .45 and now as executive of an air charter and sales firm, tells why:

"I made 26 films last year, working 16 to 18 hours a day with personal appearances on the weekend. My net for the year was $7,000. I can make more money elsewhere.

"I've quit just the hard work and low pay. The studio did petty things that added insult to injury. I got tired of being treated like an ingrate.

"Publicity? Sure, I got lots of it. But I told the studio, 'If I had a truckload of publicity and a dime, I could buy a cup of coffee.'"

Preston was not the first to revolt against the Warners TV regime. Clint Walker vanished from the Cheyenne range for nine months last year. He resumed the series with a new deal, but it still discontented.

"I signed with the studio under the impression I was going to do feature pictures," he complains. "I wound up as a TV actor. If I continue in a series, it can do nothing but hurt my career.

"I've never been a quitter, but I don't think I'd walk out again. I see no reason to lose a pay cheque on the studio's account."

Edd Byrnes, the Kookie of 77 Sunset Strip, appears willing to sacrifice his pay cheque for a better deal. He didn't report for work last week when talks for a new contract broke down. He doesn't feel he can support his booming career on $264 take home pay.

James Garner is growing more restless in the Maverick corral. Says he: "I'm not taking any action right now, because it's like beating your head against the wall. I think I have rights as an actor and as a human being that are not being recognized. I think Warners is making a mistake by not keeping their actors happy. I think they'd get a better product if they did."

His TV brother, Jack Kelly, is not as militant, but he has his complaints. "We have no opportunity to parlay what popularity we have achieved through the series," he said. "The studio wants half the money we would get for rodeos, etc., so why try?"

Will Hutchins of Sugarfoot comments: "We're working under old-fashioned contracts, made at a time when actors were doing one or two pictures a year. We do 30 to 40 shows a year and I'm afraid the public is going to get pretty darned sick of us."

Peter Brown of Lawman is trying to get a new deal. He said the studio tried to get him to stay on without the raise called for in his contract. "But I think Edd is making a mistake to walk out," he added. "The studio won't face it. They'll get another boy."

Television Commercials Smarten One up Says Writer

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Some people complain, but there are those almost in love with television commercials highly educational.

It is weren't for these frequent interludes in my viewing I wouldn't be half as smart as I am.

Where else, for instance, could I learn that:

Shaving lather may soften and so quickly that you can shave a piece of sandpaper without cutting the paper part?

Sixteen, particularly old Greek and Roman statues, have a perspiration problem?

The best way to find out whether you like a cigaret is to make sure that water can't pass through the filter?

WIT FOR GIRLS

Girls who use hair spray have better chances of catching fellows who waits well than girls who use hair lacquer?

You're likely to get your clean while gloves dirty if you stroke the hair of a man who uses hair tonic?

There are machines that tick like bombs and (which can measure smells and stomach acidity?

That a backache is caused by a small hammer hitting an anvil in a small compartment in one's brain?

DIFFERENT STOMACHS

That some stomachs are round, others are square and still others are made of glass? And livers are shaped like an hourglass?

That most people with dental plates don't wear false teeth at all but round disks?

That you can pack the contents of a small truck into the luggage compartment of virtually any car?

All gasolines but the advertiser's out only leave horrible deposits in one's car but don't give good mileage?

George Burns, without Gracie but with pals, dropped around Tuesday night for a pleasant, definitely nostalgic hour. The NBC starless show was called The Big Time, suggesting a salute to vaudeville of another generation. Actually, it was the engaging Burns singing and dancing a little but mostly exchanging reminiscences and heckles with buddies Eddie Cantor, George Jessel and Jack Benny. This is a quartet difficult to improve upon.

As far as the oldsters (anyone in the part-30 age bracket) were concerned, the addition of the Kingston Trio and Bobby Darin just gave the veterans a breather.

NBC, once the thinking woman's darling for its departed and Barbara Welch.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

We've heard all sorts of reasons why young athletes are "not on the bit" so to speak, but Rod Polle, coach of the Edmonton Flyers hockey club, came out flatfooted the other day with the statement that "Women are the worst trouble an athlete has." He followed "Ye with the crue "Love is grand, but women are awful."

In the old days the athletes did their rassling courting along the country roads not sitting in conv ertible being coached by a 33-22-33. Okay, we did it too, but the horse always found its way to the ring.

...os, Polle and one of his unmarried athletes were strolling along one of Edmonton's main arteries when they paused beside a statue of William Aberhart, the Poppa of Social Credit. Just then a lovely whisper of love linens with a fetching backfield lilted by. The stone statue raised its eyebrows.

"There," commented Polle moodily, "goes the strongest force on earth. It can move mountains, build bridges, launch a thousand ships and start wars. Men don't have a chance."

Dick (Vancouver Sun) Beddoes says he goes along with Polle. "When a guy gets married he is fit to be tied."

And getting in on the argument is Cactus Jack Curtice, coach of Stanford University who said, "the psychology is bad for married athletes. A single fellow gets a broken nose and the girl friend is there to get him. But a married man comes home with a little cut and the little woman says 'When are you going to start thinking about earning a living?'"

"That's the trouble with young pro athletes," Polle said. "Instead of thinking of their careers, they allow their enthusiasm to dwell on the heady allure of girls. That's becoming super-heavy."

They don't realize a honeymoon is a sort of vacation a man takes before going to work for a new boss, nor that a smart girl never shows her hand until asked for it.

This department does not agree with Polle, entirely. We have known some fine athletes and all of them happily married. And we have known some single ones who thought all gals were fair game. And there are plenty more who have not allowed their love lives to interfere with their athletic careers.

But a lot of famous men have given opinions on love and marriage such as Ben Franklin who said "Keep your eyes open before marriage—half-shut afterwards."

"If you don't think women are explosive, try dropping one."—Anon.

"Marriage is for women and children."—Fight manager Jack Hurley.

"Courtship causes man to spoon—marriage to fork over."—Wilson Mizner.

"A woman thinks there is a Santa Claus written into her marriage contract."—The late Fred Allen.

"Women are like horses. You can't bet on looks. Better to read their past-performance charts."—Tiger Kozak.

"How to live with women? Don't." This was taped as Adam mounded his scooter and fled the Garden of Eden.

"The reason God made women was that He didn't want any advice while creating man."—Francis Bacon.

"Marriage is like cutting the tooth off borscht—you've left with a cold potato."—Tommy Manville... Tommy has had ten beauties and nine potatoes.

And Anthony on first seeing Cleopatra: "Wow! A perfect XXXVIII, XXII, XXXVI."

Chuvalo Sent Him on Way After 12th Round Knockout; Hit The Canvas Five Times

By MILT MacEWAN, Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Yvon Du...30," rarely had a good shot at the Toronto youngster who won the vacant C.a.n.a.d.i.a.n. heavyweight title by knocking out James J. Parker in one round Sept. 15, 1958.

Chuvalo, six feet, used his three-inch height advantage and longer reach to bomb Durelle with left hooks and right crosses. Durelle, fighting from a crouch, kept a pre-bout promise by forcing the action most of the time but was badly outclassed.

STARTS EARLY

Chuvalo set the pattern in the first round with a left hook that draped Durelle over the ropes for a three count. In the second, a low blow by Chuvalo felled Yvon and the challenger grimaced in pain. He was up at the count of three.

Punishing blows started Durelle's nose bleeding in the second. His right eye purfed in the fifth and he was bleeding from a gash on his right eyebrow from the sixth round on. He was down for a nine count in the ninth round and was down twice of eight and seven in the 10th.

Shaban told reporters he pleased with Durelle's showing in the seventh and again after the eighth "but he wouldn't listen to me."

Chuvalo emerged unscathed except for cut over his left eye suffered in the 11th round. The eye was almost closed at the finish.

WASN'T HURT

"He never hurt me and I thought I could finish him earlier," the champion said. "But he kept coming back. He's a good strong puncher and plenty rough."

Chuvalo, who has 13 victories, including 10 knockouts, three losses and a draw in his brief professional career, was uncertain about the future.

"I don't like to talk about a fight with Tony Anthony but I can't say for sure," Anthony Mumer No. 1 light - heavyweight contender, now campaigns as a heavyweight.

Durelle, credited with 103 professional fights, suffered 22nd loss against 80 wins and one draw. He and Chuvalo each were guaranteed $8,500 or a percentage of the gate, whichever was greater. Gate receipts are expected to be announced today.

WATSON RECOVERING

NEW YORK (CP) — Former coach Phil Watson of New York Rangers was reported to be making satisfactory recovery today from an operation to remove a pedic d u e s t i c u l e c t e r. The hockey coach underwent surgery Monday.

"He is making normal progress from the operation," a nurse said.

Watson, who will be supervisor of the Rangers' farm system when he is fully recovered, is expected to be in hospital for about a fortnight before continuing his recuperation at home.

Olson, Durelle Bout Is Off

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The schedule light heavyweight fight between Robo Olson and Yvon Durelle was cancelled Tuesday night because of Durelle's 12th-round knockout by Toronto Canadian champion George Chuvalo.

Olson and Durelle were to fight Dec. 7 at the Cow Palace.

Matchmaker Benny Ford said he doesn't know whether he will get another opponent for the Dec. 7 date or reschedule the Durelle fight in January after an automatic 30-day National Boxing Association suspension for Durelle's knockout l ouver.....

West Started With Winner Hopes to Finish With One

By BERNARD DUFRESNE, Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Davey West, the wandering halfback of Canada pro football, says "I started at out with a Grey Cup winner and I hope to finish up with another."

He's sure Ottawa Rough Riders will represent the east in the Grey Cup final against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

West, 31, who has seen action with seven of the nine top pro clubs and with two teams in the Ontario Rugby Football Union, plans to hang up his cleats after this, his 13th season in football.

"You've got to go sometime," he said, in an interview, "I've got an offer of a good job selling photographic equipment out west and I plan to take it.

"But before I go I want to play on another Grey Cup team and I think I'll make it again with Rough Riders."

SURE OF WINNER

West, the wide flanker of Ottawa's offensive team and occasional punt returner, is sure Riders can beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Big Four final. Ottawa defeated Ticats 17-5 in the first game of the two-game, total-points series. The second game is scheduled for 1 p.m. Saturday in Hamilton, is to be televised nationally.

West said his best year was in 1952 when he scored 11 touchdowns for Calgary Stampeders and made the western all-star team.

"The thing I remember most about that year was the time I ran back a kickoff 112-yards for a touchdown," he recalled. "That was on Taylor Field in Regina on Sept. 13.

"The day before the game, they'd given me a pint of blood at the hospital. Coach Lee Lear —the most colorful coach I've ever known in football — had thought I was slowing up and seemed always tired. He sent me to see the doctor and he said I was downright anaemic. So they gave me a pint of blood.

"When I got back to the bench after the touchdown run—we won 36-Lear turned to me and said: 'You crazy ——, you'll get a pint of blood every week.' And I did."

NOT ALL PLEASANT

But there were other incidents not so pleasant. Early in his career, playing for Toronto Argonauts in a game against Riders here, he ran head-on into Tony Golab, Ottawa's great footballer of the 1940s.

"I was out for 10 days," he said, "I don't remember a thing about what happened."

"It was the strangest feeling, not knowing anything about those 10 days."

West said that his switch from club to club in the last 13 years has earned him the reputation of a "wandering boy," but the only trouble I ever was in was over salary.

He said he came to Ottawa this year "determined to keep my mouth shut," and he got along fine with coach Frank Clair.

A native of Toronto, West broke into pro company with Toronto Argonauts in 1947. The club won the Grey Cup that year.

West is an all-around athlete. He has played hockey and baseball. He skis and has been a track star.

Dave is married to the former Lorraine Scott, a native of Jamaica whom he met when she was in Kitchener. They have a three-year-old son, Mark.

West is high on his younger brother, Gary, a quarterback on the intermediate team at Queen's University.

"He's built along the lines of Bernie Faloney (Hamilton quarterback) and is doing very well as a passer and runner," West said, "I think he'll be great."

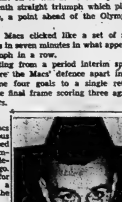
Dunnies Nip Macs For Seventh Straight Victory

Take Over in Late Periods After Spotting Homesters 3 In 1st Frame of Spotty Game



By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

The crest-riding Whitby Dunlops refused to be scared by a McFarlands' first-period three-goal splurge here last night, took the bit in their teeth and went on to win a 7-5 victory.

It was the Dunnies' seventh straight triumph which playbacked them into first place, a point ahead of the Olympics-bound Kitchener Dutchmen.

For twenty minutes the Macs clicked like a set of store teeth, ripping home three goals in seven minutes in what appeared to presage fantastic second triumph in a row.

But the Dunlops, benefitting from a period interim speech from the Blairian throne, tore the Macs' defence apart in the second period slamming home four goals to a single return. They kept up the pace in the final frame scoring three against a lone tally by the homesters.

DENIS BOUCHER
...conds to go and the Macs swarmed around the dibe Dunnies' net but failed to get anywhere.

The McFarlands take the long trip "around the horn" this weekend playing in Chatham Friday night, Kitchener Saturday and Windsor Sunday afternoon.

JOCKEY SUES

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A jockey is suing the mogmouth speed racing association and another jockey for $2,000,000 damages as the result of a fall he suffered last year. The suit was filed on behalf of Jerry Truman by Merchantsville, N.J., it says he suffered permanent injuries June 21, 1958, and charges Jockey Robert L. Stevens of Florida with recklessness and careless riding.

Cooper Wins Over Erskine

LONDON (AP) — Henry Cooper, British and Empire heavyweight champion, today announced he's got one fighter in mind for his next bout—world champion Ingemar Johansson of Sweden.

Cooper's exuberance followed his successful defence of the British title against Joe Erskine Tuesday night. The fight ended at 2.55 of the 12th round with Erskine sprawled across the ropes and his face lolling over ringside fans.

Erskine had been down for two counts of seven a few minutes earlier. Then Cooper landed in and knocked Erskine unconscious with a fusillade of punches.

Referee Eugene Henderson stopped the fight—though Erskine was out for a good 30 seconds. So Cooper's went into the record books as a technical knockout.

ISSUES CHALLENGE

"Now the fighter I want to meet is ingemar Johansson," Cooper, 25, said. He is No. 5 challenger. Erskine, before the fight, was No. 7.

The business started sensationally in the first round. Erskine, 25, stumbled to the canvas for a count of one. Just a pause, and still only halfway up, Cooper threw a long left, sending Erskine down for a count of three.

As Goes 1st Line So Goes the Black Hawks

By GEORGE FRAZIER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It becomes increasingly evident that what makes the Chicago Black Hawks fly is two wings and a centre named left to right Robert Blake, Theodore Lindsay, Edward C. J. Litzenberger and Aloysius Martin Sloan.

Last year at this time, Ted, Ed and Ted were three of the hottest lines in the National Hockey League and the Hawks had a good start towards what became one of their best seasons.

After 18 games last season, Chicago had 16 points and was tied for fourth place with Detroit in a close - bunched race. They were only four points out of first place. This year, after 17 games, they have a feeble seven points and occupy the cellar.

LOOK UP

Goaler Glenn Hall is playing as well as ever. The defence is solid and the forward line has some new players who, like rookie Stan Mikita, represent an improvement in anything.

Where's the difference?

After 16 games last year, Sloan had 10 goals and five assists. This year after 17 games he has four goals and three assists.

Lindsay in 16 games had a goal and 10 assists last year. He has a goal and three in 15 games this time.

Litzenberger in 16 games last season scored eight goals and 11 assists. In 15 this season he has three goals and four assists.

Neither of the three has even half the points they had this time last year, none of them can figure out why, and all are worried.

Fortunately for coach Rudy Pilous, the line shows signs of snapping back into form.

EIGHT-POINT NIGHT

Last Sunday, after Detroit Red Wings took a 3-1 lead, Sloan, Lindsay and Ted Hampson charged back to pick up a goal each and power the Hawks to a 5-3 win. Sloan and Litzenberger also each had two assists and Lindsay three.

Monday night, as Detroit quashed the Hawks 3-2, they proved again that when they're not scoring, Chicago goes nowhere.

Tonight, it's New York Rangers turn to try to stop the Hawks on Chicago's home ice.

Detroit visits Toronto Maple Leafs and will sprind a revised lineup.

After trying out centre Murray Oliver for two games, the Wings decided to keep him and park off wing Forbes Kennedy and defenceman Peter Goegan to Edmonton Flyers of the Western League.

Oliver, 22, didn't get either an assist, goal or penalty in his two games with the Wings but he played well and carried a lifetime record of 34 goals and 33 assists with Flyers last year.

Flyers Shade Brockville 4-3

BROCKVILLE (CP)—Barrie Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league downed Brockville Canadiens of the Metropolitan Junior Hockey League 4-3 Tuesday night in an interlocking schedule game.

It was Brockville's first defeat in 11 games. Nelson Leclair scored two goals for Barrie and Jeannot Gilbert and Ed Westfall one each. Andre Drolet scored twice for Brockville with Jacques Lebarbiere getting the third.

CANCEL RACING

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Churchill Downs cancelled its eight race program Tuesday for the first time since November, 1936. The track was frozen.

NAME MANAGER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Appointment of Bob Freitas as general manager of Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast Baseball League was announced Tuesday. Freitas had been general manager of Amarillo of the Texas League.

Baby's Colds

While Baby's Own Tablets are not a cold remedy, they can be most helpful in clearing up colds that upset baby. They relieve constipation and sour stomach which often go with colds. Sweet-tasting baby tablets, Baby's Own act gently but surely to relieve baby's bowels, so stomach and bowels can do their work of driving out the poisons and so help to overcome colds. Concerned mothers say they can't say enough for what relief and sweet, restful sleep baby's Own Tablets can bring. Get them at your druggist.

upsetting the old guard in the wake of a long strike against the International Nickel Company and the subsequent signing of a labor agreement providing wage increase of two cents an hour.

FIERY RESUME

This time, Tallwell, stepping aside as a candidate, took the Liberal presidency which he once held for several years, while Gillis, a lawyer, pitched himself with charges of procommunism and accused Premier Gillis of acting under direction from the Roman Catholic Church—an issue based on the role of Prof. Alexander Rostron of the Jesuit University of Sudbury in providing leadership instruction for a number of Miners.

Gillis, who campaigned last March on a clean-cut Communists campaign, also urged affiliation with the Canadian Labor Congress—an issue based on the belief from the organized labor affiliation 10 years ago for being Communist-controlled.

The CLC, while officially remaining aloof, kept a watching brief on the Sudbury situation and offered its behind-the-scenes support for the Gillis group. Support from Mine-Mill's national headquarters was given freely to Thibault's campaign.

HOW YOUR LIVER BILE HELPS BREAK DOWN FATS

IN THE DIGESTIVE TRACT

Laboratory tests have now proved that liver bile emulsifies fats — actually breaks them down. It is an established fact that when liver bile is added to fatty solids, the fats are broken down and form a smooth, easy-flowing mix.

In your digestive tract, liver bile helps break down fats the same way. Many of the foods you eat reach the digestive tract as undigested fatty solids. Your golden liver bile helps break down these fats . . . for easier and more complete digestion.

Carter's Little Liver Pills' exclusive formula of vegetable ingredients relieves irregularity quickly and effectively. At the same time, it actively improves the flow of liver bile needed to break down fats in your digestive tract.

So when you feel sluggish, headachy, nervous, or just a bundle of blues, remember Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Remember, Carter's not only relieves irregularity, but actually improves the flow of liver bile. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills today!

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain' And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved in this inexpensive substance with the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and proved by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while really relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough and complete that sufferers were able to make statements such as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among those sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of them 30 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The answer to this healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue in all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed, convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Viscount Bennett Assessed by Two Historians

LONDON (CP) — Contrasting assessments of Viscount Bennett of Calgary are offered by two writers in their views of Friends, Lord Beaverbrook's account on his long association with the late Canadian prime minister.

John A. Stevenson, writing in the Sunday Times, agrees with the author's contention that in Canada today Bennett's repute as a statesman "stands far higher" than that of Mackenzie King.

"The record shows that in five years he did more to modernize and make efficient Canada's economic and financial machinery than Mackenzie King accomplished in 22 years of power," Stevenson writes.

But Dennis Brogan, professor of political science at Cambridge University, describes Bennett as "a drab and irritating character" although unfortunate politically in having taken office in 1930 at the height of the depression.

Writing in Beaverbrook's Daily Express, Brogan says the subjects of Beaverbrook's biographies are "much less interesting" than Beaverbrook himself. A previous work dealt with Andrew Bonar Law, only Canadian-born British prime minister.

"It is hard to see any reason for Lord Beaverbrook's devotion to these, politically dead, to their common origin in New Brunswick," says Brogan.

The book tells how Beaverbrook, then Max Aitken, worked under Bennett a law student in Chatham, N.B., at the age of 19 in 1895, and of their divergent paths in Calgary, where Bennett prospered as a lawyer while Aitken ran a coal room.

A large part of the narrative deals with the long and unsuccessful efforts by both men to establish imperial free trade.

Brogan comments: "It is surely natural that a Canadian-born native of Lord Beaverbrook now, and would have been native all Bennett in 1932, to expect his Canadian supporters to welcome the free entry of British goods into their highly protected market."

Stevenson says it was Bennett's misfortune to hold office with a weak cabinet during the worst depression of this century, but "he grappled successfully with the grim financial difficulties which it created."

Stevenson also says it is "arguable" that if the dream of closer Commonwealth consolidation for which the two New Brunswickers strove had been realized, the British nations might today be dealing with the United States on reasonably equal terms of power and influence."

General tendencies: There is so much energy released today to put into motion a reliable plan of action that you would be wise to get started on such constructive duties early and carry through all day and tonight as well. Those who are meticulous in powerful positions will also give a hand. So, wow and impress them with your special abilities.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — If you put all your basic and fundamental affairs well in order today, one in high position who likes you will give ample support that you may become more successful in own field of endeavor. Keep active all day. Retire early.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Discussing some of your most important affairs with the trusted ones among your close or partners reveals a better system by which you can go about handling them. You can then operate more efficiently and assure great success to ventures.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — If you work more vigorously now, you can increase your bank account. Be grateful to assistants and they will be more cooperative. This can be a day of real accomplishment if you work in real harmony with fellow workers.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Don't be afraid to go to those whom you love and express your ambitions and ask for help you need. They will assist you if you show them what a truly devoted person you are. P. M. hr. has a fl favorite amusement.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — A day to keep excellent control over your emotions so that you can study better ways of operating. This will increase harmony at home, too, especially if you look at things objectively. P.M. take it easy and entertain lightly at abode.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — You can reach some of your goals faster than you think. Your best bet is to co-operate fully with associates and trusted friends who can assist materially. P. M. get together for social fun and charming tete-a-tetes.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — You can increase prestige and better your financial situation now by doing something very constructive in civic or patriotic spheres. Also, get a better credit rating. Confer with powerful individuals.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — By delving into new arrangements, systems, you can make progress wherever it has been impossible to do so ere this. However, go by the advice of experts, since you now have the upper hand and will get their cooperation.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Every chance is open to you now to quickly get the information vital to your interests. This can come from intuitive faculties as well as from consulting with the right parties. Get busy early.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — If you go by a good personal adviser, you will learn how you can find out what is your true position with all others, especially key people. P. M. go out socially and have a perfectly grand time.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — So much can be accomplished now that you would be wise to be extremely engaged all day long. Forget the meaningless. Be grateful to bigwig who assists, for then you get a real backing. Be a good, solid citizen.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Be particularly devoted now to those whom you truly love. Also, make a good impression on new friends, gain prestige. The future will then be much brighter and you win out in your ambitious endeavors. P.M. have fun.

If your child is born today ... The delightful child born today is a born salesman. Almost any idea that comes to mind is easily sold to others. So be sure you give a good business course of education, without neglecting any of the necessary spiritual studies, to insure fine ethics. Then the chart is most successful, and whatever is attempted will work out beautifully. Your good guidance is the keynote here.

Former GM Vice-President Killed Hunting

Shot to Death in Blind By Long-Time Friend

WALPOLE ISLAND, Ont. (CP)—Harry W. Anderson, a rugged six-footer who directed many tough labor negotiations before retiring as a General Motors vice-president, was killed by a shotgun blast Wednesday in a hunting accident.

It was fired by long-time friend and retired GM executive Dent Harlow H. Curtice as the two were sitting in a duck blind on this Ontario Indian reservation at the mouth of the St. Clair River.

Appearing shocked and ex-hausted, Mr. Curtice was later driven to Ann Arbor, Mich., to express his sorrow to Mrs. Anderson.

"I am deeply grieved," he told friends. "Harry was my very dear friend for many years."

RETIRED IN 1956

Mr. Anderson, 67, retired as GM's vice-president for personnel at the end of 1956.

He had been in the company's labor relations strategy in a 119-day strike in 1945-46 and in the 1948 negotiations ending the United Auto Workers' drive for a guaranteed annual wage boosts based on a formula of increased productivity.

Scene of the shooting was St. Anne's Island, a 2,000-acre tract which separates Ontario from Michigan's Harsen Island in Lake St. Clair. It is one of the province's top duck-hunting spots and has many private clubs and lodges.

FOUND UP SUDDENLY

Police said both men prepared to fire as a flock of ducks flew toward their blind. Mr. Anderson stood up suddenly as Mr. Curtice pulled the trigger.

The 12-gauge shotgun blast hit him on the right side of the head.

The shooting happened about 11 a.m. but police did not learn of it when the body was brought to the mainland in mid-afternoon.

Mr. Curtice pulled the boat then by truck and again by boat to the nearby island and took the narrow channel separating it from the Ontario mainland about 30 miles north of Windsor.

Provincial police constable Bud Collins of Sombra investigated the fatality and took a brief statement before Mr. Curtice returned to Michigan. The body was taken to a Wallaceburg funeral home and later released to the family for Ann Arbor.

G. W. KENNEDY HOST

The two men, frequent hunting and fishing companions, were also joined by St. Anne's Hunting Club, operated by Geo. Kennedy, chairman of the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Corporation of Detroit.

Mr. Kennedy said he was about 300 yards from the Curtice-Anderson blind at the time when an Indian guide came running and told him, "A man is shot."

Mr. Curtice, who lives at Fisher Island, Mich., left the president August 31, 1958, but is still a director.

Mr. Anderson, born in Cadillac, Mich., joined the legal de-

Will Stockpile Medical Goods For Emergency

ARNPRIOR (CP)—About $18,-000,000 worth of medical supplies for emergency use will be distributed next year.

E. C. Charron, chairman of a national conference on emergency health and welfare services which concluded at the Civil Defence College here Wednesday, said about $6,000,000 in medical supplies already has been delivered.

They will start to go out to doctors next year and later will be stockpiled in rural areas. Some emergency planners will use the same depots used by the armed forces for stockpiling military supplies.

The stockpiling program along with other features of emergency health and welfare planning was discussed during a three-day conference attended by representatives of the provinces, national professional associations such as the Canadian Medical Association, the Red Cross, St. John Ambulance, veterinarians and other groups.

WANT PROVINCIAL CONTROL

Dr. Charron, head of the General health department's health services, said study groups among 21 delegations expressed strong support for provincial control over emergency health and welfare services.

The federal government had proposed that the provinces exercise such control and make plans that could be co-ordinated nationally.

Discussion also was held on public health measures that might be required in the event of large - scale evacuations. Dr. Charron said delegates agreed that mental health measures are equally as important as medical services for casualties.

The army is to assume the task of giving first aid and sorting casualties, Dr. Charron said.

Plans for handling casualties after leaving them to civilian hospitals were discussed.

Union Promptly Rejects Offer of Steel Industry

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The basic steel industry today disclosed it had submitted a new contract proposal in the United Steelworkers' union. The union promptly announced rejection of the offer.

The union in a formal statement said the industry proposal was made Nov. 15 and turned down the same day.

The new proposal, the union said, represents virtually the same package offered by the industry before the Supreme Court ordered the steel industry to end the 116-day strike and return to work Oct. 17. That offer was dictated by the 116-day wage policy committee.

The union said the latest offer as being worth about 24 cents an hour over the three-year period. It said the previous offer at 23.8 cents an hour.

The package, submitted after, It Conrad Cooper, chief industry negotiator, estimated the new proposal would cost the companies 30 cents an hour over a three-year period.

The industry valued the Oct. 17 offer at 24 cents an hour over the three-year period.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: A weather disturbance moved through Eastern Ontario this morning, giving light snow to most of the southern and central portions of the province. In the snowbelt areas bounding Lake Huron and Georgian Bay there was a two foot fall reported. Friday skies will be quite variable across the province with no significant change in temperatures expected.

CANADA and U.S. BACK MOVE for HUNGARY DEBATE

Green Says People Look on Agreement as 'Much Disturbed'

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—The United States and Canada are backing a request for a debate on Hungary in the 14th General Assembly of the United Nations.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, in supporting the move Wednesday, declared:

"The assembly must speak out strongly against the brutalizing of the Hungarian people, of those responsible in and out of Hungary should work with the rest of us to carry out the overwhelmingly adopted resolutions of the United Nations."

Canada's External Affairs Minister Green said earlier the debate called for a debate, saying the Canadian people are "much disturbed" over the continued oppression in the Communist-dominated country where a rebellion was crushed by Russian guns in 1956.

HUNRO PROPOSAL

The move for a new debate on Hungary was initiated by Sir Leslie Munro of New Zealand appointed by the UN to investigate the 1956 revolt and instructed last year to report to member states on the UN's action on developments there. He has not been admitted either to Hungary or the Soviet Union.

Sir Leslie requested that the item be placed on the assembly's agenda and first reports said this would be automatic since the 82-member world body's steering committee today. But late Wednesday night a UN spokesman said that the hearing would be postponed indefinitely.

On another subject, the 82-member political committee today received debate on a call for cessation of all nuclear arms tests on a permanent basis.

The Soviet Union declared Wednesday the UN must call on all countries to refrain from testing until an agreement is reached to test forever.

VIVIAN SPEAKS

In the economic and financial committee Wednesday, Canada's representative, Dr. R. P. Vivian, said underdeveloped countries need much greater amounts of capital than now are available to them.

He referred to the International Development Association, an organization proposed as an affiliate of the World Bank to act as a lending agency to help the poorer countries with long-term, low-repayment loans.

Vivian said Canada must reserve its final view on any other new capital assistance organization until there has been sufficient experience with the operation of I.D.A. to judge its effectiveness and determine whether any additional arrangements are needed.

Avoids Jury Duty

'Very Old, Older Than His Years' But Winnie's Will Still at Helm

LONDON (CP) — Sir Winston Churchill was described today as "restored to health" after an indisposition.

His secretary, Anthony Montague-Browne, told a reporter:

"He's feeling splendid," said one of Sir Winston's friends, "The only trouble is everyone thinks he doesn't like to think about it."

Wednesday Sir Winston was well enough to entertain Konrad Adenauer, the West German Chancellor.

The two octogenarians drank champagne.

Sir Winston was to have seen Adenauer Tuesday but the meeting had to be postponed because of the war leader's indisposition.

No details of the nature of the ailment have been published. Montagu - Browne said Churchill regards his health as a private matter and has given strict instructions to his staff.

"I myself have made it a seven-year rule not to go into details," said Montagu-Browne.

"He is a very old man. He is really older than his years, when you think of all he has been through. It's all rather pathetic."

As for a rest, Sir Winston is not under treatment for any specific physical complaint.

Macmillan Drops Pet Scheme For European Buffer Region

LONDON (AP)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer today ends a visit to Britain which has closed away some of the suspicions between the two countries and strengthened the Western Alliance for summit talks with Russia.

Prime Minister Macmillan dropped his pet plan for an experimental disarmament zone in Central Europe, and the West German feared would leave them defenceless against Soviet pressure.

Adenauer gave assurances that West Germany would co-operate in averting a trade war between the six-nation European Common Market and the rival Outer Seven economic bloc led by Britain.

Both leaders agreed on the general topics, that should be discussed in the summit Disarmament, the future of Germany, including Berlin and East-West relations in general.

The Kremlin took its usual dark view of Adenauer's activities. In what it termed an authorized reply in Izvestia Wednesday, Adenauer gave to British reporters, the official news agency Tass accused the Chancellor of seeking "to worsen (East-West) relations, which have been improving lately, and to prevent the liquidation of the cold war."

Tass declared that "leading Soviet quarters" — meaning the Kremlin — are convinced that a German peace treaty will be worked out at the summit. It reiterated the Soviet Union's demand for a treaty with both German states. But so far has insisted that only one peace treaty is to be written, with a reunified Germany.

Adenauer spent Wednesday night and this morning in final conferences with Macmillan at Chequers, official country home of the prime minister. They went there for the night after the 83-year-old Chancellor met an 84-year-old Sir Winston Churchill for a 45-minute lunch.

The two old statesmen were to have met Tuesday but Churchill had to go to bed with a chest congestion. He was much better Wednesday.

Canada's Hog Price Support Criticized by U.S. Official

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Senate reopened debate today on criticism of Canada's price support for hogs.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Marvin McLain suggested to Canadian delegates to be revived next January—is the kind to be avoided by the U.S. hog industry.

"Our neighbors in Canada have been demonstrating what can happen when government intervenes directly in the pricing picture on hogs," said in a speech prepared for delivery before the national swine industry conference at Iowa State University.

"If you want some good advice on what not to do, talk to some of the Canadian officials as I have done recently or better yet, recall again what happened with egg programs and potato programs in this country only a few years ago. Government officials stepped in to be the savior."

One of McLain's associates later explained to a reporter that U.S. price support programs, unlike Canada's, leaves full of dried eggs and freight cars that smelled of old surplus eggs." The U.S. has so many potatoes, "we were chopping them up for feed, coloring them to prevent sale on normal markets and diverting them for all kinds of purposes.

The U.S. now avoids price support programs for perishable farm products, the official added.

For some years the Canadian government has maintained price support program for hogs, buying up surpluses if market prices fail to a certain fixed price. This program is being replaced next January by a limited deficiency payment scheme under which producers will sell hogs in open marketing and get a federal payment to cover losses on sales.

The U.S. industry is concerned about a rise in hog production which Thomas Belk, $14 - John - Albert, formerly of trade and commerce; now justice; Wood, formerly of defence, now national revenue; and John Hamilton, Brant-Haldimand, formerly of agriculture, now citizenship and immigration.

CANADA'S WHEAT CROP MAY BE 413,500,000 BUS.

One-Quarter Caught In Fields of Snow

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's wheat crop this year is a potential 413,500,000 bushels, provided prairie farmers can safely harvest more than one-quarter of it caught in the fields by early snowfalls.

The bureau of statistics reported Wednesday that 112,600,000 bushels of wheat remained unthreshed at Nov. 1 — 28 per cent of the prairie crop.

Much of it will have to winter in the fields, the bureau said, because much of it invested next spring will depend on the weather.

The bureau's estimate of a 413,500,000-bushel crop was based on the assumption that the unharvested wheat can all be taken off safely in the spring. But the bureau said a high level of 1,700 cut the earlier forecast of a crop of 421,100,000 bushels based on conditions at Sept. 15.

ESTIMATE DOWN

The amount of prairie wheat production was scaled down by 8,000,000 bushels to 398,000,000 bushels, 15 per cent smaller than last year's 346,000,000 bushels.

The wheat crop, finished in September for all of Canada would be 31,100,000 bushels, last year's 271,700,000 bushels, but it would still be the 12 - year average of 322,000,000 bushels for the period.

Oats relay, snowy harvest season—worst in eight years — hit other western grain crops too.

The bureau said 29 per cent of the prairie oats crop of 263,000,000 bushels remained in fields. The 219,000,000-bushel western barley crop remained unharvested at Nov. 1.

The bureau also said an estimated 8,000,000 bushels of flax seed, 368,000 bushels of rye and 30,000,000 bushels of rape seed were still unharvested at Nov. 1.

Public Relations Must Rely on Truth -- Speaker

TORONTO (CP) — Brig. Michael Wardell told members of the Public Relations Society of Canada Monday night that their profession must rely on truth because "when that rule is defied its debasers are damaged."

Wardell, chief of the Daily Prodigy Education Service and the monthly Atlantic Review, said: "Truth" was one who did that and turned the art of public relations into "the black art."

The rigged television shows in the United States "are a shocking and different degradation."

He said the same thing occurs when the lie is discovered. "Unhappily when that happens all of us who practice the profession of public relations suffer."

Most seriously damaged are the writers, Wardell said, but public relations practitioners, newspapers, radio and television stations and the whole system of free enterprise are also tainted with the same brush.

"Even the high level politicians are revolted by dishonesty whatever our American manipulators and entertainers . . . would have us believe."

The party membership now stands at 998,310.

14 Parliamentary Secretaries Named by Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — A wholesale round of appointments to jobs as parliamentary secretaries to cabinet ministers was announced Wednesday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Fourteen Conservative MPs were named to the posts, which pay $4,000 annually in addition to the member's $10,000 indemnity.

Only one such position remains to be filled. Parliament at its last session made provision for 15 secretaryships. One appointment was made some time ago.

The statutory limit formerly was 14, though the prime minister appointed none following the March 31, 1958, general election.

The bill passed at the last session also changed the title from parliamentary assistant to parliamentary secretary.

Six of those named Wednesday were old hands at the job. They are Richard A. Bell, MP for Carleton, Ont., who was defeated where he served in 1957 - 58; Walter Dinsdale, MP for Brandon-Souris, Man., who held formerly of agriculture, now citizenship and immigration.

Appointed parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Diefenbaker was Paul Martineau, MP for Pontiac - Temiscamingue (Que.).

Police Drop Action Against Man For Failing to Swindle as Claimed

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—Hans Kehrl is a West German businessman who was hailed as the "bureaucratic nemesess" of filling in registration questionnaires correctly served in Germany by mistake.

"To prove his point that it does not matter what you put on the form, Kehrl has at various times filled it in as "Adolf Hitler" and "bear-trainer, given Feb. 35 as his birthdate, said Sodom or Gomorrah as his birth places.

This brought no reaction and he started listing himself as burglar, embezzler or just simply as a criminal. Finally, last August, a newly-employed hotel porter in Frankfurt told the police one of the guests had given him his job as swindler.

Frankfurt police, not to be trifled with, charged Kehrl with attempted fraud before letting himself unlawfully "as a swindler although he did not carry out his trade."

"I wrote to the police saying that by registering anybody as item would be exposed by ridicule it may cause some to court" Kehrl said. "I understand that Latin is a language known throughout the world but if the police can't read it, it is not my fault. Surely how, common sense will win".

Sudden Blizzard Starts Hunters Hurrying Home

Parry Sound Gale Fails To Reach Tweed Region

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ontario got little relief from cold and snow overnight.

Snow continued to fall over the Georgian Bay region while snowflurries were scattered throughout the south of the province.

Temperatures were not quite as low as Tuesday night but dropped several degrees below freezing. It was 17 above at North Bay, and 26 above in Toronto, London, and Windsor.

Snowflurries were to continue and temperatures were expected to rise much above 32 later in the south.

In the Parry Sound district of Georgian Bay, hunters were finishing their stay out of a 24-hour storm that covered a wide area. Many deer season there ends Saturday.

While Southern Ontario may warm up slightly, the north was still faced with frigid temperatures. In the Fort Erie-Lake Ontario region some snow was expected, with high winds in forecast from 25 to 40 degrees. Northwest winds were expected to bring high temperatures of 25 to 30 degrees.

The heavy snowfall ran from Washago near the southern shore of Georgian Bay to Parry Sound on the bay's northern tip. North of Washago winds of 50 miles an hour caused severe drifting. Road crews worked around the clock to keep roads open.

HUNTERS AFFECTED

Neil MacNaughton, senior conservation officer for the Parry Sound district, said hundreds of hunters were driven out of the bush by the blizzard.

He said lands and forest officials had been making aerial surveys of the area "and will increase patrols when the blizzard lifts."

About 40 ships, mostly ore carriers battled gales, near-zero weather and ice in Lake Superior.

An estimated 500 freighters will still on the Great Lakes.

The weatherman forecast light snow for Montreal and eastern areas of Quebec. Light snow was also expected in the Maritimes where the mercury was expected to dip below freezing.

Manitoba weather was milder than last during the last several days but still below the long-term average for this time of year. Temperatures were in the high teens of 15 degrees above zero.

The Prairies and the west coast were in for generally mild weather.

'Racket' Worked On Residents In This City

"A racket' in selling cheap cigarettes—believed to be centred in Toronto and London — had apparently reached Belleville it was learned today.

The system operated on a "snowball" process in the same way as a chain-letter. A person was approached generally by an acquaintance, and asked if he would like to buy three cartons of cigarets for $5.00.

If he agreed, he gave the acquaintance the $2.00 then selling three of his friends if they would like the cheap cigarets. If they agreed, he would pick up $3.00 from each and pass it on to the Toronto firm who would then send back the three cartons.

Meanwhile ,each of the three friends would be trying to sell the idea to their friends and infinitum.

However, about three weeks ago, the cigarets failed to appear and Toronto detectives are looking for the operator of the system who has since disappeared with $50,000.

Jim Caithcart of 65 Elizabeth Street in Belleville told the intelligencer today that he had paid an acquaintance $3.60 and was still waiting for his cigarets. He added another friend of his had received cigarets but he knew of two who had paid their money and did not receive cigarets.

A spokesman for the city police department here said he had heard of one case locally where a man had paid out and received nothing in return. Apart from that case, there have been no other complaints to police locally.

Cash Awards For Suggestions On Traffic Safety

In an effort to stimulate public interest in the ever-increasing problem of highway traffic safety, Attorney General Hon. A. Kelso Roberts has announced that a substantial cash prize will be awarded to the person in each Ontario Provincial Police headquarters district who submits the best idea or suggestion on the subject of traffic safety.

Entries must be receiving at the office of the O.P.P. district inspector not later than 12 noon on Thursday, December 10th, and the prize money will be awarded to the winner in each of the 17 Ontario Provincial Police districts while in addition a grand prize of $150 will be presented to the person submitting the best idea from all Ontario.

To be eligible each entry must be no more than 150 words in length and must clearly outline some concrete suggestion for improving highway traffic safety.

The cash prizes to be awarded to successful entrants are to be known as the Jack Hannah Highway Safety Suggestion Award.

Entrants for the Belleville headquarters district including the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac, should be addressed to Inspector A. McDougall at 183 Pinnacle Street, Belleville.

SEIZE HEROIN, HOLD THREE

TORONTO (CP)—RCMP drug squad officers arrested three persons and made one of their biggest narcotics hauls this year in a raid Tuesday night on Spadina Ave. house. They seized 141 capsules of heroin.

Standard Fee For Bull of Choice Is Set

For the first time since the Quinte District Cattle Breeding Scheme was put into operation in 1948, commencing January 1st farmers in this area will be able to secure service from the bull of their choice at the standard $5 service fee.

This has been made possible by a re-organization of the Artificial System of the Association which has recently been approved by the directors.

The new servicing system will apply for all breed associations except that breeds such as Charollaise and Angus, previously available only at the extra fee, will now become standard breeds at the regular service charge fee of $5.

Also under the new system service will be available to farmers every day of the year with the exception of Christmas and New Year's, this being made possible through a grouping of technicians into three district branch offices located at Kingston, Belleville and Port Hope.

Supervisors have been appointed for the various branches and the list of men working out of Belleville is given below: Bill Hamilton, Supervisor; Carl Sheffield, Harold Motley, Carl Bateman, Dl Young and Terry Walsh.

Christian Wein Awarded $100 Scholarship

The first Carter Scholarship for Hastings County of $100 for the highest standing in Grade XIII papers, including English and Grade XIII mathematics, was won by Christian Wein of Belleville Collegiate. The Department of Education has this week announced the winners of the scholarships.

Evan Morton and June Morden students at Tweed High School tied for second place and will each receive $50 in scholarships.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Wein of R. R. 1, Belleville, Christian Wein was a high winner in scholarships and other awards at the present Belleville commencement exercises. He obtained nine first class honor marks and two second class honor marks, and is now attendant Ontario Agricultural School at Guelph.

Princess Anne Meets Santa In Big Store

LONDON (AP)—"And what is your name?" the department store Santa Claus at a London store asked the curly - haired little girl before him Wednesday.

"Princess Anne," she replied "Oh, yes," boomed Santa in his good-natured voice, "and I'm Father Christmas."

Five seconds went by before Santa realized he had goofed on the name and title had just fallen mechanically on his tired ears.

"Of course you are," said the nine-year-old Princess, ending the embarrassing silence.

Santa recovered and asked her what she wanted for Christmas.

Anne stood on tiptoe and detailed her requirements into Santa's ear.

Santa nodded and said: "I'll see what I can do."

Steven Brian Wilson died at Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, November 18th, at the age of 10 days. He was the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Brian Wilson, 54 Dundas Street East. The funeral was conducted yesterday by the Rev. E. Smith.

Interment took place at Belleville Cemetery.

Would Ban Bicycles

KITCHENER (CP)—Crown Attorney Harold Daufman said Wednesday bicycles should be banned at all times from heavily-travelled highways. His suggestion would not apply to township roads. He suggested that special narrow roads be built at the edge of highways to accommodate cyclists.

Dion Acquitted On 3 Charges By County Jury

The jury yesterday retired for two hours before bringing in their verdict to Donald Dion of Tweed, charged on two counts of arson and one of public mischief.

Dion was accused following the burning of two cars he owned, which police claim he had burned to avoid finance payments.

The mischief charge resulted from a threatening note he allegedly had received previous to the fires. In signed statements to police, Dion admitted writing the note and setting fire to the cars.

A report on the note from the crime laboratory in Toronto read in part . . . "there can be no doubt Dion was the writer of the note."

However in court Tuesday, Dion denied the statements, and said they were written under duress. Defence attorney was J. D. O'Flynn.

The jury acquitted Dion on all three charges.

Accused Given Three Years on Robbery Charge

A sentence of three years in the Kingston penitentiary was penalty given Larry M. Laine, 17, of Halifax, when he appeared in county magistrate's court this morning for sentence on a charge of robbery with violence. Sylvia Smith, 20, of Glace Bay, N.S. was given suspended sentence and 2 years on the same charge. Transportation for Miss Smith back to Nova Scotia was being arranged by local officials of the Salvation Army.

Similar charges against two other Maritimes persons were withdrawn by the Crown. Laine appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills for sentence this morning.

The charge of robbery with violence was laid by Ontario Provincial Police following the report of a Marysville storekeeper that a strange attendant who said he had been struck over the head with a pop bottle and robbed of $72. The four young people were apprehended by police in Milltown-Marysville district following an intense police search.

Farm Tractors' Use on Highway Irks Magistrate

WINDSOR (CP)—The use of farm tractors on public highways was assailed by Magistrate Arthur Hanrahan Wednesday in dismissing a charge of careless driving.

Mrs. Violet Kozela, 35, was charged after the car she was driving collided with a tractor Sept. 17. The driver of the tractor, Stefan Zavarone, 34, of Amherstburg, was killed.

Mrs. Kozela told the court she had intended to pass the tractor but was unable to do so because of an oncoming car.

Magistrate Hanrahan commented:

"I cannot understand why farm heavy loads are permitted on highways when their maximum speed is in the range of 12 to 15 miles an hour. . . They are generally out on highways where a speed of 30 miles an hour is permitted."

Three Present Aldermen Will Remain on Slate

A meeting of the executive of the four local ratepayers associations at the recreation centre yesterday evening completed arrangements for the slate of candidates which the Belleville Voters' Committee proposed to support in their aldermanic campaign. Some discussion centred on the feasibility of three present aldermen on the slate, but it was decided that after investigating their voting record in council, the ratepayers' groups and their personal backgrounds there was no reason for not supporting these men in the coming campaign.

Charges that the associations of the voters' committee were only interested in the newly-annexed area were also discussed. It was pointed out by Mayor Hinton, chairman of the Belleville Voters' Committee that these charges could hardly stand up in the face of the fact that the proposed list of aldermanic candidates included persons residing in all sections of the city. It was also said that there was no attempt being made to have one section or part of the city over another in the attempt to ensure a good city council to serve all the city.

It was also determined that a house-to-house canvass would be made to raise funds to support the list of proposed aldermen in the interests of good government.

Marlon Brando Says Ex-Wife Threatened Him

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) Actor Marlon Brando says his ex-wife threatened him with a butcher knife and threw a trigger at him. She denies it. She threw her to the floor and terrorized her.

He says the hair-pulling and spanking bouts were the other's fault.

A judge read details of their bitter, bizarre marriage Tuesday as he compared new rules on Brando's visits to their son.

Movie actress-model Christina Devi is the centre of the turmoil.

Judge Jerry A. Aggeler ordered Annak Kashfi to stay out of Brando's sight when he goes to see the baby.

The privacy-loving actor and his facial scars, Miss Kashfi made their troubles public through documents filed in Superior Court.

Their dispute is over Brando's right to visit the child. He was given custody under terms of the April divorce, along with $200,-000.

The judge postponed permanent action until Jan. 13. Meanwhile, he ordered that Brando give two hours' advance notice before visiting the child.

Toronto Estate Given Province Says Premier

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost said Wednesday that Dr. Sigmund Samuel has given province his $250,000 Toronto estate as a residence for future lieutenant-governors.

The gift, made in December, 1958, was unconditional, Mr. Frost said, but expressed the hope his home would be used as a residence for the lieutenant-governor. Premier Frost said it would.

The estate will not be taken over by the province during Dr. Samuel's lifetime.

Princess Anne Visits Hospital

LONDON (AP)—Princess Anne visited a London hospital Wednesday and presented a gift to a little girl who had been in a coma for 10 days.

The princess, 9, visited the Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children and gave a doll to Susan Hall, 5, who was injured in a car accident.

Susan's mother, Mrs. Jean Hall, said: "Susan was very excited. She kept saying, 'I'm going to see the princess.'"

Princess Anne also visited a ward where children suffering from polio are treated.

IN MEMORIAM

THOMPSON. — In loving memory of my dear husband, George Todd Thompson, who passed away November 19th, 1955.
Sad, yours was the forgotten day
When no flowers came my way
To show that you were remembered
The one and all but that is certain.
Sadly missed by me, Jessie, daughter-in-law Evelyn and family.

THOMPSON. — In loving memory of a dear husband, George T. Thompson, who passed away November 19th, 1955.
Oft and often do I wonder
Why a grave not far away.
Sadly missed by his wife Pearl, Reeve and Family.

SCRA. — In loving memory of a dear husband, George T. Thompson, who passed away November 19th, 1955.
We who loved you sadly miss you,
Your memory we will always keep,
In our lonely way of thinking,
You are not dead but sleeping.
Sadly missed by Mrs. Florence Scra and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends, neighbors and relatives for the kindness shown us in the recent accident in a deer hunter, Allen E. Clapsaddle. Our most sincere appreciation to Rev. Wilkinson for his kind words.
Lois, Albert G. Wilson and family.

stone-mansion which Dr. Samuel had built in 1931 at a cost of $150,000.

The province has not had an official residence, a governor's residence since 1937. At that time Mary Park's estate was given over to the Hospital for Sick Children because of the high cost of upkeep, then later acquired by the Federal Government and used as a convalescent home for troops during the war.

Dr. Samuel gave the Toronto Western Hospital, a member of the University of Toronto board of governors and a leader in the city's Jewish community. The 82-year-old philanthropist is also an author, historian and steel magnate.

Says Woman Came at Him With Ice Pick

TORONTO (CP) —Michael Brady, 16, a magazine salesman charged with the stabbing murder of 81-year-old Ida Dean, said he got into an argument with the woman about religion and she came at him with an ice pick.

This was the story Brady gave to police last March 8 in a statement ruled admissible by Mr. Justice D. C. Wells and read Wednesday in Assize Court.

Detective Sgt. George Sellar said the youth gave a statement in his own writing that he did not know what happened but he was "very sorry."

The trial continues.

Trenton News

Trenton firemen, who are noted throughout the district for their philanthropic work, are currently sponsoring the fundraising drive for muscular dystrophy victims in town. Elmer Stacey is chairman of the project, and Frank Coleman is the secretary. Canisters have been set up in the chain stores, restaurants, banks and cafes in town. Contributions will also be received at the fire hall. Cheques may be made payable to the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada, and mailed or mailed to the fire hall. The money collected will be used for research into the cause and cure of this crippling disease, and also to provide special chairs and other necessities for patients.

Legion Women Donate $3,500 To Legion Land

TRENTON — Members of the Trenton Legion No. 110 of the Canadian Legion were told on Monday night during their meeting that the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Trenton Legion had donated $3,500 so far this year towards the branch's bond redemption fund. The ladies have given a cheque for $1,000 within the last month to the branch treasurer. Comrade McLaren, and it was decided to forward a letter of thanks to them for this generous contribution.

Chairman of the Poppy Fund Campaign for 1959, William Taylor, said that the campaign has been most successful this year.

Nominations were submitted for branch officers for 1960, the results of which are as follows: President R. A. Grier; 1st vice-president, C. Livingstone; 2nd vice-president, Cec. Woodcock; Sgt.-at-Arms, A. Campbell, C. Valley, F. J. Secretary, D. Craddock; treasurer, W. J. McLaren; secretary, D. Craig; executive committee, G. Ament, N. Black, C. Valley, D. Ramsay, R. Barry, L. Thornton, D. Hall and P. Wright.

Further nominations will be accepted on election night which will be held at the December meeting.

Chairman of the membership committee, Cecil Livingstone, presented thirty-six new candidates for initiation into Legion membership. The candidates were initiated and welcomed by District Commander Frank Hills of Port Hope; Zone Commander Eril Donaldson of Trenton, and Deputy Zone Commander Gerald Simpson of Frankford.

The following were initiated and welcomed into membership: D. E. Porter, T. M. Arts, A. E. Salter, H. F. Quantrill, Jr. Jackson, J. Dickson, Les McEwen, D. E. Chellew, J. E. Henderson, Jr. Blake, R. W. Green, D. R. Bullis, M. Wieczaruk, R. J. Peterson, P. W. Ouyachuk, W. E. Allen, R. W. Payne, J. E. Cormier, G. E. Warsick, R. J. Bullis, C. C. Lawson, G. L. Friday, A. McMurdo, A. D. Rhodes, J. Have Difficulty With Milk Tests

TRENTON — Following the meeting with the Board of Education last evening, the regular meeting meeting of the Board of Health was held.

H. S. Pene reported that he had received a letter from the branch of the Department of Health asking that insulated shipping boxes be supplied for milk samples to be sent to the government laboratory in Kingston, and that the Kingston branch had referred him to the branch at Christie Street Hospital in Toronto. In turn, the Toronto branch had referred him to the Kingston branch, thus creating a stalemate.

Miss M. Gothard reported that she had taken the most recent sample of milk in Kingston, and that she was under the impression that the milk was allowed to lie around and warm up, thus destroying the effectiveness of the test. She also stated that they do not refrigerate the samples of the milk and that their reports were conflicting.

A complaint from a Bay St. resident that rats were entering his home from the town dump was discussed. Mr. Pane said that he was sure the dump was clear of rats but suggested that the pile of lumber at the back of the house in question was harboring the animals.

A motion was passed that the board would ask council to burn down a house on Water Street owned by the town. The board had condemned the dwelling, and it was felt that it could be burned, with the fire department standing by.

Present at the meeting were H. S. Pane, chairman, Miss M. Gothard, Dr. E. W. Dow and Lloyd Weese.

Car Breaks Pole

TRENTON — At 1.15 a.m. this morning a car driven by Earl Runciman of R. R. 4, Warkworth, failed to negotiate a curve at the corner of Front Street and North Murray, and careened into a hydro anchor pole, snapping off the pole and causing an estimated $400 damage to the car. Runciman received a cut nose, and a passenger Douglas Lockhart of R. R. 3, Warkworth, received scratches.

School, Health Boards Agree On Inoculations

TRENTON— The long-awaited joint meeting of the Board of Education and the Board of Health was held Wednesday evening in the municipal offices. From time to time, members of the two boards have had differences of opinion on various matters, and the meeting was held to iron out these differences.

Eric Aldersey, town engineer, had been called upon to act as chairman for the meeting. Present at the meeting were: H. S. Pane, Miss Marjorie Gothard, Lloyd Weese and Dr. E. W. Dow, representing the Board of Health, and S. Ketcheson, Mrs. T. Bedford, P. Tripp, F. Filion, F. J. Asts, C. Crews and R. Barker, from the Board of Education.

Also present were Mrs. J. Wilson, school nurse; Miss C. Harlen, Reg. N., and V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of public schools.

INOCULATION PROBLEM

One of the main points of contention was the question of whether the local children should receive their polio shots in the schools or in the Community Gardens. Mr. Pane explained to the members of the Board of Education that Dr. Dow, Medical Health Officer for the district, would prefer to inoculate the children at the Gardens to eliminate the need for any equipment involved from school to school. Mr. Ketcheson, chairman of the Board of Education, explained that transporting 200 children at one time to the Gardens, involved possibility of accidents, for which he felt the Board of Education would be held responsible by the parents.

Mr. Asts said that the trip to the Gardens for the children would disrupt the school day at the particular school involved.

Mr. Crews read a letter, according to the Department of Health in Toronto, which outlined arrangements for the children to be inoculated in the schools. The letter, he said, was very brief indeed. Dr. Dow was absent from the meeting at the moment, he suggested that this could well happen at the Gardens, with hundreds of children waiting around for their turn.

Mr. Ketcheson suggested that the Gardens could be used as the proper place to give the inoculations. Mrs. Wilson said that there were 1783 pupils scheduled to receive their fourth polio shots within the next few weeks. She was of the opinion that the inoculations could be carried out in the schools more satisfactorily. Miss Haslam said that if some pupils were absent from school when the shots were given, they could be taken to another school and receive them.

Mrs. Gothard interposed that she was at the Community Gardens when the shots were given and she was sure that there were 1,700 there at the time. She stated that she objected to the shots being given in the schools because the pupils then must immediately return to their classrooms and have no opportunity to walk around to circulate their blood. She said that the pupils were afraid to tell the teacher or principal that they were ill and she did not see this fear in the Community Gardens where the pre-school children are inoculated. She thought it was a bad thing for the child to remain in the room, and Mr. Aldersey brought him up to date on the points discussed in his absence.

Dr. Dow explained that he was in favor of the inoculations getting the great mass of pupils at the school, but stated that he would be prepared to have groups of twenty or under brought to the Gardens.

ADOPT SUGGESTION

Members of the two boards finally came to an agreement on the matter, adopting the suggestion of the M.O.H.

Miss Haslam said that if the doctor and nurses were provided with some assistance, it would be possible to inoculate more children without waiting for the sterilization of syringe needles to be sterilized. After some discussion as to which board would be financially responsible for the purchase of additional needles, Mr. Asts suggested that the Board of Education would buy the needles this time.

Mr. Pane added if there was any provision made for a record of inoculations to be sent with a child when he moved away from the school. Mr. Carswell said that such records were sent when the principal of the school requested them.

Mr. Ketcheson thanked the members of the Board of Health for their hospitality, and stated that the meeting had solved a lot of problems.

WINNER IN SUDBURY ELECTION—Don Gillis gets a kiss from his wife after he led all of his 17-man anti-Communist slate to victory in the election Tuesday of Local 598 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at Sudbury. In elections as bitter as any in Canadian labor history Gillis trounced former union boss Nels Thibeaudt who stepped down from the Canadian presidency of the International International union to try to knock out the freshman leader. Gillis won control last March following a 19-month strike against the International Nickel Company. A record 13,255 of 18,000 eligible miners voted. (CP Photo).

Altar Society Holds Annual Christmas Tea

TRENTON — The Altar Society of St. Peters-in-Chains Church in Trenton held its annual Christmas Tea in Columbus Hall on Wednesday. The hall was decorated with stars of evergreens bearing traditional Christmas tree ornaments. The centre tea table held a miniature pink Christmas tree, flanked by tall pink candles, and the small tea tables were centred by pink candles set in a base of silver covered evergreen.

Selling tickets at the door was Miss Lucille Dulmage. Assisting guests at the door were Mrs. J. J. Macdonnell and Mrs. Charles Allore.

In charge of the candy table, ladies with every sort of "goodie" was Mrs. Joseph Hastings and she was assisted by Mrs. R. O'Pay.

The popular sewing table, which featured hand sewn articles for Christmas giving, was looked after by Mrs. F. A. Kennedy and Mrs. K. High.

Mrs. Phoebe Allore handled the Tuck and Take table, and the home baking table was expertly convened by Mrs. L. Sinclair, assisted by Mrs. Joe Couture, Mrs. Wilfred Allore, Mrs. R. Lalonde and Mrs. F. Dobson.

Pouring tea throughout the afternoon were Mrs. John Garrett, Mrs. John Forbes, Mrs. Ray Bussey and Miss Susan Carroll.

Servers at the tea tables were: Mrs. Marie Rose, Mrs. Lloyd Seeley, Mrs. Hubert Campbell, Mrs. Gordon Sheehlers, Mrs. John Couture, Mrs. M. Halleran, Mrs. Patrick Scott and Mrs. William O'Neil.

The kitchen convener was Mrs. Harold Long.

In charge of the Grand Draw were Mrs. G. McDonald and Mrs. Bernard. Winner of first prize (painting) was Mary Robb of Paris, Ontario. Other winners were: R. G. Butler, Peter Zalesnick, Dr. D. Campbell, Jean Elliot, R. R. 4 Frankford, Ross Watt, Miss Kay Macauley, Frankford, J. Price, Frankford, Mary Carroll, Margaret Napier, G. O. Hogan, Mrs. P. Ross and Rae Bannon, Oakville.

Mrs. Ray Johnston of Trenton won the door prize a hamper of apples. Mrs. Francis Barry won the chilton cake and Mrs. Jerome Macdonnell won a cake also.

The ladies report a very successful afternoon.

Hoffa's Ouster Pending Trial Is Requested

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer for longtime Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa requested a week Wednesday for the removal of Teamster President James R. Hoffa.

In a motion mailed to federal district court in Washington, Godfrey P. Schmidt asked for Hoffa's ouster pending trial before a board of special examiners or referees.

The motion, sent to Judge F. Dickinson Letts, charges that Hoffa deprived Teamster members of rights guaranteed by the new labor law.

It also accused him of consistent unwillingness to co-operate with a three-man board of monitors appointed by the court to expedite Hoffa's administration of the union.

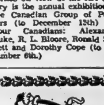
Gallery Displays Sculpture by Rebecca Sisler



TORONTO — The first pieces of sculpture ever to be commissioned by the Art Gallery of Toronto specifically for its collection is now finished and will be on view at the Gallery Beat Friday, November 20th.

The commission was provided by a grant of $2,000 from the Canada Council, was granted to Ontario sculptor Rebecca Sisler. The grant was one of six made by the Council to Canadian galleries as part of its policy to stimulate interest in the arts and in Canadian artists. A condition of the grant was that the sculpture should be in the Gallery's collection by December, 1960.

The sculpture is of polished, laminated walnut, 94 1-4 inches high including base. It consists of a standing group of a mother with a child at each knee, carved in the full round. The lines of the figures flow together or forming a solid mass which suggests a feeling of protection and continuity. The title of the group is Tree of Life.

Rebecca Sisler lives and works in a remodelled blacksmith shop at Terra Cotta, about 35 miles northwest of Toronto. After a course at the Ontario College of Art, she studied at the Royal Danish Academy in Copenhagen. She has exhibited her work with the Ontario Society of Artists, the Royal Canadian Academy and the Sculpture Society of Canada.

Also on view at the Art Gallery is an annual exhibition of the Canadian Group of Painters (to December 13th) and Four Canadians: Alexandra Luke, R. L. Bloore, Ronald Solkett and Dorothy Cope (to December 6th.)

Smoke Gets in Your Eyes

We see that quite an effort is being made by the authorities in Oakville to curb juvenile smokers (and, presumably chewers). The action is being taken under the provisions of the Tobacco Restraint Act which makes it an offence for parents to give their consent to children under the age of 16 to smoke. They may be charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency and fined from $10 up to $100, as may the people who sell the tobacco product to a juvenile. The juvenile, meanwhile, is not forgotten either. He may be fined from one dollar to four dollars depending on the frequency of the offence.

This action appears to be taking on the aspects of a cause celebre as Trafalgar and Burlington police departments are following suit in enforcing this law. Already eight girls and two boys have been charged under the Act and will appear in court at a future date.

In Toronto, however, Chief James Mackey advises that Metropolitan Police only warn juveniles who are caught smoking and that they do not do it continually and have been for some time now." In the case of a flagrant violator the police will go to the homes of the juveniles and speak with their parents. This, the Toronto police chief added, was the only action contemplated by the department.

Now it would seem to us that if the Tobacco Restraint Act is to be enforced as a law should be the Toronto police have erred in not laying charges, against the flagrant violators especially. We are sure that many of the constables' little trips to converse with parents could be saved if parents soon realized that it was going to cost them a pretty penny to condone Johnny's expression of maturity, not to mention it costing Johnny and his supplier as well.

On the other hand, if the law is to be considered obsolete or out of fashion it should be repealed. Meanwhile it is the duty of the police to enforce its regulations to the best of their ability.

We can't help but think that such action might not be too well received in the Tillsonburg-Simcoe-Delhi area where folks make their living from the weed."

However, we must say that juvenile smokers are certainly quite common both in this and other cities. If this practice is to be condemned then let action be taken; if condoned then let the law be repealed. It should not, however, be allowed to stand in idleness.

Planners' Muddle in Russia

Soviet Russia's socialist planned economy is undoubtedly equal to the task of regimenting scientific research for an all-out effort to shoot a satellite around the moon. But when it comes to managing the home economy Soviet-style socialist planning leaves a lot to be desired.

This is clear from articles in Pravda which complain bitterly about the resurgence of "nationalism" in many of the republics of the USSR. Government officials, or even educated Communists, it seems, have been committing the unpardonable sin of- giving priority in industrial production to the needs of their own region, without regard to Moscow's master economic plan for the whole country.

A year or so ago, it will be recalled, Soviet Premier Khrushchev announced sweeping changes in industrial planning aimed at decentralizing authority with a view to stepping up production. Centralized bureaucracy, Khrushchev said, was strangling industrial production and hampering growth in the Soviet Union.

Decentralization, however, just doesn't seem to be working the way Mr. Khrushchev had hoped. What has happened is that countless regional bureaucracies, with plans of their own for local industry, have followed independent courses with the result that industrial production plans for the country as a whole are badly out of kilter.

What Russia lacks under socialist planning, clearly, is the self-regulating mechanism of the market economy, under which production is geared to supply and demand. Official planning, no matter how skilled, is no substitute for the productive forces of the free market.

Machine Real Liberator

Industry

A British university professor who recently read over 600 examination papers in economic history written by boys between the ages of 16 and 18 from some 30 different examining boards says that:

"Almost without exception these students have in their minds a very hazy idea that an economic explanation of the improvements in material standards of living is necessary.

"The story goes something like this: The good old days England of Queen Victoria and for a good part of her reign the conditions in which the great majority of the people lived were horrible. Only a very small number of rich people lived comfortable and decent lives; the rest lived in misery. This misery was due to greed and injustice. Gradually the greed and injustice were vanquished. Then were of course, still some others but the material standard of life of everyone was good nowadays. The evils and injustices of the past are buried with the dead".

The professor concludes: "Only one boy, out of those who discussed this whole question, suggested that the explanation could be related this moral story in favor of an economic story which explained it in terms of more productive ways of organizing work and the use of machines and various forms of kinetic energy".

The professor's experience interests us if for no other reason but that our own experience convinces us that large numbers of Canadians also explain the unprecedented rise in living standards over the past century in moral, rather than economic terms, i.e., attribute it in the main to the defeat of "greed and injustice".

Asked to say how it has come about that the wage-earner of today, working hardly more than 40 hours a week, can yet live four times better than his grandfather whose (much less congenial) work-week was 72 hours, the average man almost surely give the credit to unions or governments or the vote, or to a combination of all three. This is one of the most common of all fallacies.

The truth, of course, is that the real liberator of the toilers from grinding poverty and unending drudgery was none of these. It was the machine.

More precisely, it was the cheapening of the goods produced by the process which followed from the invention and constant improvement of the mechanical efficiency of one marvellous piece of machinery after another. And this it is not be forgotten, required by and was only made possible by the steadily increasing use of energy.

It is to this, to man's mastery of the technique of industrial organization and to the subsequent provision on a mass scale of the reproductive capital it generated for further use, rather than expansion of industry into new forms and new fields that we owe the living standards we enjoy today.

The lone scholar does not, as a solitary individual, explained the rise in living standards in Victorian England to us from moral terms. The pity of it is that, in this age of mass education, he should have left us with his own.

That social attitudes have changed enormously (and in many respects for the better) and that we owe a debt to many of the early reformers, we are not disputing. But we surely owe an infinitely greater debt to the inventors of a few men of fertile imagination, inventive ability, financial enterprise and organizational skill who between them revolutionized the whole age of plenty hitherto unfreamed of.

Our concern today should be to make very certain that we are not creating a climate in which such talents are denied their just reward.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 18, 1939

Canada's overseas commander-in-chief knows his troops and is proud of them. He is proud of their physique, of their intelligence and of their service view of the great moral issues in the present war. Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the first overseas division, took a group of newspapermen into his confidence and told his impressions of the units under his command. He had just returned from a coast-to-coast tour during which he visited every first division unit. The General received the newsmen in the office of Brigadier-Regrs, who served as a private in the First Great War while the General held a commission and rose to command the Canadian Royal Artillery. The Minister was present throughout the conference.

Bridge Street United Church will mark another milestone in the 134th anniversary, on Sunday. Special services of that day have been arranged for the day and the Rev. Dr. Trevor Davies will be the guest. Well known throughout Canada as a preacher, he is also a special preacher for the day.

The annual collection and social service appeal by members of the Belleville Fire Department during the late few weeks prior to the Christmas holidays, will not be undertaken this year, Fire Chief William Lynch announced yesterday. With the tremendous calls of the city devoting their time to the war effort at this time nature, it was felt by the members of the department that they could not do it justice.

Eleven Salvation Army officers will be appointed in the immediate future, as chaplains in the Canadian Active Service Force, it has been announced.

The following interesting letter was published in a lecture given by Lieut.-Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., to the officers at the mess at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Among the documents Col. Ponton exhibited, was a patent of a Sidney township farm with the Great Seal and signed by Isaac Borck, President, just a few weeks before he was killed at Queenston Heights. The first patents in Sidney and Thurlow townships are dated 1797; the first patents of town lots in Belleville are dated 1816. St. Thomas' Church, St. Andrew's Church and the Methodist Church were granted about one hundred years ago. Zwicky's house, said to all Indians as Battle Island, at the mouth of Saganaski River, was owned by the Morris family, being descendants of Mary Morris who, with her husband and Beverley Robinson and many others, was dispossessed of death by the Americans as United Empire Loyalists, because they adhered to King George, his flag and his armies.

The two oldest stone houses in Belleville are one on Dundas Street, near the residence of Mr. Alfreg Gillen, at the foot of Millen Road, and the other one is on the bay shore at the foot of Bridge St. East and is owned by Col. Ponton. The historic first Court House in Canada was on Meyers' Hill here: it disappeared some years ago. Some of the early days was called "The Hill of Letters" because letters were shown by Col. Ponton which were mailed before the days of envelopes in the year 1833. The postage via New York was 2s. 6d.

Says Pigeons Spread Ills

Chatham News

The pigeon nuisance had its elements of romantic appeal. It's mournful "Coooo", in time monotonously repeated, has been endured by humanity because the supply bird was accepted as symbolizing peace.

Now, however, it has taken on other, less attractive aspects — with some of which Chatham, and even the municipal clerics of the City Hall, are already acutely familiar.

Recently, F. W. Taylor of the Canadian National Railways, medical division in an address to the Canadian Institute of Sanitation, indicated the pigeon as a carrier of more than 30 diseases as meningitis, encephalitis, histoplasmosis, cryptococcosis, fungus infections, toxoplasmosis and food poisoning.

Mr. Taylor urged that this unsightly nuisance should be eliminated by an extermination of the species. It is the very least by banishing it from towns and cities as a public health measure.

There is no doubt that his suggestion will encounter some bitter opposition, for the pigeon apparently has many friends and remarkably few outright enemies.

In many towns and cities, however, the pigeon is an accepted nuisance. It defaces monuments and buildings and it is easy to understand the consternation these cooing of one pigeon, when multiplied by hundreds, can bring about a mild case of insanity.

If, in addition, pigeons are a menace to human health there appears to be little reason for tolerating their presence in any community.

Apparently Mr. Taylor's report will be circulated among the health officers throughout the country which, we feel, should undertake their own surveys based on his findings. It is possible that this may lead to the discovery of how some diseases manage to spread so mysteriously throughout a community.

Many Travel Stickers Label You a Hick

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Problem: The more you travel, the more decisively concerned with the rate of speed, and accordingly familiar with the uses to which buses are put; but what is important in a community is where the money is going, and how much good it is doing, rather than the size of the tax rate itself.

I agree with Mencken. Here, who suggests in his entertaining new book, "Act One," that all actors have had unhappy childhoods, and that acting becomes a way of overcoming their loneliness.

How overweight-you're because auto traffic; more auto traffic makes for more congestion; greater congestion compels us to build new superhighways — and so on, in an ever-closing spiral.

It is an amusing paradox that nothing makes a traveller look so provincial as having a large number of stickers on his car or luggage. The desire to display where one has been is always the mark of a rube.

One of the national myths that we have is that our country was founded by settlers who came here to establish religious freedom; what they came here for was to escape religious persecution, and to establish the freedom to worship as they pleased, a denied religious freedom to dissenting sects.

I can't imagine why everyone was so shocked by the exposure of the fact that our television TV is part of the entertainment business, and is consequently based on illusion, not on reality and our indignation is quite out of proportion to complaint that a stage magician really doesn't have any rabbits in the hat he pulls them out.

The only thing wrong with common sense is that people who have it are always trying to apply it to uncommon problems.

It is naive to call for "peace" in the Middle East or Cyprus only when what we need are law and order between nations; the only way to protect neighbors from attacking each other, but enforcement of the law will become down heavily on the transgressor.

Persons who lack the capacity to love are fond of making virtues out of their failure. Those who cannot love his country calls himself a "cosmopolite"; a woman who cannot love a man calls herself a "feminist"; the person who cannot love at all calls himself a "realist."

Few sights can be more startling than taking a peep at ourselves in an unexpected mirror; caught off guard, our features do not at all resemble the hopeful image of ourselves we carry around in our minds.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

THERE'S NO SOME THING AS AN EASY WAY TO REDUCE

Maybe and more often I receive letters asking about this or that drug for "reducing."

Not so long ago the U. S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Arthur S. Flemming, said publicly that "there is no such article" as a "simple, safe and sure food, drug or device which will help a person lose weight without exercise of will to cut down the food intake."

He is right. There is no foolproof and easy pill that will take off weight. If there were, I am sure you can readily imagine what would happen. Somebody in every community would hear about it, try it, and change from overweight to normal.

It wouldn't take long for everyone to know about it.

But this is not what happens. Rather, we hear of this or that drug, or that system, or the other notion. About this diet that pill. It's usually some kind of different scheme on his or her baggage. The desire to display where one has been is always the mark of a rube.

One of the national myths that we have is that our country was founded by settlers who came here to establish religious freedom; what they came here for was to escape religious persecution, and to establish the freedom to worship as they pleased, a denied religious freedom to dissenting sects.

What are the "tables" that are always turning?

Most people think that the excess fat is caused by eating too much sugar. This is not true, as was first shown by Henry Drummond. It appears, however, that it has been his subject of a sermon preached by a Catholic minister, Thomas Chalmers.

Chalmers on a journey sat beside the coach driver and quite unexpectedly at one point took his whip and cracked it skillfully behind the ear of one of the horses. When asked why he did this, the driver replied, "There is a stump along here, and the horse on the off side always shies at it, but if you touch the other one with the whip, he will shy to the other side and will go straight past."

Chalmers then preached his sermon on the equilibrium of a new affection — driving one thing out of the mind by another new thing; distinguishing the power of an evil passion by introducing a good passion.

After all is said and done, life resolves itself into considerable of a struggle. We do not drift into heaven. We are the creatures of the treasures of life poured out at our feet by a beneficent Creator. We have to work pretty hard to be happy, and one thing we have to do is to forget a lot of things. This we do by making ourselves remember other things, and neutralizing unpleasant memories with pleasant, by cultivation of lines of things that sere and ruin through the expulsive power of things that are lofty and worthwhile.

"Dear Dr. Molner: If a person taking a particular avoids sugar the day before the test, and the urine shows normal, could that person have diabetes?

"Also if a person has 2 to 4 per cent sugar in the urine, and the blood test is normal, is that person in danger of diabetes?—M.J."

Final question: Yes, avoiding sugar could conceal the fact that diabetes is present in some cases. The disease would still be present. That is why a blood test is more accurate.

Second question: There is a condition known as "renal glycosuria) in which sugar appears in the urine and not in the blood. It is of no importance.

Note to A. T. H.: Have your doctor examine the child, or refer you to a clinic or hospital specializing in such cases. "Slow To Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pain" is not enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 5c in coin to cover handling.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GO ON ANYWAY

I came across a line in a book written about the famous painter and teacher Robert Henri. It is full of wisdom, especially for artists. But it was a wonderful and inspiring teacher. Here is what he says: "Sometimes I have said in one of his fascinating talks to his art students: 'Everything depends on those who go on anyway.'"

The trouble with so many is that they stop or give up, long before they gain a foothold.

To win in art is the same as winning in anything else in which you are interested and for which you have a love and appreciation. There are times when we all get discouraged and wonder about the way ahead, but when that time comes, recall this line of Henri's — "Go On Anyway!"

In my sophomore year in college, in Kansas, I got discouraged and debated whether to quit school and get married to a most noted preacher in Kansas City who was a friend of my father. I was very much impressed by this man, by name, Dr. Stephen Northrup. He wasted no time. He said: "Finish your college course, before they have locked the door sign to 'Go On Anyway'."

I took his advice and finished the job that was expected of me. Over the years, when I have been tempted to leave a thing unfinished, I have been inspired by that fine man who told me to be a finisher, for that is what the world so sorely needs. I wish I could give to other young men the message that I was taken by charity — and to "Go On Anyway."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

So proud are we of our great cities and towns, our abounding energy, our industries that they were packed with raging traffic, our marvelous skyscrapers, our massive and magical fabric, that we are liable to forget that we are totally dependent, all this massive and magical fabric, on the farmer.

It is the farmers who keep us alive from day to day in order that we may go about our wonderful gymnastics in what we call our "standard of living." Not a loaf of bread, not a quart of milk, not a thin steak, not an egg, not a potato would we have without the farmers. Not a pickle, a salad, a dish of peaches. Not a breath would we draw, in a matter of days, for all our majestic technology, without the farmers. It is the farmers, in short, who give us life.

"Suppose," I asked a big wholesale provision man, "suppose the farmers went on strike for a shorter day."

"Well," he said, "I've heard that sentiment guesses for long we would last in cities if the farmers went on strike. I know these wiseacres who would be declared out in two days. I figure we'd last about a week. Talk about civil defence! The cities would start out from the cities about the third day. City hoodlums would murder the farmers to get at the food supplies, looting and wrecking. I figure in a week it would be worse than an atomic bomb."

Farmers, let us remember, are our basic citizens. Without them, in all the rest is much Hedley-wood stage setting, fictitious as a big play.

Beer Essentially Thirst Quencher Not Stimulant

TORONTO (CP)—Beer is essentially a thirst quencher and not a stimulant. Soft drinks, milk, tea and coffee are all competitors which are widely advertised."

Those words were included in a document introduced Wednesday at the combines trial of Canadian Breweries Limited. It said legal opinion questions the right of Ontario to forbidd beer advertising in newspapers, periodicals or radio but the industry has observed the government's wishes in that regard.

Crown prosecutor R. F. Wilkes described the unsigned document as a June 8, 1928 memorandum seized from Canadian Breweries' files.

It says beer advertising is flowing into the province from the United States and Quebec and that "a great many misconceptions have grown up in the minds of the public about the quality of beer that I could today."

PARLIAMENTARY

members were not included in the list. They are Arthur Maloney, Toronto Parkdale, John B. Hamilton, York West (Sat.) and G. E. Mahoney, London.

Informed sources said they were unable to accept reappointment because of the prime minister's stipulation that all positions and directorates with business corporations must be relinquished by appointees.

The others named: Egan Chambers, Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George, to be parliamentary assistant to the defence (Col.), government whip in the Commons, trade and commerce; L. Rhodes Cardin, Huron (Ont.), farmer whip, to agriculture; Roland English, Gange, fisheries; Richard Hanson, Quebec West Arbor; Edmund Morris, Halifax, parliamentary counsel; W. H. Taylor, Quebec East, public works.

The posts have been regarded as stepping stones to the cabinet. In the present ministry, Works Minister Walker and Defence Production Minister Ghurley were parliamentary assistants in 1925-26.

Appointed previously by Prime Minister Diefenbaker was Wallace Nesbitt, MP for Oxford (Ont.), as parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Green. He is deputy head of Canada's UN delegation.

The remaining appointment probably will go to health and welfare.

FORMER GM

partment of a GM subsidiary in 1910.

He was made a GM vice-president in 1942.

He leaves his wife, Veda, and a four-year-old daughter, Jane Kristan.

REMOTE SITE

It was because of the remoteness of the hunting site that provincial police were not informed of the accident until midafternoon.

The ordeal of breaking the tragedy to Mrs. Anderson fell to Dr. A. C. Kerlikowske, director of University of Michigan Medical Centre and E. L. Cushing, president and owner of Wolverine Manufacturing Company. Both are family friends and neighbors who were called at the suggestion of Frederick C. Matthael, Ann Arbor district judge and also a friend.

Mrs. Anderson told her little daughter later:

"She did it the only way you can with a four-year-old child", Dr. Kerlikowske said. "She simply said: 'The Good Lord has taken your daddy'."

Since Mr. Anderson's retirement the family had travelled in Hawaii and Japan.

Weighing 185 pounds, Mr. Anderson had been hale and hearty. Associates liked him for his genial manner. But he could be firm in contract talks.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther once told the war labor board in an obvious tribute to Mr. Anderson: "GM is tough, but you always know where they are going whether you agree with them or not."

Mr. Anderson liked his role as labor negotiator. He once said: "In GM, labor relations is everybody's business."

Mr. Reuther is en route to Europe and not available for comment on the death. Frank Winn, UAW public relations director, said "UAW leaders were shocked and distressed to learn of the dreadful accident which befell Mr. Anderson."

On his trip back to Michigan, Mr. Curtice was met by Wade McNaught, a member of the GM public relations staff. He said Mr. Curtice spent about 40 minutes talking with Mrs. Anderson at the Arbor before he went to his home in Flint.

High School Activities

By TRINA JANITCH

This column is being written all upon a midnight dreary, while I study, weak and weary; indeed, weak, weary and incredible describes the average BCIVS student during examination week. Grade XIII students finish examinations Wednesday and other grades commence Friday. Last week's system of three one and one-half hour exams will be in effect this year, too. In a recent interview, Mr. Orr, BCIVS principal, said that this system minimizes interruptions as available teaching time. He went on to say that, particularly in grades nine and ten, sufficient work has not been covered by November to warrant a longer exam, and added that, while the three-a-day schedule was bad for the night-before crammer, a well prepared student should find little difference. He could not say whether results would be this system were better or worse than under the old system, as it has been in operation only one year.

Members of the girls' volleyball team booked time out from their studying last week to try to prove that youth and vitality will conquer age and experience. The testing-ground of this theory was a volleyball game against the teaching staff, and somehow, when the dust settled, the teachers were victorious by the embarrassing score of 15-3. Naturally, the fact that teachers referred had nothing to do with this!

The girls' Hi-Y is planning to enter a YMCA float in the annual Santa Claus parade. This float will depict the Nativity scene and will be designed and endeavored by the girls (with minor assistance from the Boys' Hi-Y.)

If you are just starting to think about Christmas, you're way behind the BCIVS Glee Club. Since September, along with the orchestra, they have been practising for their annual Christmas Musicale. This event is always arranged and executed beautifully, and we are looking forward to it eagerly.

Look out, boys! It's Sadie Hawkins time. On November 30th, the Girls' Athletic Society will present the "Hay Drag" as a public service to all love-lorn girls. The dress for this dance is hard-time, and there will be a prize for the best outfit. Naturally, Kickapoo Joy Juice will be served. This dance should be the most fun ever, besides giving the girls an excuse to be with their secretly admired.

P.S. — Congratulations to Q.S.S. on their two important football victories. BCIVS proudly acknowledges itself second to one, namely Quinte. But wait till basketball!

FRIGID VISITOR TO A FRIGID CITY — The ice-covered tanker "Taurus," inbound from Cleveland, Ohio, laden with gasoline and oil, presented this wintry scene after tying up at Randolph St. dock, Chicago. Deckhand Lou Bellanger of Muskegon, Mich., is busy freeing dock rigging from the ice formations. Temperatures reached a record near zero reading for this date. (AP Wirephoto).

Jimmy Thomson, Former Hockey Star, Speaker

PICTON — Father, son and daughter night was marked at the Kiwanis Club meeting at the Royal Hotel, Monday night. There were 66 present to enjoy this annual event.

Guest speaker was Jim Thomson, former NHL star and a member of Connie Mayle Leafs for eleven years and one year with Chicago.

Mr. Thomson had some interesting stories to tell of his experiences which included play as captain for the Leafs and on five Stanley Cup winning teams. Though he lauded sport for its benefits, he urged the younger folk to secure a good education to fit themselves for a career when their athletic days are over. He emphasized the value of co-operation and the need of good sportsmanship.

Sheriff H. J. Colliver introduced Mr. Thomson who was thanked by Andy McIntosh.

Also a guest, Frank Tindall, athletic director at Queen's University, and coach of the Golden Gaels, gave an interesting talk on football and used a film to explain the finer points of the game. He was thanked by Bill Adams.

Slides taken in Australia, showing kangaroos, were especially enjoyed by the children.

President Mel Love presided for the usual meeting while Chris Lockyer convened the program which followed.

Wellington, Picton Districts Get 10 Inches of White Mantle

Snow all around us and not a flake to sit on!

That was at eight o'clock this morning.

The weather man jolted southern Prince Edward County and northern Hastings with a sudden winter punch last night, but passed up this city and immediate district.

This morning Wellington was blanketed under twelve inches of snow while Picton residents plunged their way through a ten-inch fall.

Mountain View wakened under a two-inch mantle but there were bare highways and fields between there and the city.

Three inches covered the Lake St. Peter area yesterday afternoon, and it is presumed all that region is snow-covered.

Picton and Wellington and the surrounding districts were "winter wonderlands" with snow clinging to trees and shrubbery.

Police Constable Allen Mervin of Picton said department of highways snow plows were out all night. A number of minor traffic accidents came in the wake of the storm.

Wellington residents said the snow started to fall last evening and fell heavily until four o'clock this morning.

City residents stared as Prince Edward County motor vehicles drove into the city early today. Their tops covered with from eight to ten inches of snow.

The odd storm is no precedent. With the wind and weather coming in from Lake Ontario, the strange freak of nature cuts a swath from west of Wellington through Picton to the Cherry Valley area.

Skiers were overcast with a blanket of snow here early today and around eight o'clock a few flakes were falling in the city.

TWO JOBS TOO HEAVY

TORONTO (CP) — A. H. Richardson has resigned as chief conservation officer of the 26 conservation authorities in Ontario, the department of planning and development announced Wednesday. Mr. Richardson still holds the position of chief conservation engineer for Ontario. Officials said Mr. Richardson had been overburdened with the two jobs. Each conservation authority will now have to appoint its own chief conservation officer.

Not the End Of Canning In Prince Edward

PICTON — "The discontinuance of Canadian Canners Ltd. operations in Prince Edward County has not spelled the end of the canning industry in Prince Edward," L. J. Greer, local canner, told a local service club yesterday.

"In the present season, 1,142,000 cases of canned goods have been processed in the County. This is divided as follows: 360 thousand cases of peas, 310 thousand cases tomato juice, 372 cases of tomatoes, and 200 thousand cases of pumpkin, fruit and apples.

G. Hilliard, representing a food brokerage firm, pointed out that despite the fact there are fewer farmers, nevertheless one out of every four persons is concerned with food production and distribution. Food processing has not been centralized to any great extent as other industry, he said. He deplored some aspects of trading stamps as a "merchandising gimmick" and spoke of the necessity of eliminating false advertising. "In thinking of food we should think of the 'good Book' rather than the pocketbook and consider the destitution in some lands where food is scarce," he said.

CONTACT CLUB

On Monday the members of Contact Club of Christ Church enjoyed a social evening.

The most enjoyable event was undertaken by Barbara Berrisim's group, and consisted of a take-off on TV show "I'll Could Be You."

Florence Lamoor did a capable job as master of ceremonies when a good number of members of different members of the Club were brought to light.

The commentators were written and delivered by Doreen Miles. Much fun was enjoyed by all taking part in the program with prizes being presented to those whose secret in the group had been found.

The evening was brought to a close with refreshments served by the hostesses, Helen McCoy-Cormick, Elaine Little and Catharine Roulei.

TOWN - COUNTRY CLUB

The Amelisburg Town and Country Club had their first meeting recently, at the home of Mrs. Elmer Green. This project is "working with youth". Mrs. Elmer Young and Mrs. Winston Palver will be the leaders.

The following were elected, Margaret Montgomery; vice president, Carol Green; secretary, Patsy Townsend; treasurer, Mary Montgomery; press reporter, Cathy Wannamaker.

Baby Is Born In Ultra Men's Club in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) A redhaired baby girl was born Wednesday in the Union League Club, an ultra conservative men's retreat which women may enter only if accompanied by their husbands. It never happened before in the club's 89-year history.

The event was set in motion Monday when Robert F. Doyle, 43, and his wife, Helen, 42, travelled from their home in Iowa Park, a suburb of Rockford, Ill., to Passavent Hospital in Chicago for the expected arrival of their seventh child.

"The doctor said it wasn't time," Doyle recalled. "My wife went back Tuesday. 'Come back Wednesday,' the doctor said."

So Doyle, president of a Consumer Finance Company and a club member, took his wife to the Union League Club for Wednesday night.

Registered as the Doyles were leisurely dressing Wednesday morning, they had their first inkling of trouble in their room.

"When the waiter came, it started," Doyle said. "No bite," Doyle said.

"You read about things like this and you're supposed to do them," Doyle said. "I guess I knew everything was all right." Doctors had given him instructions. I whacked the baby on the bottom. I guess I did. I knew everything was all right."

The baby was delivered in the Doyles' hotel room. She was taken by ambulance to the hospital where both are doing well. They plan to name the newcomer Calamity.

Avondale Cubs, Scouts M.A. Presents P.P. Pin

The Avondale Cubs and Scout Pack held links for their fifth November meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Clarke, Trent Road, with the president, Mrs. D. Cooke, presiding.

During the business period, reports were given by the treasurer, Mrs. Pitz, and the Legacy, welfare convener, Mrs. Cooke suggested that the next project be "silent money."

Mrs. C. Wilson and Mrs. D. Cooke reported that they had attended a group committee meeting. Stating that their last project was most successful.

Mr. Taylor reported that 13 badges were given out to Cubs. It was reported that Boy Scout Week would be held from February 7th, to the 13th. The aim of Boy Scout Week is to focus public attention on the whole Boy Scout movement, as a character and citizenship training program, is doing for the boys and young men of Canada. The next group committee meeting is on December 3rd, at the home of Mrs. D. Cooke.

A report was read on the study course that took place in Toronto, which was most informative.

The event of the evening was the planting of the past president's pin on Mrs. T. Legacy by Mrs. Dave McDonald, for her tremendous leadership, Mrs. Legacy gave of her time and talents untiringly, and she always created a warm and congenial atmosphere; the membership was doubled.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. D. Cooke, Wright Ave., and will take the form of a Christmas party.

W.H. Auxiliary Hears Details of Nurses' Meet

Glowing reports of the recent "Fashion Fiesta" were heard at the regular meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary as the convenors of the various committees reported on that financially fruitful event. Mrs. W. H. Fickle, convener, summed up the general remarks by thanking one and all for their generous support in making the show such a tremendous success.

The Belleville General Hospital was represented at the recent Nurses' Conference held in Toronto, by two members of the Auxiliary, the president Mrs. B. E. Burley and Mrs. J. F. Buchan. Director of Hospital Volunteers and Public Relations. Both members gave interesting accounts of the different sessions attended and among other things, pointed out the importance the Auxiliary holds in the life of every hospital.

With the Christmas season approaching each member brought a small gift to the meeting to be donated to the Opportunity Shop, thus helping less fortunate people in their purchases.

The guest speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Jay Campbell, Director of the Nurses' Registry Association, who outlined the work of the "Registry" since its inception in 1944.

Mrs. Campbell was introduced by Mrs. Burley and thanked by Mrs. Romeo Fortenette.

A social half hour was enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

HAM COLORFUL AND GAY FOR HOLIDAY BUFFET

Here's a grand meal everyone can enjoy during the festive season. The centre of attraction is cooked ham, sliced and mounded "petal-style" with slices overlapping, then covered with a gelatine glaze and refrigerated until serving time.

Peeking out of the casserole is a rich, creamy sauce crammed with high quality mushrooms and a variety of quick-cooking frozen vegetables—delicious! The potato chips, of course, came out of a box—so handy to keep around for serving either hot or cold at this busy time.

Life Series of Miracles Says Missionary at 97

VERNON, B.C. (CP) — Mrs. Louise Campbell-Brown says her life has been a series of miracles.

Her delicate appearance, belies a life of action and her glowing eyes belie her age. She celebrated her 97th birthday last month.

"I'm thankful for such a happy life," she said then to friends who had gathered to honor her as authoress, college founder and missionary.

Mrs. Campbell-Brown was born in Scotland, in 1883, she and her husband, Colin, travelled to China for the Presbyterian Church. They were stationed in a village near Amoy, where their three children were born.

STARTED COLLEGE

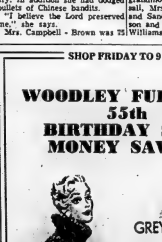
There Mrs. Campbell - Brown established the Chuan Chow Westminster College, which today graduates more than 1,000 doctors, lawyers, educationists, artists and technicians annually.

Mrs. Campbell-Brown adopted a Chinese daughter there, too. The daughter now is a maternity doctor working in the Fukiyuan Islands.

The family came to Canada in 1911 and made their home at Amory Ranch, between this Okanagan Valley and Oyama, about 20 miles south.

Shortly after her husband's death in 1924, Mrs. Campbell-Brown converted the ranch into a resort. During the years there she walked five miles to attend and sometimes conduct the services at the United Church in Oyama.

ENJOYED BUILDING



This, she says now, was no hardship. Often in China she walked as much as 14 miles a day during duties as a missionary. In addition she had dodged bullets of Chinese bandits.

"I believe the Lord preserved me," she says.

Mrs. Campbell - Brown was 25

Quinte Rebekah Lodge Holds Successful Yule Tea, Bazaar

The Oddfellows Hall, Front Street, was transformed into a festive fairyland of lighted Christmas trees, coloured ballons, green pine and cedar boughs, and dainty colored baskets, on Wednesday afternoon for a lovely Tea Bazaar tea and bazaar sponsored by the Quinte Rebekah Lodge.

The entrance foyer was decorated with a small, lighted Christmas tree, a Nativity Scene set along one wall, and a bouquet of yellow and white mums on a table near the door. Various small cedar trees were set around the foyer.

The patrons were graciously received at the door by the Noble Grand, Mrs. Vesna Dunsmore, and the Vice Grand, Mrs. Ila Addy.

Tickets were sold at the door by Mrs. F. Follit, Mrs. E. Hick and Mrs. J. Twiddy, all Past Noble Grands.

OFFER WIDE VARIETY OF ITEMS

Visitors to the bazaar, conveniently set up by Pythian, P.N.G. assisted by co-convener, Mrs. E. Beal, found a wide variety of useful and ornamental "potential Christmas gifts" at reasonable prices. Also, for those desiring homebaking, and taste-tempting array of homemade candy.

They were able to do their Christmas shopping and at the same time avail themselves of the well festively garnished refreshments under which the tables were laden with everything from buns to homemade layer cakes, to individual bottled goods, devilled and pickled eggs and iced Christmas cakes. Mrs. M. Legge, P.N.G., was convener, and Mrs. M. Jose was co-convener of this table. They were assisted by Mesdames W. Langridge, G. White, H. Brenton, F. Bird, A. McKee, P.N.G., R. West, P. P. Holmes and F. Bird.

The parcel post table containing surprise packages was conducted by Mrs. M. Jackman, with Mrs. I. Martin as co-convener.

Lovely needlecraft, including colorful crocheted doilies and centrepieces, and starched and colored crocheting cup and saucer covers, found favor on the fancy work table, which was attended by Mrs. J. Caldwell, Co-convener was Mrs. A. Barclay, and assistants were Mesdames M. Hall, Campbell, M. Drumond, L. Smith, P.N.G., L. Whitehurst, R. Charlton, P.N.G., and Miss I. Muir.

The white elephant table displayed a variety of articles including figurines, small plates, bits of china, jewellery. Mrs. Carl Bullock was convener with Mrs. A. Webb and Mrs. Jones assistants were: Mesdames K. Burton, E. Ostrom, D. Webber, L. Mitchell, P.N.G., R. Charlton, D. Clark and Georgina Charlton, P.N.G.

TEA ROOM DECORATED

The tea room, also decorated in a Christmas motif with pine boughs, colored baubles, and lighted "angel" candles, was convened by Mrs. Elizabeth Ruthers, P.N. G., assisted by co-convener, Mrs. Jill Keppy.

Guest were received by Mesdames Annis Rose, Ethel Sandercock, Phyllis Bailey (a) P.D.D.P.) and Mrs. Mary Plumpton.

The room hostesses were: Mesdames Verna Oliphant, Nellie Cooper, Cress Adams, Georgina Charlton, Edna Bradshaw, Helen Brenton, Dorothy Hardwood, Win Frances, Nora Mercer, Lorraine Bell, Elizabeth Collins, Betty Clarke, Nina Neil, P.N.G., Bernice Hall, Eva Hick, P.N.G., Phyllis Burley, P.D.D.P., and June Flindall.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.A.

MARMORA — The Woman's Association of St. Andrew's United Church held its November meeting in the church parlor with 15 attending.

The president, Mrs. G. McIntosh, was in the chair and opened the meeting.

A minute's silence was observed in tribute to the late Mrs. G. Jarvis, an active member who met a tragic death since the last meeting.

Mrs. C. Aitchet led in the devotional period.

Mrs. McLeod gave an interesting review on boys' and girls' work in the church.

The December meeting will be followed by a pot-luck supper in the church hall by all the circles.

A social time was enjoyed.

Women's Institute

MARMORA W.I.

MARMORA — Marmora Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Don Bailey with an attendance of 12, on November 11th. The president, Mrs. William Tisdill, chaired the meeting and, following opening exercises, a minute's silence was observed in honor of Remembrance Day.

In absence of thank-you letters were received for donations sent to worthy causes. A donation was sent to the Poly Milk Fund.

Mrs. H. P. Nayler gave the paper on the historical spot of the month.

Arrangements were made to pack the Christmas grocery basket on which tickets will be sold. A part of the proceeds will go towards Marmora Legion for its Christmas gift baskets to shut-ins, aged and needy.

The December meeting roll call is exchange of gifts.

ments were decorated with Christmas ornaments and Yuletide serviettes added to the festive motif.

Presiding at the tea table were: Mesdames Dorothy Fisher, District Deputy President, Ethel Ostrum, Lucy Brown, Ella Grand, Phyllis Pope, Pearl Baird, Jean Fitzgibbon and Jean Maudsly. The later four recently received their 15-year Institute pins.

Serving were: Mesdames Bernice Hall, Ellen Sandercock, Verna Oliphant, Edith Rushworth, Ruby Wye, Betty Clarke, Ethel Ostrum, Lucy Brown, Ellen Anderson, Jean Kingston, Mary Bailey, Mary Stevenson, Dorothy Tugwell, Stella Ducette, Merle Simpson, Helen Allen, Maysell Sills, Connie Miller, Bert Dennis, Emily Neal, Laura Bush, Daisy Hillman and Nell Taylor.

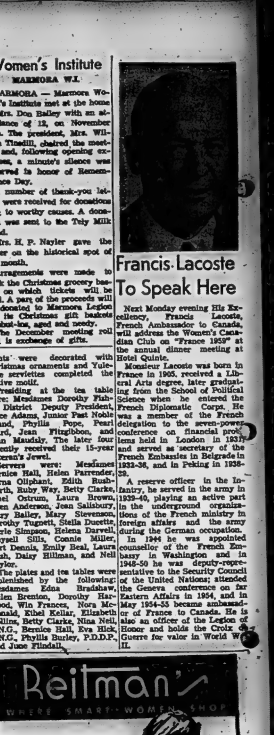
Francis Lacoste To Speak Here

Next Monday evening His Excellency, Francis Lacoste, French Ambassador to Canada, will address the Women's Canadian Club on "France 1959" at the annual dinner meeting at Hotel Quinte.

Monsieur Lacoste was born in France in 1905, received a Liberal Arts degree, later graduating from the School of Political Science when he entered the French Diplomatic Corps. He was a member of the French delegation to the seven-power conference on financial problems held in London in 1933, and served as secretary of the French Embassies in Belgrade in 1933-36, and in Peking in 1938-39.

A reserve officer in the Infantry, he served in the army in 1939-40, playing an active part in the underground organization. He was Minister of the Interior for foreign affairs and the army during the German occupation.

In 1944 he was appointed counsellor of the French Embassy in Washington and in 1948-50 he was deputy-representative to the Security Council of the United Nations; attended the Geneva conference on far Eastern Affairs in 1954, and in May 1954-55 became ambassador of France to Canada. He is also an officer of the Legion of Honor and holds the Croix de Guerre for valor in World War II.



David Jeffrey Celebrates 4th Birthday

WELLINGTON — On Thursday afternoon of last week, Mrs. Walter Jeffrey entertained in honor of her son, David, who was celebrating his fourth birthday. Several little guests and their mothers were present.

While the small ones enjoyed playing games, the mothers visited, after which delicious refreshments, including a lovely birthday cake with four glowing candles on it, were served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Brenda.

David received many nice gifts from his friends.

Those present were David's grandmother, Mrs. Eckert Pearsall, Mrs. Tom Morris, Nancy and Sandra; Mrs. Bruce Ferguson and Vickie, and Mrs. Lang Williams and Gaile.

"Lines on Life"

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Time has a way of running ahead of us, playing tricks on even the most unsuspecting.

Too often we spend so much effort preparing for tomorrow, to come that we never get to enjoy each day's blessings. A host of lives have been wasted anticipating the future without making the most of the "everlasting now."

We need to learn how to look ahead: But never overlook today in looking ever tomorrow.

Before we cross the bridge to our never-never land, we've got to stop, look and listen to the call of the hour here and now.

In search of the rainbow at the edge of the horizon, many a man has lost his way in life. For a man who is seeking everything ends up with nothing if he's never satisfied with something.

Here's the story of a poor woman who now knows better. She received an egg as a gift for her sick child.

"Mother, may I have the egg?" the boy cried out. "I'm hungry."

"No, my son," she replied, "we must keep an eye to the future. We'll save the egg."

"But what will we do with the egg," the boy asked.

"We will ask our good neighbor to let her hen sit on our egg until it hatches into a chicken."

"Then shall we have chicken to eat?" the lad asked hopefully.

"No, my child. We must think of the future. We will keep the chicken until it grows and begins to lay eggs."

"Then we'll have lots of eggs to eat," the boy exclaimed.

"No, not so fast," replied the mother. "We shall gather the eggs together and have our chickens set them until they all hatch into many more chickens."

"Then we'll really be able to eat chicken as often as we like, won't we mother"

"Not if we are to think of the future," the mother responded. "We would sell some of the chickens and buy a calf, which we would raise until it is a cow. Eventually, the cow would have calves, some of which we would raise and sell to buy a field. Next fenaglus, my son, how rich we shall become! We'll have a field of cows, with calves, with chickens and with eggs—all from the sale of an egg."

The woman became so excited at the thought of her future riches that she clapped her hands with joy. But, alas! in so doing she broke the little egg.

Counting her chickens before they were hatched, she never got to enjoy what she did have. And thinking only of what we are going to do, we neglect to do what we should be doing. We've got to be prepared. Not for tomorrow alone, but for today, as well.

So dream your dreams, pursue your visions and set your sights high and wide. But never barter this day for any other. Right now, it's all you have.

St. Margaret's Guild Sponsors Attractive Christmas Tea, Bazaar

On Saturday a most attractive Christmas tea and bazaar was held by St. Margaret's Guild in the church hall with a splendid attendance of patrons all in their smartest outfits for the bad weather.

Receiving were Mrs. L. Arthur Page, wife of the rector, and Mrs. George Mountford, president of the Guild, whose cheerful welcome more than complimented for the greatness outside.

The motif for the tea table and the little tea tables was the candy cane. The long table with its white cloth, and centre greatly to the overall theme.

Presiding at the silver service were Mrs. A. S. McConnell, wife of the rector of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, and Mrs. Everett Smith, wife of the assistant rector of Christ Church; Mrs. J. B. Creegan, wife of the rector of Christ Church and Mrs. H. Jones, wife of the curate of Christ Church.

PRETTY BOOTHS

The several booths were pretily adorned for the occasion, and included the fish pond, conveyed by Mrs. A. Watson, and members of the Girls' Auxiliary. Here the wee tots were busily engaged in the never-cloying sport of fishing.

The novelties, under Mrs. J. Ritchie, assisted by Mrs. G. Byford, was a Mecca for the Christmas shopper with its embroidered pillow cases; towels; crochet doilies; and red Christmas stockings.

The homebaking and delicatessen table fairly groaned with the offerings to eat, under the convenorship of Mrs. R. Pickering, assisted by Mesdames F. Bolding; L. Loughead; F. Platt; J. Bennett; J. Hunt, and Miss Linda Bennett. There were mouth-watering pies, cakes, cookies; chocolate squares; tarts; homemade fudge; sausage rolls; preserves and a host of other viands.

The candies as usual drew the possessors of the proverbial "sweet tooth" with its chocolate fudge, maple creams, popcorn balls and other sweetmeats. Mrs. R. Nurse, and Miss L. Rollins and Mrs. R. McKnight were in charge of these.

RAINBOWS OF COLORS

The apron booth was a rainbow of colors with its pretty aprons in prints, organdies and other materials; some in half style and others in the allover; some for fancy occasions in cocktail design. There were also a number of little aprons for the wee members of the home, as well as for mother's busy days. Mrs. R. Bailey assisted by Mrs. W. Paradis convened these.

The children's clothes, convened by Mrs. R. Bishop, with Mrs. A. W. Elliot, Mrs. S. Sillitoe and Mrs. G. Watkins assisting, featured pyjamas; corduroy overalls with matching hats; knitted outfits for babies; socks; mittens and slippers, dresses and pleated skirts.

The dolls and dolls' cloths booth displayed everything a lady doll could wish for. This was in charge of Mrs. T. A. Collyer, assisted by Mrs. H. Jones; Mrs. V. Stark and Mrs. F. Woodcock.

CHRISTMAS CAKES

A booth of Christmas cards, under the convenorship of Mrs. R. J. Nurse, had cards of attractive designs and reasonable in price.

Those who served included Mesdames G. B. Thompson; F. Bradley; W. Knudsen; O. R. Mann; G. B. Smith; R. Wells; G. Watkin; L. F. Reid; L. A. Coles; D. Boyer; G. Meades, all of whom were little corsage in candy cane design made from little pipe cleaners.

Replenishing the little sandwiches and cakes, were, Mesdames, S. A. Mornington; R. J. Nurse; A. Wadkin; W. M. Bishop, and in the kitchen, Mrs. M. O. Hughes; T. S. Hay; C. C. Male and T. H. L. Bennett

The tea room convenors were Mrs. F. W. Moore and Mrs. G. Moorefford.

Mrs. A. W. Elliot was the general convener, while Mrs. F. Platt, assisted by Mrs. H. Grew had charge of the tickets, Mrs. F. Robin, of the advertising and Mrs. L. Loughead and Mrs. T. Bennett of the decorating.

St. Michael's Parish Sponsors Successful Christmas Bazaar

A beautiful tall white pine, gleaming with snowy loveliness, white baskets of fragrant Scotch pines and scarlet poinsettias adorned the stage and windows of St. Michael's Academy yesterday afternoon for a delightful Christmas tea and bazaar held under the auspices of St. Michael's Parish.

Receiving at the door to the spacious auditorium were the president of the C.W.L., Mrs. Herbert Brown, Mrs. J. V. Doyle and Mrs. G. O'Brien, while inviting to the tea room were the hostesses, Mrs. G. W. Gilat and Mrs. E. G. Kennedy. The graciously escorted the guests through the little pigeon with their own arms standard and white baskets of pine and scarlet and silver poinsettias to the dainty guest tables appointed with white cloths, and centred by little red candles with crimson bows and tiny elfin figures figures.

The long tea table was lovely with its white damask, centred by white and red tinted 'mums in a silver bowl and flanked by tri-branched silver candelabra with tall red and white candles flickering a joyous welcome.

PRESIDING

Those presiding at the silver tea services were Mrs. E. Tapp and Mrs. J. Ethier; Mrs. J. Boyd and Mrs. B. Burley; Mrs. E. J. Butler and Mrs. A. Sawley.

The tea table trays of dainty little cakes and sandwiches were replenished by Mrs. B. J. Flagler, Mrs. N. M. Morey, Mrs. A. J. Black and Mrs. S. Garvin, Sr. While those who replenished the plates included: Mesdames Durkin, J. P. Cunningham, Leo Goyer, K. McDermott, D. Gannon, T. R. Dolan, C. Casey, J. Tindale, C. Dugan, T. Armstrong and Miss Anne Lafferty.

Those who served were: Mesdames J. J. Trudeau, H. Tweasley, Ray Burley, Doc Mosher, Pal Drumm, Albert Bunton, Paul Cleary, G. O'Connor, B. Collins, C. Lynch; Herb Fleming, M. J. Burke, J. Handleton, S. Garvin Sr., W. D. Barrett, B. Bleecker, Baker, M. Robertson and Miss M. Donoghue.

ATTRACTIVE BAZAAR BOOTHS

The bazaar booths, which were numerous were pleasingly arranged about the three sides of the auditorium, each of which did a flourishing trade, while the sacred literature and draws were in the centre.

Visiting the booths in centre-clockwise, the first was of the so-called "White Elephant," with its assortment of costume jewellery of all kinds and designs; framed pictures, hair shampoo, soaps and scissors, bathroom slippers, a tray of gourds, vases, little figurines, relish dishes and salad chopper, to mention but a few. This was convened by Mrs. Leo Buckley, assisted by Mrs. Lester Shields. Mrs. H. Doyle and Mrs. G. Griffiths.

[illegible] APRONS

[illegible] colorful and dainty [illegible] as useful, and made from various materials including prints, organdies, crestonese and brown linen, as well as unbleached cottons. In charge were Mrs. F. R. Rose and her assistant, Mrs. A. McFee.

The fancy work included some delightful articles, among hot dish pads, bath towel sets, little crochet Cinderella slippers, embroidered pillow slips, dainty handkerchiefs; crochet centrepieces in pineapple design, place mats and tea towels. Mrs. Kenneth Bland, assisted by Mrs. Joan J. H. Kelly and Mrs. M. J. Brooks, convened these.

The children's wear displayed a fine array of pleated skirts in plaids, a little leatherette cap made in triangle sections with top tassel; little jackets, white mufflers, mitts and socks in many shades, cosy bathrobes, and a pretty blue and white bassinette. Mrs. Leo Bellinger and her assistants, Mrs. Cyrus Mitchell, Mrs. Thomas Lagacy, and Mrs. J. Young were the conveners.

Jams and jellies came next, with a multitude of bake apples, a variety of everyday meals, apple jelly, plum jelly, conserves, relishes and pickles of many sorts. Mrs. W. J. Callaghan, assisted by Mrs. W. Graham, Mrs. Edward Brown and Mrs. J. O'Connor, had charge here.

DAINTY HOMECOOKING

The homecooking table was almost hidden from view with the many scrumptious dainty cakes, pies or buns, delicious taffy tarts, chocolate cakes, lemon and pumpkin pies, doughnuts, jelly rolls, angel cakes and short breads that melt in the mouth. Convening these were Mrs. J. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible].

Women's Institute

ELDORADO W. I.

ELDORADO — The Eldorado and Beaumaris Women's Institute held the November meeting at the home of Mrs. C. D. McCann, with ten members, five visitors and five children present.

The president, Mrs. Tompson, opened the meeting.

Mrs. L. Carman gave the motto, followed by readings by Mrs. Tompson, "A Mother's Cow", and Mrs. C. Robinson, "Who Makes Stamps."

Mrs. Clayton Blackburn gave a paper on "How Science Helps The Farmer." A contest by Mrs. Tomson and a discussion on how to entertain the members of the society.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess.

George Lee assisted by Mrs. J. A. Doyle and Mrs. T. R. Scanlon. A dream of a cake with pale mauve-pink icing jutting out in peaks, and topped with a cluster of mauve violets would go to the holder of the lucky ticket. Mrs. F. B. McDougall had charge of the tickets on this; Mrs. Fred Robinson was the donor.

The candies made more than one little mouth water, as well as the bigger ones, with the nice assortment of creams, buttery delights fudge and other assortments. There were also little cups filled to the brim and cellophane bags holding more of the tempting goodies. Convening this was Mrs. B. Roote, assisted by Mrs. M. Burkholder and Mrs. H. Ryan.

Another candy booth in the junior school was convened by Mrs. L. Wardhaugh, assisted by Mrs. J. O'Connor, Mrs. Marvin Trudeau, Mrs. D. Hurst and Mrs. G. Bruyere.

The fishpond was in charge of the game warden, Mrs. G. V. Hitzgibbon, assisted by Mrs. J. Lumadon, Mrs. G. Clapp, Mrs. G. Cooney and Mrs. A. Tobin. Still another direct A booth was in charge of Mrs. H. Sheridan assisted by Mrs. D. Wheeler, Mrs. J. Watters and Mrs. A. Law.

Mrs. J. Gallagher presided as treasurer for the afternoon, assisted by Mrs. Kenneth Soden.

Those receiving food in the lower auditorium included Mrs. P. E. Doyle, Mrs. Thomas Barrett and Mrs. William Greed. Those receiving phone calls for pick-ups was Mrs. T. J. Fluney, and those picking up the food, Mrs. Joseph Winston, Mrs. J. Derryaw, Mrs. Thomas Legacy, Mrs. D. Jones and Miss Mary McClelland.

PRIZE WINNERS

In charge of the tickets for the lovely grey weekend case was Miss Gail Doyle, and of the bride doll, Mrs. G. Reed. Mrs. Doris Derryaw won the case and Miss Mary Donoghue, the doll bride.

Mrs. J. V. Doyle was the basket convener, with Mrs. George O'Brien as co-convener.

Winners of the lucky draws were as follows: $100, Mrs. Lee, Picton, city; $50, Joe Derryaw, city; $25, Alex Brenner, city; $10, Roy Hunt, Roseneath; Mrs. Jack O'Neill, Belleville R.R. 4; floral centrepiece, Mrs. G. G. Irvine, city. The prize were in charge of Mrs. G. Donoghue, Mrs. L. Legacy and Mrs. J. Doyle.

A splendidly convened tea and bazaar, and most pleasingly successful.

Eggleton WMS W.A. Appoint New Officers

MADOC JCT. — The November meeting of the Eggleton W.M.S. and W.A., also the election of officers for 1960 was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clarence Fitchett.

Mrs. B. Stapley presided over a program, which had been prepared by Mrs. W. McMillan, and opened the meeting by reading a poem on "Remembrance Day."

The offering was gathered by little Eddie Stapley and dedicated by the president.

A donation was received by the W.A. from Mrs. Carl Bridges.

The WMS president requested that the holiday dime bags and boxes be handed in at the November meeting, also that the treasurer and various secretaries bring their books.

A special meeting is to be held on November 17th at the home of Mrs. Maurice Clancy, when Mrs. N. McKibbon, of Picton, will be the guest speaker. An invitation is to be sent to the West Huntingdon ladies to be present for this meeting.

Mrs. W. Harlow was appointed to prepare the devotional period.

The Christmas church service will be held at Eggleton on December 20th with an evening service. The WMS and WA officers will be installed at that time.

Mrs. Stapley spoke briefly welcoming the visitors and thanking the program convener and hostess.

Mrs. McMullen presided over the business period.

Mrs. Bruce Stapley offered her home for the December meeting.

Mrs. Maurice Clancy will prepare the program. It was decided to have an exchange of gifts (20c) at the November meeting.

Bills for all for church, bazaar expenses and flowers sent out were presented and motion made that these be paid.

The treasurer, Mrs. Harlow, reported on amount realized from the bazaar, held the last of October.

Three members expressed thanks for the flowers and cards they had received and a letter of thanks was read for a box of fruit sent to an ill member.

Mrs. Maurice Clancy gave an interesting report on the recent WMS rally held at Carmen church.

The introduction to the new study book, "Africa Disturbed," was given by Mrs. B. Stapley.

QUESTION BOX

Question: My husband and I live in a small suburb. There are four other couples who live in the neighborhood with whom we are on very friendly terms. Once a week we usually get together for an evening of poker, bridge, dancing to the radio or watching a television show. These little informal parties are held at the home of a different couple each week, so that no one spends more than another on the light refreshments usually served.

With one exception, we are all extremely congenial and have lots of fun together. The one exception of whom I speak is the husband of one of the nicest women in the group. He spoils every party because he is loud, boisterous and domineering. Regardless of whose house is the scene of the get-together, he assumes the position of host. We are all at the boiling point and wonder how we can excise him from our gatherings. It has been suggested that we simply ask his wife, hoping that if he is left out he will wake up to how annoying he is. As we do not want to exclude her, there doesn't seem to be any other solution. What do you think?

Answer: It would seem to me that you have lost sight of the fact—that by asking only the man's wife, you would hurt her more than you would him. After all, she is married to him. While his actions may be objectionable to others, to her they are perfectly acceptable. The only possible solution, as I see it, is to leave both of them out of your little gatherings. Under no consideration, ask her without including him. Of course, the only other alternative is to ask them both and put up with the man's objectionable traits with as much fortitude as possible.

Question: Is it improper for a divorcee to issue a formal announcement of her remarriage?

Answer: In former years it was considered absolutely incorrect to issue an announcement of any kind upon the remarriage of a divorcee. However, common sense has come to the fore, and today it is considered the correct and sensible procedure to do so.

Jewelled Pins Make Useful Versatile Gifts

A beautiful pin is the most fashionable and versatile gift of all this Christmas for it has a many-splendored role to play in today's glamour picture, fashion advisors point out.

Pins are worn from head to toe to give new beauty and emphasis to today's fashions. Every type, style and price of pin can be used.

Pins are attached to simple bead or pearl necklaces to give an additional note of color and elegance. These beauties are "showcase" pins either of real jewels or reasonable facsimiles.

Tailored pins highlight headbands matched to suits . . . more elaborate pins are secured on plastic bands and worn in the hair itself for a beautiful effect to after-dark fashions.

Pin are worn on suit sleeves to add a jewelled note to the expected wrist area. They are worn in matching pairs on the new fabric shoes to give a twinkling feminine touch to the dancing fashions.

The pin also is the key to accessorizing the new Empire silhouette . . . for worn plumb centre it emphasizes the high, soft delicate look of the new style as nothing else can do.

The pin — whatever its form or price — is fashion's own darling this season and a Christmas gift that will find special use all through the year.

In the formal manner. The same form is followed as that used for an engraved announcement of a marriage. The wording would be somewhat as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. James Franklin Jones announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Jones Phillips to, et cetera." It is to be remembered that on a wedding announcement, the date, including the year in which the ceremony takes place, is always given. On the wedding invitation, only the date itself, without the year, is mentioned.

A Festive Dessert

by Mary Moore

Desserts are going to be an important part of your holiday entertaining. In fact, centred round the dessert I am about to give you, you could plan a dessert party.

An added and comfortable dividend is the fact that it may be made two or three days in advance. If you do make this angel food dessert two or three days ahead though, lower the temperature of the refrigerator as much as possible without freezing the milk and eggs.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY
(Hamilton guests)

Roast Shoulder of Pork with Broiled Canned Peach Halves; Breaded Eggplant; Cauliflower with Polonnaise Sauce; Celery Hearts; Canned Bartlett Pears with Lime Sherbet; Cherry Cookies (see Wednesday); Coffee.

SUNDAY (guests)

Broiled Steaks (see Friday); Red Cabbage Pickle (see Saturday); Potato Pancakes; Frenched Green Beans with Shredded Almonds; Waldorf Salad; Angel Tangerine (or orange) Dessert (see Thursday); Coffee.

ANGEL TANGERINE DESSERT

Note: Concentrated fresh frozen orange juice may be substituted for fresh frozen tangerine juice.

1 6-ounce can fresh frozen tangerine juice; ¾ cup (1 6-ounce can) water; 1 tablespoon plain gelatin; half of a standard size angel food (or chiffon) cake; ½ pint 32% cream.

Dilute the concentrated tangerine juice with the ¾ cup water. Soak the gelatin in ¼ cup of this diluted juice, then dissolve it by stirring over hot water. Mix with remaining diluted juice. Pour some in ring mould to depth of ¼". Chill until set (in freezer compartment if you are in a rush as I always am). Pour remaining juice over angel food cake which has been broken roughly into large bite-size pieces and gently mix. Then cream until stiff and fold in. When jelly in ring mould is set, turn cake and cream mixture into it, smooth top, cover with foil and chill 24 hours or longer. When serving time arrives, have a large dessert plate ready. Loosen sides and centre of mould, dip for 10 seconds into hot (not boiling) water, Holding bottom with thumbs and top with spread out fingers, quickly invert into centre of serving plate. Fill centre with mixture of drained canned Mandarin oranges and halved and seeded imported blue grapes. Garnish outside edge with a border of alternating Mandarin orange sections and whole blue grapes. Note: Red and green maraschino cherries may be substituted for blue grapes in case this is a Christmas appearance. Note: Please clip this recipe and add to your dessert file for I know it will be popular.

By coincidence in the same mail I received three letters from readers asking for current news of my family. Here it is: my four-month-old granddaughter Susan, in Germany, has one tooth and "is the world's most beautiful little girl" — (quote from her prejudiced mother); three-and-a-half year-old Gary is attending a nursery school operated by the Canadian Department of Education in Germany; two-year-old Davey scratched me a letter. All of the Pitts' family is being posted to Staff College at Camberley, England, January 1st, 1960.

Pete is an intern living in at Hamilton General Hospital, presently on the Emergency Ward and sometimes comes home for dinner as often as three times a week, and is engaged to Zeni (a doctor too) and is to be married in September 1960. How lucky can I get?

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EATON'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Isabel R. — I can't take care of his little girl.

Carl R. — She must get used to children.

Isabel R. — My husband and I have been married two years. I am 21 and he is 29. It is his second marriage and he has a 6-year-old daughter by his first marriage.

My problem concerns this little girl, Lucy. I try to be a mother to her as best I can during the time she stays with us. We have her for the weekend every other week and she spends two weeks with us in the summer. No matter how hard I try something always goes wrong in that time. She falls and cuts herself badly, catches a heavy cold or gets an upset stomach.

Then her mother calls crying and demanding explanations and Carl starts apologizing for me. It's all so humiliating. I feel that the child may be unhappy with us and perhaps she'd be better off spending only one day with us once in two or three weeks.

Carl R. — Isabel is very inexperienced with children and I think it's a good idea for her to get used to them. Lucy is just a typical little girl and presents no special problems. There is no reason why everything shouldn't go off smoothly.

I feel that Isabel is just a bit jealous of my feeling for my daughter. She likes to have me all to herself and has often said that she wished I had not been married before. There is no reason for this jealousy because I am very much in love with her and try to show it in every way. My first marriage was nothing like this, yet I certainly can't help loving my daughter and I want her to spend as much time with us as possible.

It is true that my ex-wife hasn't made things easy for us. She has made a mountain out of a molehill in every case, but we have to put up with this.

The Council: Isabel is in a very difficult position, but the problem isn't insurmountable if she can manage to keep her fears under control. She won't solve anything by cutting down on this child's visits and she would feel very guilty if she actually succeeded in denying her husband his full allotment of time with the child.

Isabel should accept the fact that this problem is here, she'll have to deal with throughout her married life. There undoubtedly will be times when her dealings with her stepdaughter will cause her worry or grief, but this is true in most close relationships. Isabel need not strive so hard for perfection. We get the impression that she attempts too much when she tries "to be a mother" to Mrs. Hill's girl. She should remember that children get sick and hurt themselves even when they are with their own mothers.

The reaction of Lucy's mother must also be taken in stride and with some understanding. She is naturally upset if her little girl is returned to her in less than perfect condition, but if the child has not been neglected or exposed to any unnecessary risks, this woman's reactions should be accepted patiently and with proper explanations of any event that brought on an injury or illness.

Isabel sees herself in a rather childlike relationship to her husband and his ex-wife. She seems that this problem is one she'll be trying to prove something to them and feels inadequate to the job. Carl can help in this feeling by encouraging her to look upon his daughter as a kind of experimental program in preparation for motherhood. It shouldn't be that. This child is no guinea pig.

Eileen Dupuch Being Groomed To Handle Editor's Position

By JUDITH AYER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The girl is ...sty, petite and charming. She ...ks at you calmly and says ...t one day she will be editor of ... largest newspaper in the Ba... It seems to her the most ...tural thing in the world.

Who It Is. For the girl is 23-...ld Eileen Dupuch, and she has been groomed from childhood for the job.

For the last 40 years her father, Etienne, has been editor and proprietor of the paper, the Nassau Daily Tribune, which has the largest circulation in the Bahamas. The paper was founded by her grandfather, Leon E. H. Dupuch, in November, 1903.

FUTURE PLANNED

It has always been a family paper and like present editor determined that his daughter should succeed him.

Miss Dupuch attended preparatory school at Letchworth, England, spent four years at the University of Toronto where she obtained a degree in philosophy, took another degree in journalism at Columbia University and now is studying law at London University.

She has also travelled extensively believing with her father that living in outside countries will become the lesson that whitens the language, race or color of human beings are fundamentally the same.

Enthusiasm for the family paper is the driving force in her life, though she looks as if she would be more at home in high heels than behind a newspaper desk.

Apart from travel and education, she has learned much about the workings of a newspaper, having studied advertising, editing and the production side.

NO ROMANTIC INVOLVEMENTS

A reporter suggested that perhaps she might have trouble finding a husband who could match her in intellect and share her devotion to the paper.

"I am inclined to be fatalistic about the whole thing," she said. "I am not actually looking for a husband but if the right one comes along—then no much the better. And if not, my life will be devoted to The Tribune. "An ideal man for me would be one like my father. He is a wonderful person, and we think a lot much the same lines."

Only another is the very heart of our home. Without her, nothing — not even my father's success — would have been possible. She is a shining example of the influence exerted behind the scenes by a well-educated, understanding woman."

SISTER IN TORONTO

Miss Dupuch's sister, Bette, went to high school in Toronto and trained as a nurse at St. Michael's Hospital, where she now is a staff member. Bette is married to James Hull, a lecturer at the University of Toronto.

When the time comes for her to succeed her father, Miss Dupuch will take over a newspaper that is staunchly independent.

It has suffered setbacks. Political opposition, financial problems and the death at 44 of its founder editor might have proved fatal.

But the Dupuch family would not let the dream die. Gilbert, the eldest son, gave up a promising career in art to stand by The Tribune until his brother, Etienne, then 15, took over five years later.

In 1958, it was announced that Etienne was to receive the Mergenthaler Award "in recognition of meritorious services on behalf of a community." The editor was too ill so Eileen, then associate editor, accepted it on his behalf.

The citation read: "To Etienne Dupuch, publisher of the Nassau Daily Tribune, for his long and successful campaign against racial discrimination."

TO BECOME EDITOR — Eileen Dupuch, 23, is slated to succeed her father as editor of the Nassau Daily Tribune, largest newspaper in the Bahamas. The paper was founded by her grandfather in 1903. She has been training for her future role since childhood. Eileen has a philosophy degree from the University of Toronto, a degree in journalism from Columbia University and now is studying law at London University. (CP Photo).

Wenner-Gren Development Scheme for British Columbia Going Ahead in Broad Outline

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP) — In a memorandum of intention signed in November, 1958, and announced three months later, the interests of Swedish financier Axel Wenner-Gren have pledged to a vast program of exploration and development in British Columbia's northland.

Wenner - Gren interests promised to spend at least $5,000,000 or a survey of forest, water and mineral resources in the Rocky Mountain Trench.

They also pledged to construct a 400-mile railway through the heart of the area to link population centres in B.C. with the Yukon boundary, and said the development would be done with British, Canadian and Swedish capital.

WORK UNDER WAY

Today, the indications are that in each stage the Wenner-Gren development is going ahead as planned, if not in the intricate detail of the original proposal, at least in the broad general outline.

By the end of December, the B.C. government will find out exactly what has been done in the unveiling of what is planned for the future. The agreements called for reports on the various aspects of the plan by Dec. 31 this year and a Wenner - Gren spokesman said early this month that the reports are being drafted.

Meanwhile, no statements on the status of any of the segments except power are being made.

Estimates run to more than $10,000,000 on the amount already spent on various surveys. More than $5,000,000 has gone into water resources exploration — the most advanced phase of the program—and intention to proceed with a multi-million-dollar power project in the spring of next year has been announced.

Within the area involved in the Wenner - Gren agreements with the B.C. government is the huge hydro - electric potential of the mighty Peace River—possibilities which dwarf Grand Coulee in the U.S.

PEACE RIVER POWER

Less than a year after the initial memorandum was signed, Wenner - Gren entered another agreement concerned solely with Peace River power development.

Announced in October, 1957, this required the making of surveys to substantiate preliminary conclusions that construction of a major hydro-electric project on the Peace is practicable.

These surveys have been completed and a massive engineering report will be presented to the B.C. government by Dec. 31.

Peace River Power Development Company, set up to handle the power aspects of the Wenner-Gren program, announced early in October that a $611,000,000 power project on the Peace River will be started next spring if the government's approval is given.

"Our engineering reports indicate it is completely feasible from every standpoint", said W. C. Gibbs, managing president of Peace River Power.

WORLD'S LARGEST

Initially the company would construct a $275,000,000 first-stage dam 600 feet high and 7,000 feet long. It would generate 4,000,000 horsepower and be the largest in the world. It also would form a 200-mile-long, lake, largest man-made body of water which would take seven years to fill.

Provincial government approval is almost a foregone conclusion.

The agreements between the B.C. government and the Wenner-Gren B.C. Development Company, set up to handle the program here, involve roughly 40,000 square miles of the Rocky Mountain Trench, an area almost as big as England with Wales thrown in.

The trench is a flat region up to 20 miles wide and extending south from the Yukon boundary about 400 miles through central and eastern areas of northern B.C. It often is described as a gigantic fault or crack in the earth's surface.

Value of water, timber and mineral resources of the trench is believed fabulous.

ACCORDING TO PLAN

Progress of the power development has been reported frequently, but that of the various other aspects of the broad Wenner-Gren plan has come out in bits and pieces. All, however, apparently are going ahead pretty much as planned.

Premier W.A.C. Bennett has been criticized by opposition politicians for his arrangements with Wenner-Gren. He has said frequently that "progress is being made according to schedule."

Since the project started surveys of forestry and mineral resources have been made—but to what extent has not been clearly reported. Surveying also has continued for a railway route, but in recent weeks Wenner-Gren officials have said that hopes it would be a monorail have been put aside.

In a meeting in Fairbanks, Alaska, last September, Wenner-Gren officials said Col. Sidney Bingham of New York, who carried out the railway surveys, had advised against monorail plans and suggested a conventional railroad.

Its route, originally intended to run north from Fort St. John in eastern B.C. and through the trench, also has been altered. It now is proposed that it will run from Prince George along the west edge of the trench to the Yukon boundary.

MAY BE FLOODED

Bernard G. Gore, managing director of Wenner-Gren B.C. Development and a personal representative of Mr. Wenner-Gren in B.C., has said the route shift results from the probability that much of the trench will be flooded by the Peace hydro development.

Both Prince George and Fort St. John now are connected with Vancouver through the provincially - owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

Many details of the various Wenner - Gren explorations apparently have been kept secret to prevent competitors from taking advantage of them.

Mr. Gore said late in 1958 that the program is divided into five groups: water power, transport, lines of copper, iron, lead and zinc. Some claims have been reported staked by Wenner - Gren interests.

Claim-staking within the trench has been prevented by the provincial government pending outcome of the Wenner - Gren surveys. Provincial officials say this is intended to prevent speculators and others from causing delay in exploration through demands for compensation on claims that might have been staked, say, in areas flooded by hydro dams.

They say that when power plans and surveys are complete, the area will be open to all on an equal basis. Meanwhile, all is quiet in the surrounding area, where much of the Wenner-Gren general activity has taken place, is open to all.

OPPOSITION CRITICISM

The reserve placed on the area has been behind much of the political criticism of the agreements with Wenner-Gren. The CCF opposition has termed the whole affair a great give-away of the province's resources and CCF Leader Robert Strachan said recently the westward move of the rail routes gives Wenner-Gren a "private franchise on the railroad to Alaska."

Some federal politicians have described it as scandalous and trade unionists have attached the project along lines similar to those of the CCF.

Premier Bennett replies that the government has given Wenner-Gren nothing.

"There has been no give-away, no enticement," he said. "Just opportunity."

PIONEER FLIGHT

The Wright Brothers' pioneer airplane flight in 1903 was made with an engine of 20 horsepower.

HYDRO PLANS — Plans are afoot in British Columbia to build a huge hydro-electric development with $611,000,000 on the Peace River.

The interests of Axel Wenner-Gren, the Swedish financier who has promised a program of development in B.C.'s vast northern interior, say their engineering reports indicate a hydro project on the Peace River is feasible.

This map shows location of the proposed dam site, about 50 miles west of Fort St. John and 450 miles north of Vancouver. The proposal calls for a dam 600 feet high and 7,000 feet long, one of the biggest in the world. It would back up the waters upstream of the Peace to form a reservoir 200 miles long.

The reservoir, which would take seven years to fill, would provide 4,000,000 horsepower.

The Wenner-Gren interests are to make a complete report to the B.C. government by the end of this year. (CP News-map.)

IMMIGRANTS GO NORTH — Mrs. Le Desmarais (left), one of many post-war immigrants who have played a large role in the development of Canada's north, checks over samples in the Noranda Ore Company of Canada laboratory at Schefferville in northern Quebec. Many Canadians, including immigrants who have been established in this country for some time, are reluctant to go north. Thus many more immigrants will be needed as northern development continues. Painter L. Jacquard (right), another immigrant who went north, is also employed with the Schefferville mining company. (CP Photo).

Many Immigrants Seeking New Homes in Far North

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Fifty years ago the cry was "go West young man, go West." Today it's "go North."

The lure of adventure and opportunity is undermining the eastern Canada at the start of the century attracted both Eastern Canadians and immigrants.

Today the prospect of opportunity in the North has lost its appeal for most Canadians, immigrants from many countries already have played a prominent part in development there in the post-war years and that trend into the future will be even greater.

Immigration Minister Fairclough said in an interview that the immigrant is attracted to the North because he has established no deep roots in this country. Also, he finds that living in a remote area gives him time to adjust to Canadian conditions free of the competition of language, customs and prejudice.

"People who have been in Canada for even only five years are quite likely to be settled," she said. "They are paying for a home, a car and sending their children to school.

"Even many young men who are single have no domestic ties are satisfied with their job and don't want to start anew. Many are paying for their superannuation."

But an immigrant was more mobile. He was attracted both by the prospect of adventure in the North and the prospect of new opportunities.

"Future immigrants will be the pioneers of a vast new area," Miss Fairclough said.

Northern Affairs Minister Alvin Hamilton said a steady supply of workers and trained people will be required as northern development gains momentum.

"The natural increase in the population through births will not meet the need. It will have to be met by immigration."

Mr. Hamilton said there are not enough Indians and Eskimos in the North to meet the labor demand for labor. This was especially true in the case of skilled workers.

He said that expected development, shortly in the mineral-rich Ungava area will create a demand for some 2,000 workers.

About 500 would be Eskimos in the area and the rest would have to be brought in. These would be persons already in Canada but most of them likely would be immigrants.

Their immigration department says immigrants "have found their way in areas of greatest need" and that there has been a large part in major projects in remote districts, harnessing hydro power, constructing highways and railways and opening up mines.

Capital Gains Tax Discussed By Foundation

QUEBEC (CP) — The pros and cons of a capital gains tax—with a Canadian against and an American for it—were argued one day before delegates at the Canada Tax Foundation annual conference.

A. K. Eaton, Ottawa fiscal consultant, said in Canada, where capital gains are untaxed, the public would be more inclined to collect that it would be worth and is not necessary to fair taxation.

Carl Shoup, Columbia professor of economics at Detroit's Wayne State University, said the United States tax, although giving rise to problems, comes closer to the ideal of fair taxation.

Texts of both speakers were released in advance of their delivery.

Mr. Eaton said it would be unfair to levy a capital gains tax measured in dollars until the danger of inflation ends.

HOUSE EXAMPLE

A man who in 1939 bought a house for $10,000 would find, with the dollar value decreased by half, he would need $20,000 to replace it today if he moved to another location. Assuming the house had maintained its value, he would sell it for $20,000 and pay tax on $10,000 created through inflation. He would be short the amount of the tax when he tried to buy an equivalent home.

Although an American provision is that the man is exempt from tax if he buys another home within a year, Mr. Eaton said this "is where complexity takes over."

"You cannot cure all unfairness in the inflation situation by creating another unfairness. The law would bog down in utter complexity."

He estimated a capital gains tax here similar to that in the United States would bring $100,000,000 to federal coffers, but it would certain "more seriously affect" ficial and unreasonable burdens and inequities than any government in Canada would ever dare try to impose."

Mr. Shoup said government already levies a sort of capital gains tax through its estate taxes, Mr. Eaton said. Even if a capital gains tax were levied at the highest lifetime he will have paid federal, and probably provincial, gains taxes.

He noted there is no federal-level estate tax in the United States.

Mr. Seltzer said the economic climate in the United States became favorable for the tax as it grew from an agricultural to an industrial nation. Capital gains provided "spectacular shortcuts to riches" for such men as Astor, Rockefeller, Carnegie and Morgan.

ABLE TO PAY

The American view is that a man who by shrewd or lucky trading increases his power to command goods and services also adds to his ability to help support the government.

Since people in similar circumstances should be treated similarly, the concept of income for tax purposes would be "too narrow" if it excluded capital gains.

Mr. Seltzer said the absence of the tax in Canada "doubtless increases the attractiveness" to foreign investors.

WILL SUE TOBACCO MEN

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The widow of a man who allegedly died of lung cancer has filed a $250,000 damage suit against 11 cigaret manufacturers and distributors, Mrs. Hazel Shields said in her petition that her husband had smoked two or three packages daily and later suffered cancer of the lungs.

Manned Bomber to Be Serious Threat Against N. America Defences for Long Time

WASHINGTON (CP) — Gen. Laurence S. Kuter said Wednesday is nonetheless the United States will come up with an effective weapon against the intercontinental ballistic missile within this year take another two or three years.

The North American defence chief said he could not name the exact date when an anti-missile missile would become operational.

As he did on his Ottawa visit Tuesday, Kuter declared that the manned bomber will be a serious threat against North American defences "for a long time to come."

He told NATO parliamentarians the "consolation" for Canada and the U.S. is that North America can defend itself against this threat.

For this reason he welcomed the addition of Bomarc missiles to NORAD's arsenal of anti-aircraft defence. The U.S. already has some A-model Bomarcs. Canada is to get B-model Bomarcs by 1961.

Kuter said Bomarc is linked with the giant radar computer system known as SAGE which strengthen North America's defences substantially.

He anticipated that all supersonic interceptors in his NORAD squadrons will be eliminated gradually as supersonic fighters just as quickly as Canada and the U.S. could afford to do so economically.

Kuter emphasized that modern air defence is costly—an F-106 costs about $1,900,000 compared with $50,000 for the Second World War P-40 fighter.

But he lashed out at those who argued heavy costs for air defence is not justified because air defences cannot be made completely impregnable. This, he said, is a "defeatist attitude."

Some of Kuter's comments were made in reply to questions by Walter Dinsdale, Progressive Conservative MP for Brandon-Souris, and Paul Hellyer, Liberal member for Toronto-Trinity, following his formal address.

Earlier, Hellyer asked Admiral Jerauld Wright, NATO's Atlantic commander, what he thinks there could be such a thing as adequate defence in view of Soviet Premier Khrushchev's statement that Russia is producing rockets with hydrogen warheads at the rate of 250 a year. Wright sidestepped a direct reply, though he emphasized that Hellyer's question "is very important."

He said the West must be able to survive any initial enemy attack and have the capacity to retaliate.

Montreal Rider Lands in Crowd With His Horse

TORONTO (CP)—Max Bilder, 30-year-old Montreal rider, was standing for the centre of the Royal Winter Fair horse show ring Wednesday when he suddenly found himself just another face in the crowd.

His palomino horse Topper, owned by Hyman Mock of Montreal, refused a jump, turned towards the ringside fence, took it cleanly and landed amid a small band of spectators without injuring them.

Bilder went over the horse's head. He was badly shaken but not injured and returned to ride another horse in the event.

"We jumped over a woman's head," he said later. "She didn't move. She was frozen with fright."

LIGHTLY HORSE WINS

The event, preliminary round of the Silver Jubilee Jumpers Stake, was later won by Windsor Castle, bought for $50,000 at last week's New York horse show by W. R. Ballard of Newmarket.

Earl H. Forrest, a Listowel, Ont., horseman who has raised palominos horses for a hobby, says the golden Islander gets Belgian blood.

Reserve grand champion mare was owned by Mrs. Hazel Wallis of Granton.

Reserve champion palomino stallion was Bonny Boy Dancer, owned by Earl H. Forrest, Listowel.

STANDARD BREDS

In breeding horses, standard breds, reserve champion mare was owned by Wilfred Copeland, Gait, who also showed the second champion stallion. And second champion mare was Goodview Lassie, owned by Jean Lorrance, Nestleton, Ont. Jenny Lee Harvester, owned by J. L. Cook, Bolton, Ont., won both classes.

Reserve champion stallion in the saddle horse class went to Mr. Mac, owned by Mrs. Ann Clarence, Ill., with their entry, Bourbon Gay Montgomery. The winners weren't present for the presentation. They became snowbound at Sioux Lookout on the train route to Toronto.

The reserve saddle horse crown went to C. O. Hand of Caledonia. Junior champion stallion was owned by C. D. Hand, Caledonia.

The grand champion and senior champion mare was owned by George Henderson, St. Catharines. Reserve champion was owned by J. W. Underwood and J. E. Wilson of Brantwood, Ont.

BEST ARABIAN

The grand champion Arabian stallion was owned by Drs. A. A. and B. Ingscote, Guelph.

First prize in pony tanners went to Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Campbell, Erin.

First for single roadster harness went to Dr. and Mrs. Lorne Lee, W. H. Lindsay, Campbellcroft; second was Heidelberg, L. and A. Lee, Brantford; third was Brownie Lee, L. L. Thibeaudeau.

TV Industry Given Job to Do In Resistance to Absorption Of Canada Into U.S. Culture

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian television industry has been handed a specific degree of responsibility for preserving the nationalistic Canadian identity.

The government - appointed Board of Broadcast Governors, in announcing Wednesday this country's first set of rules specifically for TV, said that starting in the spring of 1961 it will enforce a minimum of Canadian content in television programming.

The rules, obviously designed for what board chairman Dr. Andrew Stewart has called "meticulous resistance to the absorption of Canada into the general cultural pattern of the United States," will take this form:

Beginning April 1, 1961, the programming of every Canadian TV station will have to be 45-per-cent Canadian in content, computed over four-week periods. A year later the per-cent-Canadian requirement will rise to 55 per cent.

NOT MUCH AT FIRST

Canadian TV viewers aren't likely to notice much change when these rules take effect—at least for the first year. The CBC networks already are exceeding the minimum, most privately-owned stations now program about 45-per-cent Canadian material.

At the moment, TV and radio stations now operate in Canada under the terms of "temporary" licences. These require no percentages for Canadian content, but do insist that broadcasters should carry "an adequate amount" of programs originating in the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Filmed programs, to qualify as Canadian, must be made in Canada by a Canadian company with a majority of Canadians on its board of directors. Canadian filmmakers must file with the board a list of the Canadians employed in the production, must approve the film's commercials and must pay its fees.

Political programs, advertisements or announcements will be broadcast in accordance with directions the board may issue from time to time in connection with programs that it may direct be devoted to such broadcasts and with the assignment of time to political parties and rival candidates.

TO GIVE THIRD

Counted as 50-per-cent Canadian will be Commonwealth programs, co-operative productions up to a maximum of one-third of the total number of hours during time, and foreign French-language material up to a limit of one-fifth of the broadcasting time.

At finality written, the TV regulations represent a slight easing-up and a more flexible approach than the board's original TV proposals met with stiff opposition from the private broadcasters and—to lesser degree—from the CBC governors.

It's unlikely the Canadian-content rules will mean the displacement of many American material now being shown in Canada. But it will prevent the U.S. programs from flooding Canadian television in the future.

This appeared to be the BBG's biggest fear, Roger Duhamel, the board's vice-chairman, said in a speech two months ago that "we like the Americans, but we object to becoming second-class Americans." He added:

"Through books, magazines, movies, radio, television and our ways of life in general, the line of demarcation between Canada and the United States is tending to disappear. We must exert ourselves, without any hostility whatever, to avoid this standardization which would make us lose our national identity and originality."

COULD BE COUNTED

As the rules now stand, much material originating in the U.S. could—for the purposes of computing content—be counted as Canadian.

For instance, the regulations provide that all news broadcasts and news commentaries could be counted as Canadian regardless of their sources of information and material.

Likewise, the board will use its own discretion in putting a Canadian label on programs of special events outside Canada if Canadians are participating or if the subject is "of national interest" in this country.

The way to beat some of the purpose of this rule, the board mentioned such broadcasts as the world series baseball games or the General Assembly of the United Nations, or international hockey between the U.S.

The possibilities are endless and the BBG will judge each event as it comes along. Carlyle Allison, BBG secretary, has a full-time job to keep track of programs and events counted Canadian.

TIME LIMIT

But television stations may be out on a limb when they broadcast some special event originating outside Canada.

In such cases they will be gambling on whether the BBG will count it as particularly event as being of enough interest and significance to Canadians to be counted as a Canadian program under the content rules.

If they won't be let down to a hard and fast list of what will be counted Canadian," Carlyle Allison, secretary of the Canadian board members, said Wednesday, "we will count cases (that the stations) will have to take their chances."

However, he noted that a wide degree of latitude will be applied in the case of broadcasts of outside events.

While not attempting to anticipate decisions of the board, Mr. Allison doubted, for example, that the Rose Bowl game—one of U.S. football games—would normally be counted Canadian.

He felt that football interest in Canada generally stops at the Canadian border and that only the Grey Cup game, on the other hand, some of the finals in hockey and golf and probably those in which one boxer in Canada would be counted without question.

Over the months, the board's decisions on what is a outside events would develop into a pattern that the stations could use as a guide.

KEEP ABOVE LEVEL

They also said: The stations would be well-advised to have enough Canadian content over and above these basic requirements as events to make sure they can meet the minimum requirements, Mr. Allison said.

Their content would be judged on the total program logs submitted to the board each month.

And the board studies these would many programs be classified as Canadian content.

The Broadcasting Act approved by Parliament in 1958 stipulates that penalty for failure to observe regulations, the board may order the suspension of a station's licence for a maximum of three months. The board must give the station an opportunity to be heard on the alleged violation.

Decisions of the licence may be appealed to the exchequer court on any question of law.

Commission Inquiry Likely To Concentrate on 'Payola' In Next Whirl on Quiz Shows

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States inquiry into rigged television quiz shows—an inquiry of almost tremendous proportions in public interest—is to get another whirl some time this time before the Federal Communications Commission.

But an invitation to appear before the seven-man commission isn't likely to cause much trembling among those involved in questionable broadcasting practices.

The commission, which is supported by industry, has no power to set broadcasting stations, admits it hasn't done much policing in recent years.

Why the sudden interest? Chairman John C. Doerfer says he wants to have a good look at the whole situation with a view to asking for tougher commission policing powers if they are needed.

His aides hint at big things to come—that the commission inquiry will concentrate largely on "payola," the reported practice whereby a record company slips certain disk jockeys and radio stations under-the-table payments in order to get wide publicity for new records.

There also will be a general investigation of "offensive commercials and other broadcasting practices contrary to the public interest."

Doerfer says he wants to hold at least 70 public hearings and that the whole study may take a year or more to complete.

This would be a time-consuming effort when the public demands swift action. The commission's slow-moving actions in regulating the industry were criticized before the congressional subcommittee which aired the TV quiz show scandals.

The subcommittee says it hasn't finished its work. It also wants to concentrate on "payola" and some related practices in search of firm time for new hearings.

The justice department also is looking into the situation, with a view to recommending new legislation. But early next year if it finds the situation warrants such action.

So, there are studies all over Washington—in the commission, justice department and now the communications commission. The likelihood of a duplication of effort may be in the end merely add to confusion, rather than be clarified.

And by the time all the efforts is over, U.S. television and radio may be back at the same old stand, doing business in the same old way.

To Estreat Bail Posted for Son

OSH, WA (CP) — The Ontario county s'eriff's office Dec. 7 will estreat the $5,000 property bail put up by John Meagher for his son Jack after the RCMP as Canada's second most-wanted criminal since 1945 was escaped custody while charged with robbery with violence.

Mr. Meagher's brick bungalow, where he lives with his wife, a daughter and daughter, will be sold at public auction to raise the money which will be turned over to the city. Mr. Meagher will get what is left from the sale.

RUBENS PORTRAIT SOLD

LONDON (AP) — A Rubens portrait, Head of a Bearded Man, brought £33,000 ($92,400) at an auction Wednesday.

Seventh Largest Church Will Be Dedicated Friday

WASHINGTON (CP) — The world's seventh largest church—a tribute to the Mother of Christ by the 20,000,000 Roman Catholics of the United States—will be ready for dedication Nov. 20.

Opening of the white-stone edifice — the $18,000,000 National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception — will be witnessed by the 300 prelates, religious gatherings ever assembled in the U.S. Catholic authorities say.

While special prayers are said in 16,500 parishes across the country, the dedication ceremonies here—extended over a three-day period—will be attended by six hundred, more than 200 archbishops and bishops, governors-general and supreme court officials, diplomats and heads of labor, welfare and other organizations.

CANADIANS TO ATTEND

Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger of Montreal will send Most Rev. Lawrence Patrick Whelan, auxiliary bishop, as personal emissary. There also will be representatives from the 10 Canadian shrines: St. Joseph's at Montreal and Ste. Anne de the Cape at Trois-Rivieres, Que.

From a balcony music will flow from a choir of more than 200 voices, a 36-piece orchestra and a $350,000 organ three storeys high. To prevent echoes through the great cathedral and ideal building, music will be piped through 1,000 speakers so more than 2,000 people.

Thus the shrine will take its place as the United States' fifth largest Roman Catholic church. It took 13 years to complete the lag of faith and charity.

SEVENTH LARGEST—This $18,000,0000 National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington will be dedicated Nov. 20. Located in the northeast section of the city, the shrine will be the largest Roman Catholic Church in the United States and the seventh largest in the world. The architecture is featured by a huge dome. (CP Photo).

Govt. Is Asked to Give More Aid to Uranium Industry

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was urged Wednesday to do more to help tide Canada's uranium industry over a difficult period between the end of defence purchases by Britain and the U.S. and the advent of the atomic power market.

The request was contained in a brief submitted to Trade Minister Churchill at Toronto by Elliot Lake and District Chamber of Commerce. The Elliot Lake area contains 40 per cent of the country's known uranium ore reserves.

Contracts with Britain and the U.S. expire in mid-1962 and mid-1963, but only about 10 per cent is announced Nov. 7 uranium will be shipped in the two countries until the end of 1966.

The brief urged the government to make it easier for all uranium producers to stretch out deliveries possibly over seven years. This was "absolutely necessary" if the industry is to keep nucleus of a sound uranium industry until 1966 or 1970 when the metal is expected to be in demand for atomic power plants.

The chamber said that some advance payments be increased over those offered under the stretch-out plan, and that the industry be given further help through tax concessions.

The government has announced that Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, the crown purchasing agency, will make an advance payment of $2.50 a pound for uranium on which shipment is deferred until the period March 31, 1963 to Dec. 31, 1966. The United Kingdom has offered to make a further advance pay-

GRANTED INCREASE

The government announced Nov. 7 that Eldorado would be allowed a specific degree of responsibility for preserving the nationalistic Canadian identity.

The government - appointed Board of Broadcast Governors, in announcing Wednesday this country's first set of rules specifically for TV, said that starting in the spring of 1961 it will enforce a minimum of Canadian content in television programming.

Canadian TV viewers aren't likely to notice much change when these rules take effect—at least for the first year. The CBC networks already are exceeding the minimum, most privately-owned stations now program about 45-per-cent Canadian material.

At the moment, TV and radio stations now operate in Canada under the terms of "temporary" licences. These require no percentages for Canadian content, but do insist that broadcasters should carry "an adequate amount" of programs originating in the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Filmed programs, to qualify as Canadian, must be made in Canada by a Canadian company with a majority of Canadians on its board of directors. Canadian filmmakers must file with the board a list of the Canadians employed in the production, must approve the film's commercials and must pay its fees.

Political programs, advertisements or announcements will be broadcast in accordance with directions the board may issue from time to time in connection with programs that it may direct be devoted to such broadcasts and with the assignment of time to political parties and rival candidates.

TO GIVE THIRD

Counted as 50-per-cent Canadian will be Commonwealth programs, co-operative productions up to a maximum of one-third of the total number of hours during time, and foreign French-language material up to a limit of one-fifth of the broadcasting time.

At finality written, the TV regulations represent a slight easing-up and a more flexible approach than the board's original TV proposals met with stiff opposition from the private broadcasters and—to lesser degree—from the CBC governors.

It's unlikely the Canadian-content rules will mean the displacement of many American material now being shown in Canada. But it will prevent the U.S. programs from flooding Canadian television in the future.

This appeared to be the BBG's biggest fear, Roger Duhamel, the board's vice-chairman, said in a speech two months ago that "we like the Americans, but we object to becoming second-class Americans." He added:

"Through books, magazines, movies, radio, television and our ways of life in general, the line of demarcation between Canada and the United States is tending to disappear. We must exert ourselves, without any hostility whatever, to avoid this standardization which would make us lose our national identity and originality."

COULD BE COUNTED

As the rules now stand, much material originating in the U.S. could—for the purposes of computing content—be counted as Canadian.

For instance, the regulations provide that all news broadcasts and news commentaries could be counted as Canadian regardless of their sources of information and material.

Likewise, the board will use its own discretion in putting a Canadian label on programs of special events outside Canada if Canadians are participating or if the subject is "of national interest" in this country.

The way to beat some of the purpose of this rule, the board mentioned such broadcasts as the world series baseball games or the General Assembly of the United Nations, or international hockey between the U.S.

The possibilities are endless and the BBG will judge each event as it comes along. Carlyle Allison, BBG secretary, has a full-time job to keep track of programs and events counted Canadian.

TIME LIMIT

But television stations may be out on a limb when they broadcast some special event originating outside Canada.

In such cases they will be gambling on whether the BBG will count it as particularly event as being of enough interest and significance to Canadians to be counted as a Canadian program under the content rules.

If they won't be let down to a hard and fast list of what will be counted Canadian," Carlyle Allison, secretary of the Canadian board members, said Wednesday, "we will count cases (that the stations) will have to take their chances."

However, he noted that a wide degree of latitude will be applied in the case of broadcasts of outside events.

While not attempting to anticipate decisions of the board, Mr. Allison doubted, for example, that the Rose Bowl game—one of U.S. football games—would normally be counted Canadian.

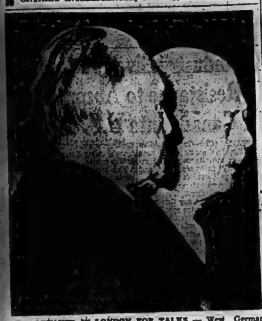
He felt that football interest in Canada generally stops at the Canadian border and that only the Grey Cup game, on the other hand, some of the finals in hockey and golf and probably those in which one boxer in Canada would be counted without question.

Over the months, the board's decisions on what is a outside events would develop into a pattern that the stations could use as a guide.

KEEP ABOVE LEVEL

They also said: The stations would be well-advised to have enough Canadian content over and above these basic requirements as events to make sure they can meet the minimum requirements, Mr. Allison said.

Their content would be judged on the total program logs submitted to the board each month.



And the board studies these would many programs be classified as Canadian content.

The Broadcasting Act approved by Parliament in 1958 stipulates that penalty for failure to observe regulations, the board may order the suspension of a station's licence for a maximum of three months. The board must give the station an opportunity to be heard on the alleged violation.

Decisions of the licence may be appealed to the exchequer court on any question of law.

Happy Cows Swing and Sway To the Music of Sammy Kaye

By Mac Jones in Bell News

RIDGEVILLE, Ont. — A herd of 18 pure-bred Jerseys is being more easily milked these days — because of music.

That is the belief of George Saylor, life-long farmer of this Niagara peninsula community who last month had background music installed in his barn, on an experimental basis. The tunes provided by the Niagara Background Music Company, are piped into the barn over a program circuit of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

"The cattle are quieter and more easily managed at milking time since they've had the music to listen to," says Mr. Saylor.

The idea of placing music in the Saylor's barn originated with a 60-year-old resident of Ridgeville, Tommy Bishop. Already well - known throughout southern Ontario as a stunt horseback rider and rope trick artist, Tommy last year began his background music company following a brief fling in radio work as an announcer and control room operator.

"That bit of radio experience made me think it would be easy to establish a music company, but boy, was I wrong!" he recalls.

THREE PROBLEMS

Three main problems almost licked Tommy's fledgling enterprise. Equipment had to be purchased for the special tapes, the music itself was difficult to rent and circuits over which to transmit the recordings were required.

Backed initially by his mother, Tommy purchased the recording machines and loudspeakers at Toronto and, with the help of a friend, assembled them. After numerous letters with a recording company in California, he managed to obtain, on a rotating rental basis, taped music especially arranged to remove all distracting notes and played on eight-hour-long grown. He now provides music for a dozen stores in St. Catharines as well as the barn which represents his first rural installation.

"I offered Mr. Saylor my service on a trial basis. I was firmly convinced cattle would respond to music" Tom reports.

"The first evening the service was tried, May 1, Tommy's idea proved to be well founded. The cows almost immediately stopped munching in the stanchions and listened intently.

"You could have heard a pin drop," admits Mr. Saylor, "And that's just about the way it's been ever since."

MAY RAISE OUTPUT

While statistics kept by the Rainbow Dairy of Welland are not conclusive, early indications show that music may be increasing milk production. At the same time, C. M. Dove, agricultural science teacher of Pelham District High School, is keeping a record of Babcock tests to measure the butterfat content of the "harmonized" milk.

Support for the idea also has been voiced by Joseph Wilson, Welland County agricultural representative, who admits music may be considered an advantage. Tommy has also received a letter from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph suggesting that the tests be carried out during th winter months.

Tommy is quite prepared to leave the equipment at the Saylor barn for that length of time. "I know there is an advantage so far as the behavior of the cows is concerned, and now I'd like to know if there is any connection between the music and actual milk production," he says.

Wants to Take Doomed Child to Lourdes Shrine

HAMILTON (CP)—The mother of three-year-old Fernande Desmonne, believed fated for an early death because of illness, has said she would "more than anything else in the world" like to take her daughter to the French shrine of Lourdes.

But Mrs. Joseph Desmonne, a devout Roman Catholic, said "We just don't have the money."

The wife of a 34-year-old, 88-a-week hoisting operator, said the mother of two other children aged 4 and 16, Mrs. Desmonne said she would first have to get permission of the doctor and priest.

The little girl, her parents have been told by doctors, is living from day to day. Because of this, she had her Christmas party last weekend. She suffers from a rare liver condition.

Said her mother: "Every day I get down on my knees and pray to God that a miracle will happen."

Wild Ponies of Sable Island

CANADA

On sandy, wind swept Sable Island, the origin of the 100 or so wild ponies which roam the slender, wreck-strewn sandbar is shrouded in mystery. One legend has it that they are the sole survivors of a French settlement sent to colonize the Island in the 15th century; another, that they struggled shore when the French Frigate L'Africaine struck a bar, and broke up in 1822. Today, they share the lonely island with 20-odd technicians who man the desolate weather station. 170 miles east from Halifax.

National Film Board of Canada Photos by Bob Brooks.

Not all of the ponies are wild; some have been tamed for patrol work. They have an instinctive sense of direction—indispensable in Sable's savage storms.

In winter, when storms cover Sable's coarse grass with snow, the ponies furrow out places where they can feed, seek shelter beneath the Island's shallow cliffs.

Launch Drive To End Passport Racket in India

BOMBAY (CP)—India, Pakistan and Britain have launched a concerted drive to end a far-flung passport racket reported to have helped smuggle 19,000 Indians and Pakistanis into the British Isles in the last five years.

The racketeers prey mostly on young men and elderly couples anxious to give their children a new start in a new country. Charging up to $1,500 for a forged passport, they often strip the would-be emigrants of their life savings.

Illegal emigrants, when caught in Britain, are flown back to New Delhi or Karachi under police escort.

In one recent group of 52 returnees was a boy of 13 who had travelled to Britain as the son of a man aged 29.

At Bombay's international airport, he broke into tears and cried:

"He is not my father, I did not even know him before I boarded the ship for London. My widowed mother sold even the copper vessels to find money for the passport."

A tall, handsome peasant from the Punjab said:

"Why should we be made to suffer for the sins of others? We are honest peasants and our only crime was that we wanted to place our services at the disposal of the British people. Please take us back to London."

ARTISANS VICTIMIZED

There are about 100,000 Indians and Pakistanis working in British factories. Several thousand students also are studying in British universities. New Delhi and Rawalpindi—the new Pakistani capital—are anxious that every assistance be given to the U.K. authorities in stopping the racket.

There is no tendency to try to make politics capital of the British government's surveillance to entertain unauthorized emigrants.

"It is fact," said an Indian official, "we here are much more anxious than Great Britain to put an end to this disgraceful business."

Preliminary police investigations show that the racketeers depend mainly on the Punjab region of northern India for their victims. The Punjabis, especially the clannish Sikhs, are excellent craftsmen and many industrial establishments in Britain have paid tribute to their abilities.

The racketeers tell villagers and spread word that factories in Britain need more Indian workers.

In some cases, would-be emigrants have sold everything in their possession to find the money for the "passports."

It is estimated some 800 Indians, Pakistanis, Italians, Frenchmen and Britons are involved in the international racket.

Wallbridge

WALLBRIDGE — Quite a number of ladies in this neighborhood are attending, bazaars and also busy preparing for Wallbridge bazaar later in November.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Spencer were Saturday evening tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Wallbridge W. I. met at the home of Mrs. Harry Fisher on Thursday night with a good attendance. Mrs. Harriett Stevens was guest speaker and all enjoyed her talk.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) Robert Murphy, 3, tried to play with what he thought was a cat wandering in the garden. The skunk scratched him and then let fly with its offensive weapon.

SPORT IN BRIEF

STADIUM COSTS HIGH

TORONTO (CP) — Costs of turning the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand into a football stadium have soared above estimates and board of control decided Wednesday to ask CNE officials for an explanation.

President Harry Price and general manager Hiram McCallum will be questioned about work costs which reached $741,500 this month. They were estimated in January at $430,000.

The stadium was used by Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four this year under a rental agreement. Council was told revenues, including the Grey Cup game, would reach about $100,000 this year, more than enough to cover the $100,000 debenture cost.

TO FIGHT WILLIAMS

MONTREAL (CP) — Montrealer Bob Cleroux, leading contender for George Chuvalo's Canadian heavyweight boxing crown, has signed to meet Ike Williams of New York in a 10-rounder Nov. 30 at Mont St. Louis gymnasium. Cleroux is gunning for his 11th victory in two years of pro fighting. He has 2 loss and a draw.

EIGHT CUP FLIGHTS

WINNIPEG (CP)—Eight extra flights to take fans to the Grey Cup game in Toronto and back are being provided by Trans-Canada Air Lines, TCA announced Wednesday. The flights, which will accommodate 500 passengers, are in addition to the regularly schedule services to Toronto.

AFTER OLMEDO

SYDNEY (AP) — Tennis promoter Jack Kramer is now interested in signing Australian Davis Cup players Roy Emerson and Rod Laver this year, Kramer's Australian agent Bob Barnes said Wednesday. Barnes said: "The only players we are vitally concerned with at present are Neale Fraser and Alex Olmedo."

"I hope you ain't disgusted with me, coach. I think I'm learning how to kick 'em without hurtin' 'em!"

Grey Cup Tickets Gripe Under Way

SAENIA (CP)—An 88-per-cent rise in the Grey Cup ticket allotment for the Ontario Rugby Football Union has brought scathing criticism from league champion Sarnia Golden Bears.

In a press release cleared by the ORFU, the Golden Bear executive condemns the Canadian Football Council for slashing the number of ORFU tickets to 3800 this year, compared with 2,500 in 1937 when the game was last played in the East.

"The CFL openly flouts all tradition behind this national championship and directly snubs those people who have contributed and will continue to contribute much more to football in Canada than the Johnny-come-lately's who are presently doing such an expert job of mismanaging what used to be Canadian football at its best," the press release said.

D'Amato Fails To Keep Date; Arrest Ordered

NEW YORK (AP) — Curt D'Amato, manager of ex-heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, was ordered arrested Wednesday after he did not appear for questioning by the New York state attorney-general.

D'Amato was subpoenaed in the attorney-general's investigation of the ring-fixing of the June 26 bout in which Patterson lost his title to Ingemar Johansson.

A warrant for his arrest was obtained when he did not keep a morning date with the investigators.

Attorney - General Luis Lefkowitz has been investigating the promotion for possible violation of a state boxing law. His inquiry has centred on the distribution of radio, television and motion picture rights.

AUSSIES WIN

DACCA, Pakistan (Reuters) — Australia defeated Pakistan by eight wickets with four hours to spare on the last day of the first cricket test match here Wednesday. The second test starts at Lahore Saturday.

Durelle Swaps Right Hooks for Fish Hooks, Uppercuts for Body Checks

By EDDIE ST. PIERRE
Canadian Press Correspondent

BAIE STE. ANNE, N.B. (CP) — Yvon Durelle, about his ring future, is not the least bit fish-shy.

"Hockey and fishing will be my sports from now on," he said Wednesday night on his return home from Toronto where a 12th-round knockout thwarted his bid to take away George Chuvalo's Canadian heavyweight championship.

"I'm going to spend the winter playing hockey and with my family." the veteran of 14 years in the ring said. Durelle played the game with Moncton Hawks of the New Brunswick Senior Senior Senior League last season. He was more of an attraction than a player but he liked it.

The fighting fishermen from this tiny Acadian-settled New Brunswick fishing village reiterated that he'll be through with boxing.

Asked if he might consider a comeback in the spring, he replied: "In the spring I'm going to fish.

"My legs are gone," Durelle said, "My ruckus are too slow now and I'm getting old. I'm the wa 30 on Oct. 10. A year back Chuvalo wouldn't have lasted five rounds with me. It's time to quit when a guy like him licks you."

But he feels the fight career has been worthwhile.

"Boxing's been good. I got 200 acres of land, a big house, another house I gave my brother and five fishing boats. I got all I need so I'm getting out while I'm a little ahead."

His pert wife, Theresa, nodded her approval. "I think Yvon's serious about his retirement. Now he can stay home with the four children. They always need him more daddy was going to come home to stay. It was always go, go, go."

Durelle has two boys and two girls, ranging in age from odd to seven.

Someone stands to get some free boxing equipment as a result of his decision to quit.

"It's not for sale. I'm going to give it away."

Doncaster Nips Gainsborough

LONDON (Reuters) — Doncaster Rovers edged Gainsborough 1-0 in a Football Association Cup first - round replay at Gainsborough, Lincolnshire, Wednesday.

Doncaster now will meet Darlington at home in the second round.

Results of other Football Association Cup first-round replays: Reading 2 Norwich C 1 (Winners home to King's Lynn) Workington 3 Southport 0 (Winners home to Halifax T) Bradford C 5 Coventry 1 (Winners home to Southend) Bradford 2 Barnsley 1 (Winners away to Rochdale)

CANADAIR 44 SHOWN

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadair 44, largest airplane ever built in Canada, flew publicly for the first time Wednesday. The four-engined cargo modification of the British Britannia now begins a flight test program.

On The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Calais II won $10,200 Wednesday Handicap as the Canadian racing season ended at New Woodbine Wednesday.

The year's final stakes event provided a thrilling finish as Calais II defeated Grand Canyon by a neck after a gruelling run of one mile and six furlongs. Tadoussac the favorite, finished third, seven lengths behind the leaders.

Calais II, an English - bred four-year-old colt, was imported this summer by M. J. Boyd of Toronto.

The winner was ridden by Hugo Dittfurth and paid $7.60 straight as he ran the distance in 2:30 2-5. The track record is 2:27.

CHAMP TO FIGHT

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — World welterweight champion Don Jordan of Los Angeles will meet Brazilian champ Fernando Barreto in a non-title 10-round bout here Nov. 28.

Bay of Quinte Basketball Loop Has Four Teams

Representatives from Belleville, Trenton, RCAF Trenton, and Napanee met Tuesday evening at the local YMCA to form a Bay of Quinte Senior Intermediate Basketball League for the 1950-60 season. Plans for a fourteen game league were drawn up and a 10-game schedule has been planned starting on November 23rd and finishing January 12, 1950. The opening game will be played in Trenton with the Trenton Wilson's meeting the Trenton High School. Game time is at 8.00 p.m. The first OIC in Belleville will be November 24 at the Quinte Secondary School at 7.00 o'clock when the Trenton Fliers (RCAF) meet Belleville Quakers.

The various team representatives are Dave Deacon for the Belleville Quakers; Milo Church for Napanee; LAC D. Collings for the Trenton Fliers, and Ted Jeffery for Trenton Wilson's. Dave Deacon, physical education director at the Belleville YMCA is acting as contact man for the league's activities.

The entire schedule to date is:

14—Quakers at Fliers
16—Napanee at Wilson's

January
4—Wilson's at Fliers
11—Fliers at Quakers

The home courts for the teams are Quakers at Quinte Secondary School, Belleville; Trenton Wilson's at Trenton High School; Fliers at RCAF Station, Trenton, and Napanee at Napanee High School. All games start at 8.00 p.m., with the exception of games at Quakers' home court which commence at 7.00 p.m.

2-0 CRASHES

WINDSOR, Ont. (AP)—A burning B-47 bomber crashed and exploded within 430 yards of a rural school near here Tuesday. Four men aboard were killed. Twenty-three pupils and their teacher were in the school when the plane blasted a 30-foot-deep crater before it.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Mel Schmidt is known around the National Hockey League as an easy-going, modest and lovable chap. But he's "real gone" when it talks about the Boston Bruins' The line there days.

As coach of the Bruins, Mel has good reason for enthusiasm. His first line of Sid Horvath, Johnny Bucyk and Vic Stasiuk has been scoring goals in spectacular fashion—15 in the club's first 16 games.

The line has accounted for 31 of the Bruins' 51 goals up to last week - end, a statistic that would soothe any coach's ulcers. Naturally, Mel is beside himself with pride whenever he has occasion to talk of his Ukes, which is just about every day now.

An attentive listener is Herb Rally of the Boston Globe, who also happens to be on the Bruins' publicity staff. Here is the gist of recent remarks by Schmidt to Rally:

"I rate the Uke line with Montreal Canadiens' famous punch of Maurice Richard, Elmer Lach and Toe Blake and the equally - famous Detroit production line of Sid Abel, Ted Lindsay and Sid Abel.

"The Uke's didn't move the puck the way the Ukes do. They would drive in instead of work lag it in."

Mel should know what he's talking about. He's been around the NHL as a player and coach, all with Boston, but in those days the Uke trio probably could be put down to good publicity.

This is the third season that Horvath, Bucyk and Stasiuk have played as a unit and the Bruins have been able to make the Stanley Cup final only twice, in 1939, when they were beaten by the Canadiens.

While mentioning famous lines, Mel could have put a plug in for a pet line of Boston-Schoolcraft recent remarks by Schmidt to Rally:

While mentioning famous lines, Mel could have put a plug in for a pet line of Boston-Schoolcraft recent remarks by Schmidt to Bauer, Mill Hinsell and Porky Dumart, that goes back 26 years and has been called one of the greatest and most colorful lines in NHL history.

The Kraut's were instrumental in winning four straight league titles for the Bruins, starting in 1936 through 1941. The first came while the NHL was split into Canadian and American divisions, the remainder after the clubs formed one seven-team league in 1938.

They were on two Stanley Cup-winning teams within a span of three years and, in 1940, they lost a semi-final series to the second-place New York Rangers in six games.

The Ukes have a long way to go to match this record.

"The latest pen homeborrowers could do is make room for a third fullback!"

Minor Hockey Notes

The midgets and juveniles took to the ice for five games at Memorial Arena last night.

MIDGET

Rangers went on a scoring spree to tack a 9-3 defeat on the Maple Leafs. Bob Lafferty paced the Rangers with three goals while Norm Richards potted a pair. Jay Kiser had a goal and two assists, Jerry St. Denis one and one and Stan Woodcock three helpers. Jimmy Woodcock and Dave Gauthier fired single goals. Mike Murphy, Richard Jones and Steve Malloy scored for the Leafs with J. Onderdonk helping on one.

The Black Hawks, spurred by Jerry Jones, blanked the Bruins 4-0. Jones triggered three of the Hawk goals while Dominic Tomaso played well to earn the shutout in the nets. Billy Ryan added the other goal while Wayne Gilroy had two assists. Yorks, Muir and Dundas one each.

Canadiens picked up two points with a 5-3 decision over the Red Wings. Jim Rutherford led the way with one goal and one assist. Single markers were registered by Gary Dorey, Bill Allen, Ron Morgan and Gary Sine. Rod Turner and Jerry Casellman scored for the Wings while Gary Woods and J. McKibbon drew assists.

JUVENILE

Doug Defoe and Hugh Pointer combined to mark the Aces' 8-4 victory over the Jets. Pointer and Defoe had two goals and as many assists apiece. Mike McLaughlin, Larry Rowbotham, Stubber and Bill Sutton scored a goal each and Ken McMullen added an assist. Dennis Sinclair scored twice for the Jets, Dick Clapp and Larry Hall netting a goal each. Bob Ladouceur and Cliff McCrimmon had two assists with one each for Clapp and Sinclair.

Members won the closest game of the night, a 4-3 victory over the Rovers. Hall, Eighler and two E. Keller and Ken Rueblow had the winning goals while Gary Duggan and Len Harvey drew assists. Billy "The Kid" McMullen and Bradley Lee had a goal and each got an assist in defeat with Bob Duggan assisting on both markers.

AT THE PARK — The kids Leo Gomez stars with Bud Abbott in one of the funniest scenes in "Abbott and Costello Go to Mars," playing tonight at the Park Theatre. Here Leo is seated with Marcia Henderson and Parker Fennelly in The Kettles on Old MacDonald's Farm, the 14th in the series, also a Universal comedy and color cartoon.

Wolves Win Four Straight; Whip Kingston

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sudbury Wolves captured their fourth straight win in the Eastern Professional Hockey League circle Wednesday night, moving them four points ahead of their nearest rival clubs, Montreal Royals and Hull-Ottawa.

Their latest kill was on home ice where they edged last place Kingston Frontenacs 4-2 before 3,000 fans.

Wolves grabbed the lead early in the first frame when forward Wally Boyer converted John Sleaver's pass midway through the period.

Defender Gerry Odrowski and Cummy Burton scored two markers in the second period to place the Wolves the win while Skipper Toal and Guy Trottier spoiled for the Frontenacs.

Tom McCarthy, former Toronto Marlboros goalie, got his insurance goal of the game with the three points remaining after Buddy Boone missed the corner of the open net with goalie Gerry Desaulniers sprawled 10 feet out in front.

Defencemen Jim Flemming and Cleland Monson livened the third period with a short fracas.

Although the Wolves have a lead in the club standings the Montreal Royals have four games in hand. The two teams meet in Sudbury Friday night.

Chihawks Take Thunderbirds Under Wing

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Club Hockey Promotions Limited announced Wednesday that Chicago Black Hawks have taken over player-operation of the Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds.

The announcement said Bob Wilson, chief scout for the National Hockey League club, will have "full authority to buy, sell, transfer or make any move he might feel necessary to give the Sault Thunderbirds a winning and contending hockey club."

The Thunderbirds are fifth in the six - team Eastern Professional Hockey League.

The announcement said Wilson will work with coach Don Grosso during practices and will aid Grosso in direction of the team during games.

Seattle Nips Edmonton 5-4

EDMONTON (CP) — Forward Rudy Filion scored three goals Wednesday night as Seattle Totems edged Edmonton Flyers 5-4 to move into sole possession of second place in the Western Hockey League.

Flyers now have 23 points, six behind first - place Vancouver Canucks and two ahead of Victoria Cougars. Flyers remain in fifth place in the seven - team loop.

Other Seattle scorers were Pat Glinnell and Bill McFarland. Don Polle, Roger Dejordy, Hugh Collic and Gordie Sirski scored for Edmonton.

League president Al Leader announced in Seattle Wednesday that Calgary Stampeders defenseman Doug Barkley has been fined $200 and suspended indefinitely for striking referee Al Paradise in Tuesday night's game with Totems.

May Cancel Friday Bouts TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Sports columnist Jimmy Cannon of the New York Journal-American said Wednesday the National Broadcasting Company will try to cancel its contract to televise the Friday night fights.

Cannon said he had learned that NBC will make the attempt at a meeting next Monday. The contract is with the Gillette Razor Company, sponsors of the night program.

NBC sports director Tom Gallery was unavailable for comment but another spokesman said he knew nothing of any plans to cancel the contract, which was renewed less than a year ago for three years.

Steel Hour Not Particularly Inspired Dramatic Staple

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The Steel Hour, a sturdy if not particularly inspired dramatic staple of the television week, had all the main ingredients of a gripping show Wednesday night.

The Last Autumn got off to a fast start: A 14 - year - old orphanboy school boy dropped from a high ledge during a class field trip — and his shocked father, at the school, is determined to find out the circumstances of his boy's death and punish the guilty.

Was it negligence on the part of the school? What if the headmaster concealing? Why did the dead boy's roommate run away in fright? The play zipped along — until the final act. Then it became overdramatic and obvious as the blame descended mostly on the belligerent father's shoulders.

Pat Hingle, in his first acting role since a serious accident several months ago, had a tendency to overdo the role of the father. Alexis Smith as his fiancee had little to do except look anguished. Still was a good hour's entertainment in spite of the wobbly denouement.

AT THE McCARTHY — A tense scene from "Sapphire," filmed in color and opening Friday at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre and featuring Nigel Patrick, Yvonne Mitchell and Michael Craig.

AT THE BELLE — Cary Grant, Eva Marie Saint and James Mason are co-starred in the new Alfred Hitchcock thriller for MGM combining love and suspense with espionage, enhanced with presentation in Technicolor, and on the big VistaVision screen. "North By Northwest", established a record during its 9 weeks' engagement at Loew's Theatre, Toronto, and is now playing an extended engagement at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Windsor Mayor Rider Rooter

OTTAWA (CP) — Mayor Michael Patrick of Windsor has gone out on a limb: He picks Ottawa Rough Riders to play in the Grey Cup.

Mayor Patrick has written a letter to Ottawa Mayor George Nelms offering "congratulations to Ottawa on the wonderful eastern championship." He said he is pulling for Rough Riders and expects them to win the eastern section against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Second game in the total-point eastern final, which Ottawa leads 17-5, is in Hamilton Saturday.

60,000 See Soccer Match

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Glasgow Rangers and Red Star of Bratislava tied 1-1 Wednesday in their European Cup soccer match before 60,000. Glasgow advanced to the next round of the tournament because it had won the first match, 4-3.

Ed Wynn Has 73rd Birthday, Says Mentally He's Only 57

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Ed Wynn had a birthday last week. The records say that he's 73. He says he's 57.

In a way, both figures are correct. The reasoning behind this helps explain why Ed is enjoying one of show business' busiest careers at an age when many men are pondering around in retirement.

"Legally, I am 73; mentally, I am 57," he said with utter flippancy. "I know it sounds crazy, but it works!

"I'll started when I was doing my first dramatic role, in The Great Man. I came on the set and everyone kept treating me like an old relic. They kept shoving chairs under me and asking me if I was all right.

"I REALLY SCORAVERED

"I got mad. I'm not by nature a profane man, but I started cursing them and telling them to stop acting as though I was ready to fall apart.

"I decided that I would not be treated like an old man. I would pick another time for my birthday, an occasion that was both joyful and important. Perhaps if I could convince myself of this by a peculiar form of self-hypnosis, then I could also convince others that I was not so darned old."

The date he picked was the most significant in his life: Aug. 9, 1886, the day he first stepped onto a stage.

"I actually think I am 57 years old," he said. "The self-hypnosis has worked. Of course, I'm not going to do anything foolish. I wouldn't go out with 18-year-old girls, as I might have when I was really 57.

"I know I'm not 57 in my body, but I think I am 57 up here (tapping his head). How else would I be able to do calisthenics like this every morning? (He touched his fingers to the floor.) How else could I be reading three scripts at one time? How else could I pursue my ambition to be a really good dramatic actor? I wouldn't have the nerve if I thought I was 73."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"You should have won that one," said Mr. Wren Blair, rubbing an ice-lobe in approved Percy Conn fashion, and whipping back that wandering forelock with a shake of his blonde mane.

"You had it in the bag in the first period when you had me 3-0, had you felt apart like a post-Hitlerian maid's hopes in the second frame. And you didn't recover much in the third."

HARVEY McFARLAND

The Canadiens - Clinton - Whitby hockey impresario, never averse to chin-wagging about his favorite sport, was chatting with us after the Macs-Whitby game the other night.

He waved a hand at the empty press. "The crowd was not up to par tonight," he continued. A smile spread over his face as he added, "That hurts my pride because I thought the Dumbells were, and have said so many times, one of the best drawing cards in the league."

Would it be because fans forgetting sentiment in hockey and running true-to-form here as everywhere, will not support a club that is a consistent loser? he was asked.

Blair snorted. "That could be the case in the greater majority of places, but it should be different in Belleville. As mentioned only during the recent loyalty here, with the fact that the Belleville McFarlands won the world hockey title with a remodelled team after fantastic breaks had gone against them."

He was right.

What would happen in Whitby if the Dunnies lost eight in a row?

Blair was stymied, but layal. "I don't think it would make much difference," he said. "I don't think that much confidence in his team. They had forgotten that deafening silence in the Whitby arena the night the Macs decimated them to the tune of 4-1—and made 'em like it.

"Besides," he went on, "Belleville fans should remember that if it were not for H. J. McFarland, they would not have a hockey club here this winter. In fact I am told if the attendance does not improve, there is a possibility of the city being backed financially by the league."

He may have been told that, but as a subscriber he also read it several times in this newspaper.

As many letters to his office, and this desk indicate, H. J. McFarland did a wonderful job for Belleville, the N. J. McFarlands and Canada, both here and overseas, last year. He carried over his interest and loyalty to the game by promising it again this year, but in a more personal capacity.

Thousands of city and district fans backed the Macs to the hilt last year while they were battling for both the Allan Cup and the world championship. We believe the same thing will hold this season—regardless of the weak showing. Something could be done about it since "if there is any money left over at the end of the season, the boys can have it. I do not want it."

As a matter of fact we are of the opinion that "H. J." is not averse to seeing anything under the sun "do its stuff" to "fill the red" if he can bring good hockey to the city and district. Not this should not be the case if fans will support the club in the "manner" that it deserves. We know what that is, but presume it would be in the vicinity of the 2,000 per game mark. That could be wrong.

The Bonster Club is doing a magnificent job—but it cannot do it all. All Bonster members should make it a point to attend games—and use their influence to see that non-member fans do likewise.

On the other hand "everybody loves a winner." There are fans who believe that there is no place in sport for sentiment. "Give us a winner—or else!" That has been proven in many cases and it is the case here—up to a certain point.

It is the case in Kingston. The new Frontenacs' pro club pulled in over 3,000 in exhibition and first league games. Today they are in the cellar of the Eastern Pro League and drawing an average of 2,000, some 900 below the "break-even" point.

The Maes have been victims of circumstances, bad luck, and "breakless" games. They can play hockey, too, when they use their potential. When they're "up," they can be as good as any club in the league.

But they should have and are deserving of more box office support. With the old familiar cry of "Mare, Mare More" crashing from 2,000 throats who knows they could begin that tough, arduous climb up the league ladder.

Folley Wins Over Johnson

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Zora Folley, the No 2 contender for the world heavyweight boxing title, toyed with game Alonzo Johnson Wednesday night for a unanimous 10-round decision.

Folley weighed 191½ and Johnson 185½ for the bout, staged at a motel on a charity dinner dance program.

Folley, using his right hand like a club against the crowding Johnson, was unmarked at the end. Johnson's left eye was badly swollen.

Folley, from Chandler, Ariz., was given the 10-05 edge by judge Joe Vosilla and a 98-94 margin by judge Jack Hague. Referee Max Baer gave it to Folley 99-94.

Bombers Resume Training Grid

WINNIPEG (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers, with their hopes set on a second consecutive Grey Cup victory, return to work today after a four-day layoff.

It will be three days of workouts on their frozen practice field here, then on to Toronto Monday where softer turf is expected.

The layoff followed Bombers' 17-6 win over Edmonton Eskimos Saturday which gave them their third straight Western Interprovincial Football Union title.

Their Big Four opponent in the Grey Cup at Toronto Nov. 28 will be decided Saturday in the playoff game between Ottawa Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Bob Elliott New Manager Kansas City A's

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "We wanted a fiery guy and we got him."

That's how Arnold Johnson, president of Kansas City Athletics, feels about hiring Bob Elliott as manager of his seventh-place American League club.

Elliott, 42, a major league player 15 years and a manager in the Pacific Coast League four years, signed with the Athletics Wednesday. He signed a one-year contract for a reported $10,000 salary to succeed Harry Craft, whose contract was not renewed.

Elliott played with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League before moving up to Pittsburgh Pirates in 1939. With Boston Braves in 1947 he batted .311 drove in 113 runs and was the National League's most valuable player. He also played with New York Giants, St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox.

He managed San Diego from 1951 until early in 1957. He led Sacramento Solons to fourth place in 1958 and had signed with them for next year. He contract had an escape clause, however.

Albert College Meets Markham Cl For COSSA Junior B Grid Crown

Albert College Juniors will play host to the Markham Cl Saturday with hopes of bringing the second COSSA football crown of the season to this city if Quinte can be downed.

The sudden-death game for the COSSA Junior "B" championship will be played on the Albert College field starting at 2 o'clock afternoon. The Albert College Juniors defeated Quinte Secondary School's feat in winning the Senior "A" title last week.

Albert Juniors are coached by Everett English who, like Quinte coach Jack Sisson, is a protege of Peterborough's Bevo Goulding.

English claims that his club will be the first to represent the school in years and is confident of victory in Saturday's game. Albert won five games and lost one during the season. English has a powerful running backfield that he feels will lead the club to the COSSA crown.

A large crowd is expected to take in the 1.30 fixture.

Aussies Hold 7-Stroke Lead In Canada Cup Tournament

MELBOURNE (CP) — Australia maintained a seven-stroke lead in the Canada Cup golf tournament today despite a brilliant four-under-par 68 by Stan Leonard of Vancouver that put Canada alone in second place after two rounds.

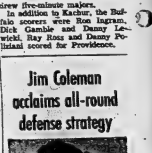
Leonard fe-hioned his round over the expansive greens and 6,355-yard distance of the Royal Melbourne course in great style. His 65 and first-round 70 gave him 135 and a tie with Australia's Peter Thomson in the individual championship races.

Leonard's partner, Al Balding of Markham, carded a three-over-par 73 today to go with his first-round 74 for a 147 total. Balding was in a six-way tie for 6th spot in the individual races.

The Australian team of Thomson and Kel Nagel lead the 72-hole tournament with 276. Thomson scored a 67 and 69 and Nagle double 70s. Canada has 283. Third at 285 is the United States team of Sam Snead and Cary Middlecoff.

Snead came up with the hottest round today, a 65. He was two strokes back of Thomson and Leonard at 133.

The U.S. would have moved into stout contention if Ben Hogan and Lloyd Mangrum had both seven fives on the last nine holes for a five-over 41. They finished with a 75 and was dazed over his sudden collapse.



In fourth place was Wales with 291, South Africa was fifth with 293.

In the fight for the international individual title, Thomson, Leonard and Snead are well out in front. Nagle is fourth with 140 and Dave Thomas of Wales fifth at 141.

Thomas and his partner, Dai Rees, between them took 15 strokes on the 14th hole. Rees' ball and Thomas's seven in that hole a bartender pulled a plug from a beer barrel, causing four minutes $25 fine, McCord and Hurst drew five-minute majors.

In addition to Kachur, the Buffalo forwards were Don Ingram, Dick Gamble and Danny Lewicki. Ray Ross and Danny Poliziani scored for Providence.

Bears' Laforge Scores Four In 8-2 Win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A four-goal performance isn't unusual in the American Hockey League; Five is Jiggers have scored four goals in one game this season.

Claude Laforge did it Wednesday night as the fourth - place Hershey Bears beat the league-leading Springfield Indians 8-2 and ended the AHL's longest unbeaten streak of the season. The Indians hadn't lost in seven games and had won four in a row.

The Indians retained their three-point lead over the second-place Providence Reds, who were beaten 5-2 by Buffalo Bisons in the only other game scheduled. Eddie Kachur, one of the four goal men this season, capped the fifth-place Bisons' attack with a pair of goals.

Dune Fisher backed up Laforge with two goals. Willie MacGillivray and Brian Smith got singles. Don Cherry and Barry Pidhirny scored for Springfield.

Late in the game Bob McCord of Springfield and Bert Hunt of Hershey swapped punches. Goaltender Marcel Pailie of Springfield joined the scrap. Hurst pulled Pailie's sweater over his head and Pailie swung his stick in the dark until he got his shirt down. He hit no one.

Pailie drew a 10-minute misconduct penalty and an automatic $25 fine. McCord and Hurst

Snow Causes TiCats Concern, Most Ottawa Worries Gone

HAMILTON (CP)—A carpet of snow lay this morning over the scene of Saturday's battle which will decide the East's representative in the Grey Cup game.

And uppermost in the minds of the Hamilton Tiger - Cat fans were two questions.

1. Will the Civic Stadium field be in good shape when the snow is removed today?

2. Will it stay that way until Saturday?

The widely-held view is that sure footing will be needed by the TiCats if they are to overcome the Ottawa Rough Riders' 17-5 lead in the windup of the two-game, total-points Big Four playoff.

Fred Waters, superintendent of the Parks board, says there is nothing at all to worry about:

"We'll just sweep or shovel the snow off the field in the morning, mark lines and yard stripes and lay the tarp down until Saturday.

"Today we rolled the field and it's in good condition. If it snows all night we'll just have to hire more men to get this more and sure the field."

The tarpaulin was rented from Toronto's Varsity Stadium, where it has been things since mid-fall for several Grey Cup games in the past.

The worry here is that the Rough Riders showed a great like-ing for mud in the capital last weekend while the TiCats bogged down.

The last person to make light of the situation is coach Jim Trimble.

"If I told you we had an excellent chance, I'd be telling you a lie," he said Wednesday in a frank talk to the Quarterback Club.

"But I think we have a good chance. . . If we lose, I'll congratulate (Ottawa coach) Frank Clair and wish him good luck and think our players will do the same. They won't be giving excuses, a thing, but if they lose they will wish the winners the best to all the way."

NO MIRACLES

Trimble cautioned his listeners not to expect miracles.

"Theoretically," he said, "the first one is on us to make up for 12 points. We can't get out there and throw football the kind of game I call holy ghost ex, to get those points back. We've got to beat them on basics."

The Quarterback Club, meanwhile, is out to prove that the fans are solidly behind the TiCats even in the humiliation of the underdogs. The team will be paraded to the Royal Connaught Hotel after Friday evening's practice for a big pep rally.

Maroons Edge Dutchmen 6-5 In Senior Tilt

KITCHENER (CP)—Chatham Maroons fought off a late Kitchener-Waterloo rally to defeat the Dutchmen 6-5 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game yesterday night.

Chatham was never behind after the seventh minute of the second period and had a four-goal lead with less than 12 minutes remaining. But the Dutchmen rallied and almost tied the game in the closing seconds when they pulled goaltender Cesare Maniago with 35 seconds left to play.

Joe Maio scored twice for the Maroons, Frankie Spencer, Ed Sberp, Ivan Tennant and Billy Forbes got the other goals.

Chatham's marksmen were Bob Madar, Ron Muir, Bob Ertel, Butch Martin and Jerry Knight.

The victory moved Chatham to within one point of the second-place Dutchmen who trail the league-leading Whitby Dunlops by a similar margin.

Four penalties were called, two to each club.

Allison Named American League Rookie of Year

BOSTON (AP)—Bob Allison, Washington Senators' big, muscular outfielder, Wednesday was named American League rookie of the year.

It was the second year in a row that Washington's centre fielder had been chosen for the honor by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Allison formed the 1958 winner, little Albie Pearson, out of his position.

Pearson was traded to Baltimore this season after the slim-foot, three-inch, 210-pound Allison had secured the centre field job.

Virtually the same situation existed in the National League, where the 1959 rookie of the year, Willie McCovey of San Francisco, forced the 1958 winner, Orlando Cepeda, out of his

Hints Color TV Not Far Away

OTTAWA (CP)—The Board of Broadcast Governors hinted Wednesday that color TV for Canada may not be far away.

It is silenced accompanying announcement of television regulations, the board said it doesn't intend "at this time" to issue licences for color broadcasting. It added:

"However, the board feels it should be well for applicants for second television licences to make provisions for facilities for the transmission of broadcasts in colour."

These applications will be heard at the first six months of next year.

MORTGAGE LOANS NOTICE

Reform Slate of Mine-Mill Union Now in Firm Control

SUDBURY (CP) — Don Gillis and his reform slate were in firm control over the biggest local of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers today but it remained to be seen whether he was any closer to his declared aim of sending the independent union back into the fold of organized labor.

After the outcome of Local 598's election was announced Wednesday, the Canadian Labor Congress issued a statement welcoming the result as an indication that the Sudbury workers desire closer ties with the CLC. The statement said nothing however, of any direct effect the vote might have on affiliation.

A vote among Mine-Mill's 28,000 members this year favored joining the CLC, provided terms could be worked out whereby the union would lose none of its constitutional rights.

CLC BIDDY TIME

The national labor body so far has taken no firm action, preferring to watch internal developments in Mine-Mill and the national leadership generally has not been enthusiastic about affiliation.

National President Nels Thibault, who has accused Gillis of trying to split the union, sought to unseat him personally in Thursday's election but lost. Gillis, 34, defeated Thibault by 1,200 votes in a three-cornered contest.

Gillis' entire 16-man executive slate was elected over-all with only 14 last March when he took over from Mine Soloki as president.

Gillis said he will again ask the CLC to grant affiliation to Mine-Mill, backed out of the old Canadian Congress of Labor in 1940 on charges of Communist domination and raiding.

Communism was a hot issue in Tuesday's election and was used by both Gillis and Thibault that the last season, a unique factor has been responsible for the slight decrease in the kill to date.

This is the increase in snowshoe rabbits, due to the fox population being depleted by the rabies epidemic of last summer.

Many hunters using dogs are finding the hounds prefer chasing the rabbits instead of the deer.

In fact, one party of hunters, disappointed at the hounds diversion, brought out a large snowshoe on the hood of their car, quite but true evidence of the preference of their dogs, and the scarcity of deer.

Another party checking in at Arnprior, took the jack of bunt rabbits in their bag, purchased a cosmetic pig, wired a set of antlers to its ears and draped it over the car hood.

Council Forced To Advertise For New Auditor

DESERONTO — At the regular meeting on Monday night town council was advised by the Department of Municipal Affairs that the license of one of the town auditors R. A. McFadden and Co., had been revoked, it was also among the correspondence there was a letter from Rose Neal of Deseronto applying for the position. In the discussion Reeve Alfred moved that the clerk be instructed to write the municipal board asking for recommendations for the position. He was advised that the municipal board would not recommend but would furnish a list of available auditors. He then moved that the clerk ask for such a list. Councillor Spence moved that the letter of application of Rose Neal be referred to the council as a whole to be discussed in private. Council then adjourned and after a short discussion returned to pass a motion that the application be held over until the next regular or any special meeting.

Also among the correspondence was a letter from some residents of Green Street complaining about the drainage from Dundas Street along the west side of Green. Apparently the surplus water runs over the lawns and into the yards of the complainants. Mayor Sweetman spoke of the need of a proper remarked on the improvement of

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-TO-BE

RAWDON — Mrs. Clarence Dunham entertained the ladies of the Wellmans community to a china shower in honor of Miss Ritchie Bulten, bride-to-be on Friday evening.

The dining table was decorated with streamers and bells and as the honored guest unwrapped her lovely gifts, the girls fashioned a wedding hat from the decorative ribbon. The recipient voiced thanks for the party and gifts.

Mrs. Bill Petherick provided several accordion selections. Mrs. Burton Morton conducted games and contests.

An address of appreciation was read by Mrs. Stewart Hoover.

The guests included Mrs. Henry Bulten and Miss Cathrine Bulten.

The hostess served dainty refreshments and all wished the bride to-be a life of happiness and prosperity.

Mrs. Burton Morton was a supper guest on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunham.

The school children and Rural Mail carriers had a holiday on Remembrance Day.

Mrs. Robert Hoard of Hoard's W.A., and Mrs. Archie Bailey of Carmel W.A., were guests of Mrs. Robert Merrick, on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fryear and family spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Robson, Halloway.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White, Mr. Harold White, and Mrs. Marguerite McMullen, visited the former's sister, Mrs. E. Wescott, (nee Viola White), in the Trenton Memorial Hospital on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Wescott is making a good recovery following her recent major operation.

Mrs. Lillie Morris was hostess for the November meeting of Carmel W.A. Mrs. Ron White gave the second part of her trip to Italy and France.

The devotional was in charge of Mrs. Joe Grills and Mrs. Harold Johnson.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

On Sunday afternoon at Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church Mr. E. C. Hay-Ellis gave the message based on a text from the fourth chapter of Ephesins "Be Ye Kind One to Another." Mr. Harry McAdam presided over the lay services and Mr. Robert Hoard read the Bible lesson. The choir rendered two selections.

The Rev. W. G. Fletcher conducted a baptismal service for Mary Isabel Hoard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoard.

Guests at the service included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ketcheson, Halloway.

Blaze Destroys Footwear Plant

MARKDALE (CP) — Fire Wednesday destroyed the Junior Footwear Limited factory, and brick house next to it in this village 22 miles southeast of Owen Sound. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

The company, which came here 2½ years ago, employed 80 persons, half of them men.

The fire is believed to have smouldered for about eight hours after the last shift left Tuesday.

Firemen had no chance to save the William Laughlin home, situated only two feet away from the factory.

Two volunteer firemen, John Mackenzie and Harold Woods, were slightly injured fighting the blaze.

Minto

MINTO — On Friday evening the congregation of Salem United Church served a bountiful turkey supper in the church hall. There was a splendid attendance and the proceeds were gratifying.

St. Thomas W. A. held a dinner and quilting at the home of Mrs. Lindsay Tanner on Tuesday.

NATO Secretary Urges Pact Cover Africa, Mid-East

Says Extension Needed To Meet Economic Drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Henri Spaak, Atlantic pact secretary-general, has urged the 15 NATO countries to extend their alliance into Africa and the Middle East to cope with the Communist economic offensive.

Spaak Thursday endorsed French President Charles de Gaulle's plea that the defence pact be reshaped to promote more co-operation in economic and foreign policy.

"The threat of war is receding but the Communist threat to the free world is increasing," he told the annual meeting of representatives of Atlantic pact parliaments.

MUST END RIVALRIES

Spaak declared Atlantic pact nations must end their economic rivalries and co-operate as never before to meet Communist, threat to underdeveloped lands.

At the same time, he cautioned against any move to cut Western defence spending.

Spaak called the underdeveloped regions struggling for better living standard, the critical battle area between East and West.

FAVOR MORE AID

In a few hours earlier, the 156 legislators unanimously approved a resolution urging immediate establishment of a special economic commission to draft a concrete plan for speeding up the underdeveloped regions.

Spaak, streaking he was speaking for himself, was critical that France, in developing her own nuclear weapons, had acted as though such a weapon never had been invented. He called it "a waste of intellectual effort and resources."

France is being forced to retreat and discover what was discovered by other allies 10 years ago, Spaak said.

PICKING UP DEER CARCASS, MAN SHOT TO DEATH

Charge Boarder With Manslaughter

MILTON (CP) — John Cutis, 31, of Hornepayne, Ont., today was charged with manslaughter Thursday night in connection with the shooting death of 39-year-old Gerald Schmalz of Preston.

Schmalz's body was found Thursday on a farm near Milton, town 20 miles east of Guelph. Cutis, a boarder at the Guelph farm of Robert Prescick, had taken part in a search for Schmalz, missing since Wednesday night.

Police said Schmalz, accompanied by two other men, had travelled to Nassagaweya township to pick up a deer carcass hidden in a barn. Apparently they had their way in the dark and came to Mr. Prescick's barn. Cutis fired them inside and informed Cutis.

The two men went back to the barn with a revolver and Mr. Prescick told police, a shot was fired into the air and the men ordered to come out. As one man slipped through the shadows, a second shot was fired.

Schmalz's brother, Cecil, and his father, Alfred, went to the barn. Wednesday and began a search for the missing man. Assisted by Mr. Prescick and Cutis, they found Schmalz's body in bush near the farm.

Schmalz was married with four children.

Jap Chemical Plant Blows up, 276 Injured

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — A fire in a chemical plant touched off a series of gigantic explosions in a heavily populated Yokohama suburb today. More than 1,400 buildings were destroyed or damaged, and 276 persons are injured.

There was only one confirmed death, but authorities did not rule out the possibility that more dead would be found.

The death toll would have been huge, but most of the fire spread quickly. Before the explosions began most of the workers within the plant had raced to cover in caves or dashed to safety in concrete bunkers built when the plant was a Japanese navy ammunition depot.

"It was worse than a bombing like a gigantic earthquake," said one witness.

Windows were shattered for miles around. Debris crashed through the roofs of homes and business houses. A Japanese high school children ran screaming from nearby classrooms.

The plant makes explosives for engineering and construction projects and some ammunition. Police ordered persons within a mile-and-a-quarter radius to safer ground, fearing the raging fires would touch off warehouses of TNT and dynamite. But by nightfall, some seven hours after the first blast, the flames were under control and residents were allowed to return to their homes.

Today's Chuckle

Money still talks, of course. But you need a hearing aid to understand what a buck is saying these days.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: A few unsettled days moved across overnight and under partly cloudy skies temperatures reached between the teens and the 30s today. Little change is anticipated in the weather forecast Sunday with normal temperatures and mostly cloudy skies expected over Southern Ontario. In the north twinkly sunny skies are forecast with little temperature change.

A freak storm early yesterday morning dumped up to 11 inches of snow in the Picton-Bloomfield-Wellington district of Prince Edward County. The storm swept into Eastern Ontario and covered an area of about 20 square miles. Snow plows worked all through the night to keep main roads open. Here Pictonians were digging themselves out from the near-record snowfall, residents of Mountain View and other nearby districts, less than 15 miles distant, were enjoying ideal snow-free conditions. Although the storm left considerable snow, children of the district were quite happy. Susan Hagerman, 4, is fascinated by the snow drapery on a spruce tree on Queen Street, Picton.

Find Girl's Body, Beaten, Raped in Calgary Church

CALGARY (CP)—A 10-year-old girl, an Indian from Brighton, was found beaten to death in a church Thursday night.

Lynn Lavallee's body was discovered in the men's washroom of the Mission Church of the Nazarene. A soft-drink bottle was found by her side. She had been bludgeoned over the head.

The grim discovery was made by Rev. Ernest Campbell as several women who had held a church meeting left.

"At first I thought she had just fainted and that I could give her mouth to mouth resuscitation or something," Mrs. Maisie Hall said. "Then I saw her color of her body—I knew she was dead."

Police first learned the girl was missing at 6:30 p.m. when they were told she had not returned home from school. Later they found her clothes in the girls' washroom at school Thursday.

Her mother, Mrs. Muriel Lefargay, is a noted Calgary choir singer.

CP Airlines To Fly to Rome

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and Italy today announced an international agreement under which Canadian Pacific Airlines will extend its Montreal-Lisbon flights to fly to Rome, effective March 1, 1958.

Italy is granted the right to operate on a route from Italy to Montreal with a call at intermediate pickup points.

The Italian and Canadian airlines are expected to operate with two round trips each weekly.

Art Treasures Worth Ten Million Brought to U.S. by Two Immigrants

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) A Chicago art appraiser today hailed a set of paintings dug out from under an immigrant's bed and a closet as "the greatest art find of the century." He said they're worth $8,000,000 to $10,000,000.

But some art authorities were not so sure. They said they'd like to see the works first themselves.

Alexander Zlatoff - Mirsky, art appraiser and restorer, who has his own studio, declared 10 of the paintings, ranging from masterpieces from the Italian Renaissance.

One of them he identified as the Madonna by Michelangelo di Caravaggio and valued at more than $1,000,000.

Even as announcement of the discovery came today in New Jersey Gerler's office, a rift developed between the owners and their agent.

Alfonso Folio, 49, a television repair man, and his sister, Mrs. Maria Folio Hatahurda, said they were greatly disappointed that Charles di Rezno, a friend who developed into their agent, had made the matter public.

Zlatoff-Mirsky said the masterpieces were authenticated by Amadeo Porcella, cataloguist for the Vatican and an expert on Renaissance art. Porcella spent four months in Pasadena examining the works, Folio and Mrs. Hatahurda said.

The paintings have been handed down by the Folio family for generations. They were shipped into the United States in 1940 by the U.S. Army among the personal effects of Mrs. Hatahurda's husband, Chester.

Prof. F. Carlton Ball, head of the University of Southern California art department, said proof of authenticity of old masters involves much painstaking labor. Often at least three recognized experts must agree, after studying brush strokes and techniques, before the profession accepts the discovery.

Folio said the paintings were obtained from their grandmother who inherited them from her uncle, Cardinal Senna-Antonio, in 1937. The cardinal had inherited them from his cousin, Nicola Santore, judge and secretary to Ferdinando, king of Naples, Folio said.

New Marching Mark Claimed By Londoners

BRIGHTON, England (AP) Two sore-footed men limped into Brighton before dawn today and claimed to have set a yet another long - distance marching record. Tom Rowley and Walter Latham claimed they had walked the 120 miles from Brighton to London and back in 32 hours, 15 minutes—two hours and 32 minutes under the record set by two British army engineers last Sunday.

France Casts Lone UN Vote Against Plea for No A-Tests

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) — A lively debate limped up today in the United Nations assembly on an Asian-African resolution opposing French atomic tests in the Sahara.

A key group of delegates faced the choice of offending France by making an exception for her after going on record Thursday night against further nuclear weapon tests.

The showdown is slated after the assembly gives its expected quick and unanimous approval to a United States-Soviet proposal to turn all disarmament proposals over to the 10-power East-West conference opening in Geneva in February.

The disarmament resolution is sponsored by all 82 members so the approval in the assembly is a formality.

With that out of the way, the assembly turns to the Asian-African resolution expressing grave concern over the French plant to test an atomic bomb and calling on her not to hold the test.

The political committee Thursday night, by 60 to 1, approved a separate appeal to all powers to refrain from nuclear weapon tests, without mentioning the Sahara project. France cast the lone negative vote. The U.S. and Britain were among 17 nations abstaining.

France has made clear she intends to go ahead with the desert tests within a few months —with or without the approval of the general-assembly.

France abstained as the political committee approved, 72 to 0, an appeal to the U.S., Britain and the Soviet Union to continue their voluntary ban on tests while negotiations for a permanent ban are under way.

Uranium Miners of Bancroft, Elliot Lake Submit Briefs

OTTAWA (CP)—Two rival labor unions asked the federal government Thursday to take action to help workers who will be laid off in uranium companies as a result of the decision to stretch out uranium deliveries over the next seven years.

The request was made in briefs submitted to the House of Commons Standing and Trade Minister Churchill by the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.).

The Steelworkers Union, representing some 11,000 workers in Ontario's Elliot Lake and Bancroft areas, said any severance pay for laid-off employees should not deprive workers of unemployment insurance. It also proposed that the National Employment Service pay the transportation on new workers to leave the mine areas and that the labor department establish vocational training courses for them.

The Mine-Mill Union, representing 1,200 workers at Uranium City, Sask., and in the Bancroft area, made similar proposals. However, it proposed that if the companies failed to agree on severance pay the government should provide the payment.

Mine-Mill also said the government should guarantee that workers who have bought homes in mining towns will be able to recover their investment.

Harvey Murphy, eastern vice-president, said Mr. Churchill gave the union assurance that the government will not try to eliminate the Crown agency, Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, as a uranium producer.

Larry Sarpkos of Toronto, No. 4 district director of the steelworkers, said, Mr. Churchill and Mr. Gordon Lett, M.P. Prince Edward, were present as interpreters and mixed up arrangements.

The Steelworkers Union said that it was making the proposal for government action it was in no way seeking to relieve the companies of responsibility to their employees.

"The companies have neither gambled nor have they lost. . . . The group operating six mines in Elliot Lake will make a profit, before taxes and interest, of over $160,000,000 on a shade more than a $25,000,000 investment."

National Employment Service officers should be opened at Elliot Lake and Bancroft to help laid-off workers, the USWA.

COMMONWEALTH INDUSTRY, UNION PARLEY PLANNED

Prince Philip Behind 3-Week Study in '62

TORONTO (CP)—Some 200 representatives of industry and trades unions from all countries of the Commonwealth will spend a three-week seminar and study period in Canada in 1962.

The meeting—to be called the Duke of Edinburgh's second Commonwealth study conference—was decided upon at a meeting of Prince Philip and a group of Canadian industrial and labor leaders, held June 25 on the yacht Britannia during this year's Royal Visit.

Conference headquarters in Toronto state that the three-year preparations for the meeting now are well under way.

Its general subject will be "the changing industrial environment in the Commonwealth and Empire."

The form of the meeting has not yet been decided, but it may start with an opening study period in either Ottawa or Western Canada, followed by a trip across Canada and closing study periods at the final point of the tour.

Time of the meeting is tentatively set for mid-1962, probably in June.

STARTED IN 1956

The first Duke of Edinburgh study conference, in 1956, also was held at Oxford, England, in which Prince Philip initiated it through discussions with industrial and trades union leaders, in the hope of finding common denominators of modern industrial-development.

Prince Philip, president of the first conference, will also be present at the 1962 gathering and has stated that he hopes to take part in some of the preparatory meetings.

Maynard Massey, former government-general, is chairman of the conference council, a group which will have 30 council members. W. M. V. Ash, president of Shell Oil Company of Canada Ltd., is vice-chairman, and E. P. Taylor, President of Argus Corporation Ltd., is honorary treasurer.

OTHER MEMBERS

They will be members of a steering committee of the council, and other members of the committee will include:

C. W. Ambridge, president, Abitibi Power and Paper Co. Ltd.; W. J. Bennett, president, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.; Thomas W. Eadie, president, Bell Telephone Company of Canada; Philip S. Fisher, president, The Southam Co. Ltd.; R. M. Fowler, president, Canadian Manufacturers' Association; Donald Gordon, president, C.N.R.; A. Gratwick, Railways; Claude Jodoin, president, Canadian Labor Congress; Donald MacDonald, secretary-treasurer, Canadian Labor Congress; Roger Maltais, president, Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor.

Gordon Hawkins, formerly associate director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education, heads the full-time conference organization as executive-director.

Lipsticks May Follow Cranberries In Safety Precautions Battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lipsticks may follow cranberries as the latest victim of the United States Food and Drug Administration's drive to protect consumers.

Last month FDA banned the use in lipsticks of certain coal tar colors which had caused death and illness in test rats. The U.S. government said users of lipstick face no danger because they are not involved in the tests on rats, the drastic seizure procedures used with cranberries were not involved, an FDA spokesman said.

Cosmetic makers, in vigorous protests just filed with FDA, are contending that most lipsticks with the banned colors would be affected. The 17 shades of lipstick, rouge and cream the FDA cited are key ingredients in the cosmetics for many years without harm, they say.

The industry contends there has been no substantial proof that human may be harmed by what they claim is an infinitesimal amount of color that gets into the digestive system from lipstick.

A spokesman said the manufacturers are just waiting for the cranberry fast to end before they raise a lipstick furor.

It will include demands for a change in the law which now permits use of only those colors which have been certified as harmless for use in foods and cosmetics. There are 120 approved dyes, but none suitable for lipsticks, the makers contend.

Because animals are used involved in the tests on rats, the drastic seizure procedures used with cranberries were not involved, an FDA spokesman said.

Cosmetic makers, however, say cancer would not show up in such short-term tests and that generally agreed that tests of at least two years are required to disclose cancer effects. Such long-term tests now are being conducted with some of the lipstick colors.

The FDA has conceded that the amounts of the color which may get into the human digestive system from lipsticks are much smaller than the amounts fed the test rats.

Algerian Rebels Ready To Bargain For Cease-Fire

Name Captive Leaders To Negotiate War's End

TUNIS Reuters)—The Algerian insurgent "provisional government" today authorized a group of its imprisoned leaders to negotiate a cease-fire with the French government.

President de Gaulle has repeatedly invited leaders of the Algerian rebel movement to go to France under safe-conduct pass to negotiate a cease-fire.

Today's statement from the "provisional government" naming six spokesmen five men already held in French prisons, observed as the first sure sign the rebels are willing to negotiate an end to the five-year-old war for independence from France.

The statement confirmed there could be no cease-fire without guarantees for the principle of self-determination in Algeria.

WITHIN FOUR YEARS

De Gaulle promised in September that Algeria will get self-determination within four years at the end of hostilities.

Under the self-determination plan, de Gaulle proposed the Algerians a referendum in which they can choose full integration with France, a looser association within the French community.

The rebel statement named Mohammed Ben Bella, Algeria's other insurgent chiefs held by the French government to negotiate a cease-fire.

French forces replaced their leaders by forcing down their plane in October, 1956, as they were flying to Tunis from a ten-conference in Rabat organized by Tunisia and Morocco with the aim of ending the Algerian war.

No Blackout Here for Football Game

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC said today the first half of Saturday's nationally - televised Big Four football game will not be shown on Toronto, Hamilton, Kitchener or Barrie TV stations.

All other TV stations which normally carry Big Four football broadcasts, including CKWS in Kingston, will carry the full game.

The game, second of the two-game total-points series between Toronto Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats, begins in Hamilton at 1 p.m. EST. Ottawa was the first game 17-5.

A CBC spokesman said the blacked-out stations would join the network for the half-time 15-minute period, about 2:30 p.m.

The black-out policy is part of the CBC's agreement with the Big Four football circuit to protect ticket sales. Earlier this week the corporation said it was negotiating for possible inclusion of local areas in the entire telecast.

BURIED TO CHIN

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ames, 40, of Pickering, was buried to his chin for nearly three hours Thursday when he was engulfed in a hopper of sand and gravel at the Metcalf and Company yard. Ames, rescued with Steve Clancy, 35, of Toronto, was in good condition.

Eleven Winners Of Victoria Cross Are Honored

TORONTO (CP) — Eleven of Canada's Victoria Cross winners, among them Defence Minister Pearkes, were honored Thursday by the Royal Canadian Military Institute. Another of the VC holders was Rev. John Foote, former minister of Ontario reform institutions from 1930 to 1953.

Others in attendance were David Vivian Curry, Charles S. Rutherford, Paul Triquet, Benjamin Handley Geary, Thain Wendell MacDowell, William Henry Metcalf, Coulson Norman Mitchell, Harry Sarchan and Frederick Albert Tilson.

The men represented one-third of those still living in Canada who won the Victoria Cross in three wars.

Queen, Philip Celebrate 12th Anniversary

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen and Prince Philip quietly celebrate their 12th wedding anniversary today.

Flags flew from all public buildings in the capital.

No public engagements were scheduled for the couple, although the Queen received private guests at Buckingham Palace before going to Windsor Castle with the duke.

Philip usually gives the Queen a piece of jewelry on their anniversary, and it is usually of his own design.

CHILD CUTS FACE ON MILK BOTTLE

The one-year-old daughter of O.P.P. Constable Ed McAlliste and Mrs. McAllister, Chatham St., was taken to hospital for emergency treatment this morning after she fell and cut her face and forehead on a milk bottle. At noon it was not known whether the child would be admitted to the hospital or be allowed to go home.

TAKEN TO HOME AFTER TREATMENT

A young boy, Stephen Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown, was taken to Belleville General Hospital for emergency treatment this morning after he was struck by a car on No. 2 Highway near the Jewish cemetery west of the city. The boy was taken to hospital by the driver of the car involved and after treatment for an abrasion to his knee was allowed to go home.

Evangelist to Conduct Preaching Mission

Rev. Ivor Powell known as "The Man from Wales" will conduct an evangelistic preaching mission in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church commencing Monday evening for four evenings. Mr. Powell worked as a boy in the Welsh coal mines before entering the ministry. His evangelistic campaigns have been carried on in South Africa, New Zealand, Australia, New Guinea and the United States. For two years he has been in Canada where he has conducted evangelistic services in Baptist churches in every major centre from the Welsh coast to British Columbia.

Mr. Powell is a producer of moving pictures and has "shot" films in their native habitat from a distance of six feet and elephants from six yards. The famous missionary film "Sunrise in New Guinea" shows the savage customs of cannibal tribes living in the jungles of New Guinea and the work of modern missions begun there only recently by Australian Baptists portrays the first Sabbatical service to be held among these savage people.

Mr. Powell preaches the messages of the Bible with all the impressional and characteristic of his race. As an author of two books of travel, theology and illustrations he has a significant message. He shows films at 7.30 o'clock each evening and begins his preaching service at 8 o'clock.

BCI Cadet Corps May Disband for Lack of Leader

For the want of a shoe the horse was lost.

For the want of about sixms up the position of the cadet corps at Belleville Collegiate Institute may be lost, and the school which is currently in charge of being disbanded for the lack of a child instructor.

Since September of this year a special committee of the Board of Quinte District High School Board has been considering the future status of the Collegiate cadet corps, and after many meetings has decided to disband the cadet corps but board officials think the step will have to be taken unless interest is heightened in the near future.

If the cadet corps is disbanded it will be the first break in cadet organization in the Collegiate in many years. There was a break for a year during World War II, but with that exception there has been a corps at the institution since 1914, or before World War I.

Ditching Crews Near Finish Of Year's Work

"Things are gradually falling into place . . . there is the end of the year's program" said City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull referring to the Public Works department's activities.

The ditching crews are finishing the clean-up of their year's work and the department will appreciate knowing if any citizen has any minor improvements to suggest to the ditching operation over this year, stated Mr. Turnbull. Any citizen concerned should advise the Public Works people now, so that attention to that action may be taken.

The ditching work on Valley-view Crescent has been completed and the asphalt crew has been carrying out general patching about the city and has been working on the re-instatement of the Church St. job. The asphalt crew has been scarfing on extension of culverts on Highway No. 2 (west), which work is being paid for by the Ontario Department of Highways. It is hoped that, following this work, extra stone will be provided on the shoulders of this highway in order to widen it slightly.

All of the department's winter equipment has now been readied for service, and the mechanical section is now employed on maintenance work.

The sign crew is completing four-way Stop signs to be placed at the intersections of Bridge East and Bleecker and Victoria Avenue and Bleecker, as approved by the traffic committee.

The sidewalk on Herchimer has been removed and Farley is now completed.

Blitz on Slums Would Condemn Many Homes

TORONTO (CP) — Building commissioner Frank Wellwood said today if war is conducted on Toronto's slums thousands of homes will be condemned.

It would take two years to make a complete inspection of slums and sub-standard buildings and his staff would have to be increased substantially to do the job.

Mr. Wellwood was commenting on an order Thursday from Controller Allan Lamport that he send his best inspector to investigate a slum area at east of Funston Avenue and Williamson Place. She said building inspector Jack must have been going through the district "with blinkers on them."

City council will decide on a policy next week when the board of control committee committee deals with a brief from the social planning council calling for an all-out inspection system.

ABANDONS BABY

TORONTO (CP) — Police are searching for a mother who abandoned a three-week, blond, two-year-old girl at a private day care centre here Tuesday. The mother, described as 25 to 28 years old, left the child and disappeared before the supervisor could get her name and phone number.

Trenton Mayor Burtt Likely to Seek Another Term

TRENTON — "To run or not to run, that is the question," is the problem that confronts which there are very few clear-cut answers as applied to Trenton's political scene at the moment.

There seems to be every possibility that Mayor Ross Burtt will again be asked to run. James MacDonald, who just one year ago was second in the people's choice for mayor, is seriously thinking of again offering his services to the people of Trenton, and Councillor Lloyd Vance stated he will not run for mayor if no one else opposes Mr Burtt as he feels it is "time for a change."

Councillor Wesse will definitely run for council again if the mayoralty is contested.

A newcomer to the field is Dr. "Nick" Fraser, has made an announcement of his candidacy for council. Dr. Fraser is past president of the Kiwanis Club of this town, and is prominent chairman on the Community Garden Committee.

Edward Brown who sat on Trenton council last season, will again be a candidate. He is the maleficence chairman of the Cardinal Committee and is also an active Kiwanian.

Councillor Vagn Lange will seek a fifth term of office. His interest in sound progressive administration and capital budgeting is well known.

Charles Hilton, who was defeated at the 1938 council, will throw his hat into the ring for council again in the forthcoming election.

Clifford Baker, the present chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, will again offer his services as capital budgeting is well known.

There will be four seats open on the Board of Education. These seats are presently held by Mrs. Frank Hubbs, Mrs. S. Ketcheson and Colin Crew. Finishing out the unexpired of a two-year term will be Mrs. R. Bedford, R. Barlow and Paul Hall.

Nomination Day, November 27th, will bring out many other contestants for positions on the various municipal bodies.

'The Rainmaker' Proves More Than Just Entertaining Show

TRENTON—Last night's presentation of the Trenton Drama Group, "The Rainmaker," deviated from the "drawing-room" drama of the past with which the group has become associated in the past. The play by N. Richard Nash, was advertised as a romantic comedy, but the elements of stark realism in the play, and the application of the "Rainmaker's" philosophy of life, "dream to make your dreams come true" lifted it out of the general category of a soon-forgotten evening's entertainment for the audience, at Trenton High School.

The locale of the play was "somewhere in the West," during a hot, dry summer. The story, ably played by Jim Skinner, is portrayed as a middle-aged ranch owner. His eldest son, Noah, (Doig. Ingle) manages the ranch and the other members of the family with a realistic approach bordering almost on fanaticism. Jim Curry (Ian Darling) is dominated by his mother (Jean Hamilton) and lows his naturally optimistic nature full rein, in spite of Noah's disapproval.

Audrey Rowlands, as Lizzie Curry, was very appealing for the age when a woman loses all hope of being anything but "an old maid." She gives an intimate glimpse into the stifled emotions of a plain woman, trying to conceal her longings for a normal married life.

Harry Cashman as "File," the sheriff's deputy, gives a revealing performance as a dull, lustoned, lonely man, afraid to reveal his true feelings for Lizzie, and Stan Hall as the friendly, sincerely, tries unsuccessfully to bring a little happiness into his deputy's life.

Into this drab little circle of unfulfilled love strode a dynamic comes the Rainmaker (Harry Mulhall). His ability to sense needed rain and save the crops and cattle, is caught up by Mr. Curry and Jimmy, Noah is a harder nut to crack and Lizzie is beyond the help of any dream. Finally, in a brief love sequence with a fascinating Starbuck, the Rainmaker, Lizzie comes to realize that she is a woman and that to fulfill her hidden desires, she must dream and put full sway to her pent up emotions.

The play ends on a happy note with File admitting that he needs Lizzie's love; Lizzie realizing that life with him would be basically happier than with the sparkling Starbuck; Mr. Curry with Jazzie's happiness, and the advent of rain; Jimmy, determined to follow his own best instincts against Noah's benediction, and Noah bowing to the inevitable. Starbuck, still optimistic, takes off one more load of wood on the sheriff and File, for the next area where his peculiar talent for producing miracles can be utilized.

Miss Rowlands again demonstrated her ability by blending the footlights, and Harry Mulhall is at his histrionic best.

Members of the production team for this excellent presentation are: stage manager, Anne Skinner; settings, Eric Christie; lighting, Les Glover; Jim Skinner; decor, Wynne Mitchell; lighting, Doug Ingle; Miss Bobby; costumes, Ellen Glover, Sylvia Wright; make-up, Joan Hamilton; Jean Hamilton, Ruby Price, Sylvia Wright, Ellen Glover; posters, Peter Jarvis; house manager, Eileen Campey; publicity, Audrey Rowlands; by; Jim Agnew; business manager, Jim Skinner.

The play was produced and directed by Jim Alexander, assisted by Marjorie Oakes.

The Trenton Drama Group is anxious to enroll new members. Details of a course for beginners which will be started early in the New Year will be published at a later date.

"The Rainmaker" will be presented tonight and tomorrow night also.

Resident Objects to Site Of Home for Senior Citizens

TRENTON — The Trenton and Suburban Planning Board met in the municipal building on Wednesday night, when at the meeting were the chairman of the board, Dr. W. J. McDonald, O. W. Larry, E. C. Alderney, A. Hoover, Mrs. Kingston, J. MacDonald and H. Campbell.

Mr. Larry gave a brief report of a planning board conference he had recently attended in Kingston, where he had given other delegates a history of planning in Trenton.

A letter was read from S. O. Graham objecting to the proposed site of the home for senior citizens. Mr. Graham said he thought the property value would lower the value of property in the area.

The proposal by the Canadian Pacific Railways to have the land adjacent to the building on the North Byron Street area, which is presently used as residential, re-zoned to industrial, was the subject of prolonged discussion. It was decided that a letter should be written to the department of planning and development, which has announced tentative plans for a development in this area, similar to the Champlain Heights development, asking if the re-zoning would interfere with its plans.

Miss M. Gothard had written to the board asking that the portion of Bridge East, between Cedar and Ferry Streets be zoned for industrial land, and that a study be made of the whole area between Bridge East and Ferry St. for the same purpose. Miss Gothard pointed out that industry could not grow in the immediate vicinity of this area, and that heavy trucks passed over Ontario St. continuously.

WILL LEAVE TOWN

Mr. Larry remarked that through the course of time, much of this industry would undoubtedly be removed from this area. New industries would seek other, more desirable sites. Mr. Larry added that if the older factory buildings on the west side of Ontario Street were torn down at some future date, residents on the east side of the street would be provided with a good view of the river.

Mr. Sutherland said that if he were in the newspaper business, he would take a poll of householders in the area, and ask how they would like the land zoned.

It was decided that Mr. Larry would write to Miss Gothard and inform her that, after a careful review of the factors involved, the board was unable to leave the land zoned as residential in the area, provided that a close watch would be kept on future developments in the area.

Dr. McDonald mentioned the fact that Mr. Alderney would be leaving Trenton at the end of the month and expressed his regret that he would be losing an asset to the planning board of Trenton.

Mr. Larry suggested that the board recommend to council that further annexation should be carried out to provide residential land for future growth within the boundaries of the corporation.

The next meeting of the board will be held on December 2nd. Several zoning problems will be discussed at this meeting.

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market was higher today during moderately heavy trading.

The 11 a.m. volume of 518,000 shares was below Thursday's 521,000 shares at the same time.

Kirkland Lake Company was the biggest industrial winner, jumping one point at 6¾. Toronto Dominion Bank gained one point at 39¾.

Gunnar led uranium with a 15-point gain at 10½. Consolidated Denison was off ¼ at 10. Nasco Algom lost ¼ at 11¼.

Among the lower priced issues, New Mylamaque was again trading actively.

Late-afternoon selling sent the market into a decline Thursday amid the heaviest trading since Nov. 8.

Industrials were the only index winners.

Weekend Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) — Trading on steers was uneven at the Ontario Public stockyards this week with the comparatively light numbers of good and choice steers clearing fairly actively at firm prices.

Lower grades of slaughter steers and heifers sold slowly at steady prices while heifers and cows traded actively at prices fairly cents to $1 higher.

Bull prices were firm to 50 cents per hundredweight higher with receipts adequate for a steady prices on a season demand. Veal calves were strong to 50 cents per hundredweight higher with very rough. Heavy calves met an improved demand and hog, sheep and lamb prices remained generally unchanged.

Cattle receipts were 1,900 head less than the corresponding week of 1,400 head from the same week in 1958. Western stock calf receipts were heavy at 1,266 head whereas the cattle receipts were only half of those of last week at 640 head. One load of slaughter cattle was shipped to eastern Canadian slaughterers and there were no exports reported to the United States.

Slaughter cattle; choice steers 26-26.50 with one load at 27.15; good 25-26; medium 23-24; cows mon 19-20; good heifers 23-25 with a few choice to 26; medium 19-21; common 15-18; choice fed yearlings 27-28; good 25-27; good cows 14.50 with sales to 15; common 13-14; common 13-13; canners and cutters 9-11; good heavy bologna bulls mostly 17-17.50 with odd tops at 18; common and medium light bulls 14-16.50.

Replacement cattle: good lightweight stockers mostly 23-25 with a few picked loads selling at a premium; good stock calves 24-25; plain stock calves and heifers 21; common and medium 17-20; hundredweight.

Calves: good vealers 30-32 with choice to a top of 34.50; medium 24-29; commons 20-24; boners 19-20; heavy, fat, rough calves 18-23.

Hogs: Grade A hogs 23.85; grade two 24 lights 18; slags 15 on a dressed weight basis.

Of four Honor Certificates awarded by the Ontario Division of the Navy League of Canada, two were presented to Belleville residents at the meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Navy League yesterday evening. Shown above are, left to right: Lt. J.C. Donovan, RCSCC commanding officer of the local Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte"; Mr. Ross Silver, current president of the local Navy League branch and a recipient of an Honor Certificate; Capt. John Watson, president-elect of the local branch, who presented the certificates; Dr. J. R. Guthridge, also receiving a certificate, and an honorary member of the local branch, and Cmd. Off (CB) A. E. Hill, CD, RCN, assistant area commander from HMCS York, Toronto.

Bay of Quinte Radio Engineers Meet Here

On Wednesday evening the November meeting of the Bay of Quinte section of the Institute of Radio Engineers, was held in Belleville.

The guest speaker was Mr. A. G. Carter, section engineer of the Co-ordinated Drive Division of the Canada Packers Limited Co, Ltd., Hamilton. His address was entitled "Magnetic Amplifiers" in which the speaker described the theory and application of these controllable saturable reactors. He also gave a demonstration on the function-ing of these devices which are used extensively for control purposes in industrial applications.

Through the courtesy of the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada, an interesting color film entitled "The Dew Line Story" was shown by Mr. W. Flanigan.

Hopes Dimmer For Settlement Of Steel Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Hopes for a settlement in the national steel dispute were dimmer today after last minute bargaining sessions between the newest proposal of the American steel industry.

R. Conrad Cooper, chief industry negotiator, disclosed the new offer Thursday. He said it was a "fair offer to do what can be done and still keep within non-inflationary bounds in the cost of steel production."

USW President David J. McDonald said the offer was just a rearrangement of the same old package offered by the industry on Oct. 17.

The new offer was submitted to the union Nov. 18 during secret negotiations between both sides.

Had the proposal been accepted, said Cooper, it would have meant a 30-cents-an-hour package over the three-year period. He added that the new offer also tempered industry demands for more say over working conditions.

McDonald disagreed, claiming that the proposal would mean a gain of only 24 cents an hour over the three-year period, and "the minor changes in the work rules issue are a stay of sentence in the same old attempt to deprive steel workers of hard-won gains in collective bargaining."

Meanwhile, the steel workers are back on the job under the Taft-Hartley law injunction invoked Nov. 7. They are earning an average hourly wage of $2.33 under terms of their old contract.

Two Members Given Highest Award of Navy League For Work With Sea Cadet Corps

Two Belleville citizens received the highest award of the Navy League of Canada yesterday evening at the annual meeting of the Navy League in Belleville. Honor certificates were presented to Dr. J. R. Guthridge and Mr. Ross Silver in recognition of many years of devoted service to the cause of the Navy League, and in Sea Cadet work in particular, by Captain John Watson, president-elect of the local branch. These certificates were two of four conferred by the Navy League of Canada, Ontario Division, at their recent annual meeting in Toronto.

Both gentlemen expressed mutual feeling that it is the work of many people in both the local Navy League and Sea Cadet activities which brought this honor to them and accepted the honor certificates in contribute to the many rather than to them as individuals. Mr. Silver, current president of the local Navy League, a United States legal agency, said that he felt that the great number of boys, who had been in the local Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte" and who gained something through the training they had received in the Corps were truly responsible for this honor.

Also present at the meeting last night at the Sea Cadet barracks, Bell Island, Cmd. Off. (CB) A. E. Hill, CD. RCN, assistant area officer from HMCS York, Toronto. Speaking to those present the naval officer stated he felt much progress had been made in the condition of the local Sea Cadet Corps in the past year. Although the strength of the corps was not large, he felt that the officer complement had been greatly improved and that, together with the new old age package offered by the industry on Oct. 17.

The new offer was submitted to the union Nov. 18 during secret negotiations between both sides.

Had the proposal been accepted, said Cooper, it would have meant a 30-cents-an-hour package over the three-year period. He added that the new offer also tempered industry demands for more say over working conditions.

to the local Navy League branch and the Ladies' Auxiliary. He pointed out that in many instances the most active members of the Ladies' Auxiliaries and Navy League branches were parents, whose son had been in the Sea Cadets a number of years ago and the parents had maintained their interest in Sea Cadet work after their boys had left the corps.

Lt. J. Donovan, RCSCC, gave a report on the present status of the local corps "Quinte". The resignation of Lt. Wm. McConnell as master to carry out his flight school had been accepted. He is to be replaced by Mr. D. Fluck, who has been serving as a civilian instructor. The activity of the "Quinte" cadets in the Corps' new sports program and in citizenship lectures has proven to be a great asset to the corps' program, stated Lt. Donovan. The reverend Father William McGee has taken charge of the sports program and the Reverend Masilah is giving lectures in citizenship. The commanding officer of the "Quinte" expressed his hope that the new program for the corps and the interest of the officers and several others outside of the corps' committee would result in the corps continuing to grow.

Stirling Lodge, chairman of the properties committee advised the meeting that a weakened beam below the main hall had been strengthened. Lt. A. Clare, RCSCC, executive officer of the "Quinte" advised those present that the barracks had had a thorough cleaning and that chemical treatment had been given the main deck to lift out the dirt. It was also reported that the Navy League, Ontario division, was prepared to allow the local branch to take care of its own accounting and financing and would lend assistance in facilitating this move when requested.

EXECUTIVE ELECTED

The executive for the coming year was elected by Capt. John Watson, who has had over 40 years experience with Navy League and Sea Cadet work, was the unanimous choice for president. Also elected by acclamation were William Judge as vice president; A. O. Pinkney as secretary; John Overholt as treasurer; Ross Boyce as chairman of the Corps Committee, and R. McInroy as chairman of the property committee to be assisted by Mr. Judge.

A number of honorary members were elected as well: Dr. J. R. Guthridge, Abe Mercer, Stricken with a heart attack while out hunting deer at Lake township hunting camp, George Alexander Gordon, 57, of Madoc, died suddenly Thursday.

Mr. Gordon, well known in the Madoc district for his lumbering activities, was hunting with six other men and was watching a runway about a quarter of a mile from the camp when he was stricken suddenly. His body was found at noon yesterday on the runway by another hunter, Beryl Carman of Eldorado. Coroner Dr. G. R. Beatty of Madoc attributed death to a coronary thrombosis.

Native of the Eldorado district Mr. Gordon operated several sawmills in the area and until a few years ago also operated a farm north of Eldorado.

He was a member of Eldorado United Church and originally belonged to Madoc Lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 48, Madoc Chapter No. 181 R.A.M. and L.O.L. No. 317 at Eldorado. He was an honorary member of Madoc Legion No. 363.

He is survived by his wife, the former Grace Janet Andrews; two sisters, Mrs. Phoebe Gilday of Calgary, Alta., and Mrs. F. Jenny Shaw of Eldorado, and two brothers Jack Reeds and Jim Reeves, both of Oakland, California.

W. H. Morton, Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Miss Josephine Tirkell, J. H. Vanover, Art Young and Col. D. H. Wills.

Also present at the meeting were members of the Harbor Commission, Harry Rollins and Harbormaster Mac Smith. Mr. Rollins expressed the appreciation of the commission at being invited and commended the group for the Sea Cadet Corps and the assistance which they had in Harbor Commission in patrolling the harbor during the boating reason.

Unemployment Insurance Facts

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question. We will be glad to obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Following are some questions with answers which may be of interest to you.

Q. I have just received a letter saying that a statement I had made about having a dependent was not correct. The letter said I was disqualified to the extent of $28, and it mentioned Section 65 of the Unemployment Insurance Act. I got a letter before that asking me to pay back the $28 which I was not entitled to and I have already arranged to do this. Why did I get this second letter?

A. The first letter was about the overpayment and it required that you make arrangements at once to begin paying back that amount. The second letter concerned a further disqualification imposed as a penalty for having made a statement which did not agree with facts on record. Your case happened to be one where the prescribed penalty is a dollar for each dollar of the overpayment. You were not asked to pay this penalty, which is imposed in addition to the amount of the overpayment. The Commission will collect it by withholding future benefits to which you would otherwise be entitled; these will be withheld until the total amount held back reaches $28, the amount of your penalty. When that happens the penalty can be paid.

Q. My benefits are being held back to pay a penalty under Section 65. I am not working. I have been told I should continue to report at the local UIC office each week. Why should I do this, when I am not getting my benefits?

A. Unless you complete the usual report form for a week in which you were out of work, the benefit amount for that week cannot be deducted from your penalty. You would then have been without either work or benefit, and you would still owe the same amount of penalty.

Q. I drew regular benefits last winter. I had thirty-four weeks, and I should have had one additional week for my seasonal benefits. Do I need more weeks to be entitled to my seasonal benefits this winter?

A. You may qualify for seasonal benefit this winter only if you have 30 contributions during March 29, 1959, or if your regular benefit period ended after May 17, 1959.

Q. I started working on March 29, 1959, and my first unemployment insurance book on July 26. I got 15 stamps altogether for the period March 29 to July 30 which I paid for? My employer says he will pay the rest of them.

A. If your employer made you pay for your share of contributions by deducting your share from your pay between March 29 and July 30, your employer must pay the full share. Employer and employee shares of contributions for the insurable week you did not work between those dates.

Q. I would like to know whether I can get my unemployment insurance here. I have a truck and I cannot drive it. I therefore have to hire a truck driver and act as his helper.

A. A person who owns and operates a truck is not engaged in insurable employment even though he does not drive the truck. You are therefore not entitled to unemployment insurance benefits.

Q. I do housework and I am paid by the week. Would I be entitled to insurance benefits?

A. Housework in a private home is not insurable employment. You cannot pay unemployment insurance contributions for such work and therefore you could not qualify for benefit by reason of having worked in this kind of employment.

'Do It Now' Plan Outlined To Kinsmen Club

The operations of the National Employment Office here, were explained to a meeting of the Kinsmen Club this week by Cecil Bisaer, head of the local office.

He told members that the office is currently engaged in the "Do It Now" campaign to encourage the winter work program, urging householders to have painting, refinishing or alteration jobs to their homes done now when men and materials are available.

Mr. Bisaer told members if the employer and employment office work together, a great deal of unemployment during the winter.

Mr. Bisaer was introduced by Kinsman Don Brown and thanked by Kindman Bob Wood.

Kinsman Cecil Bisaer, Colebourne, Cleo Colling, Gardner Dutt, Stan Fraser, Guild Hurst, Elmer (Buster) LaBarr, Orliff Lloyd, Stuart Martin, Harry Mullins and Jim Wilbur were made honorary members of the club in a fitting ceremony.

Drove as Licence Was Suspended, Is Given Month

A Belleville youth, Howard Richard Cook, was sentenced to one month in jail today by Magistrate T. Y. Wills on a charge of driving while his driver's licence was under suspension.

Cook was also fined $50 and costs or ten days in jail, once current with his one month's sentence.

Dr. Whitton on Education

Everybody must agree that Dr. Charlotte Whitton is an interesting talker.

There will not be the same unanimity as to whether she always makes sense.

Dr. Whitton told the district meeting of the Secondary School Teachers' Federation of Ontario here on Saturday that "for nearly thirty years the child has really been in control of the choice of curriculum." If this were true, without reservation, it would be a deplorable state of affairs. But the control which the child exercises is strictly limited, the choice is not a free one but between alternatives selected by experts. Surely it is permissible to doubt that providing this limited choice is necessarily best.

It is, of course, also permissible to consider that even this narrow range of choice is undesirable and Dr. Whitton made it plain that she, in fact, holds such a belief. She complained of students "dropping subjects and courses by disinclination for the very practices that meant discipline." What other result a situation can occur in true, as a perusal of the courses taken at some U.S. schools will make evident. That it has occurred in Canadian schools, though, is once again open to doubt. The point at issue here, perhaps, is whether discipline, for discipline's sake and only for discipline's sake, is advisable. Should a student be forced to attempt to learn something for which he or she has neither taste nor talent, on the grounds that the mental effort and anguish involved is good discipline? Or, in this day in which specialization, from much or new, deplore it in theory, is essential in practice, should the student be permitted to throw all his energies and efforts into that particular field of knowledge for which he is best equipped? There will be no unanimity of opinion here, no matter how persistently Dr. Whitton may talk.

We feel sure that Dr. Whitton would protest that she has no objections to a student throwing all his energies into any course, but that many display no energy whatever. The answer of her opponents is that the curriculum, as it is, is designed to provide energetic students with freedom of choice without at the same time providing the same freedom of choice for the loafers, for until such freedom of choice is offered it is impossible to tell with any certitude just who is energetic and who is a loafer.

All of us will have sympathy with Dr. Whitton's suggestion that those students who cannot or will not benefit from secondary school education should be forced out of school. But here, too, one needs to pause. Once started, the process could be carried too far.

It is interesting to note that on the same day on which Dr. Whitton was urging the discharge from school of unsatisfactory students, over at Trenton, V. P. Carswell, the supervising principal of Trenton public schools, was emphasizing the fact that graduates of Marmora, a public school the great difficulties which those without secondary school education experience in getting and holding jobs. It would be easy for those of Dr. Whitton's way of thinking to urge that students ousted from secondary school receive some other type of training, but the plain fact is that no adequate system for such training exists or, as far as we can discern, is likely to be established. Those expelled from school will just be thrown on the labor market, already overcrowded with unskilled men and women.

As for Dr. Whitton's statement that a large number of those attending secondary schools are wasting their own and the community's resources, we suspect that this is inevitable and that, far from showing a defect in the system, it indicates it is probably working fairly well. If we want to grow a good crop of carrots, we sow the seed thickly and then cull the weaklings. Dr. Whitton's supporters will retort that this is precisely what she is doing. But the student who has reached secondary school level is like a little carrot which has just poked its head through the soil. As with carrots, so with students, they should be allowed a little time to show how fast they can grow when exposed to the light before being hastily plucked. The dropout rate in the higher grades of secondary schools already high enough to satisfy any reasonable person, though it may well be that in too many instances the wrong students are quitting.

If World Were a Town

By Henry Smith, Leader In "Presbyterian Life".

If in our imagination we might compress the total population of the world, how many than two and a half billion people, there would be a community of 1,000 persons living in a single town, the following is a picture of the contrasts you would then vividly see.

Sixty persons would represent the United States population; the rest, the 940 in the world would be represented by 940 persons. The 60 Americans would be receiving half of the total income of the entire community; the 940 other persons would share the remaining half.

Of the Americans in the town, 26 would be members of Christian churches, and 34 would not in the town as a whole, about 330, people would be classified as Christians, and 670 would not be classified. Less than 100 in the whole community would be Protestant Christians, while more than 330 would be Roman Catholics. At least 80 people in the town would be believing Jews or Protestants, and 370 others would be under Communist domination.

Classified as to skin color, 300 people would be white and 697 would be classified as "non-white." The 60 Americans would have a life expectancy of 70 years; all the other 940 would average only 30 years.

The 60 Americans would have 60 times the amount of possessions per person as all the rest of the people. On an average, they eat 72 percent above the maximum food requirements. Because of the cost of storing their surplus food, they could actually save money by giving away one-fifth of their food; but many would regard that as the dangerous giveaway program of soft headed "do gooders."

Of the community's total supply of electric power, the 60 Americans would have 13 times as much as all the rest; 22 times as much coal; 11 times as much oil and gasoline; 50 times as much steel, and 30 times as much in general equipment of all kinds. Of the 60 Americans, the highest income groups would be better off than the average in much of the rest of the town. With the wealth of perhaps 200 persons representing modern Europe and a few favored classes in other areas such as South America, South Africa and Australia, and a few wealthy Japanese, literally most of the non-American people in the imaginary town of 1,000 community would be ignorant, poor, and illiterate. Half of them would be unable to read or write.

Moreover, half of the people in this community would never have heard of Jesus Christ, or what He taught, and for what He lived and died. Still another half would have heard but Karl Marx, Nietzsche, Mohammed, Christian in Khrushchev and other Communist leaders.

In view of these facts, it is interesting to contemplate that the average Christian American family would be indirectly (through taxes) spending at least $850 each year for military defence and less than $6 for Christian missions. Christian faith with the rest of the people of the community.

Strictly Personal
It Is Not A Question of Right Answers

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Greatness does not consist so much in finding the right answers as in asking the right questions. For there are no final answers, and all great scientific and intellectual ideas have been "wrong" by time.

It is only this while listening to an argument about the merits of Freud's discoveries. One side quotes him as the last word in gospel truth — and, indeed, many persons have become the new gospel for many persons.

The other side argued that the bulk of Freud's theories is outdated and that some have already been disproved. It is plain that in years since his death, Both sides seemed to think that "wrong" meant "to be discarded" as the true test of his place in history. But his job is something more, human endeavor. Consider Newton, who was perhaps the greatest scientific mind in the world. Virtually everything that Newton propounded and believed is now considered wrong, or outdated, by modern science. Yet his great work is not "outdated" for he brought a new and brilliant light to bear on the field of physics and mechanics.

Euclid remains the father of geometry, and one of the most luminous names in mathematics has been bought by the discovery that non-Euclidean geometries more closely resemble the shape of space. In fact, it was not until Euclid had been amended by modern geometers — or at least Einstein was able to work out his theory of relativity.

Darwin is a more recent case in example. Evolutionary doctrine today goes beyond him in some basic respects from his original theories — or at least it has. But his stature remains unchallenged, even though his doctrines have been partially modified.

The same is true with Freud. Some of his answers were wrong, and he himself changed his position during his lifetime. But indeed, he was much more modest about his theories — at least by the case — and did not claim to have the final answers to human psychology.

What remains of towering value in the new world for the world with for insight into the hidden areas of the personality, for a subject-matter of a whole world of vast dimensions, by asking the right questions, by challenging the accepted beliefs of his time, by exciting the imagination of the curiosity and obstinacy of the 19th century medical science.

It is childish and wasteful to argue the "wrongness" or "rightness" of his views. Instead of that is valuable, and discarding what is not.

Canadian PLACE NAMES

PENTICTON, B.C.

Set between two of the largest freshwater lakes in the interior of British Columbia, Penticton takes its name from an Indian term meaning "to camp." Before the white man came, it was known to the red men as Pskaquntaux, or Pen-tik-ton, which was shortened to the present name of Penticton, the word meaning "the ideal meeting place" gathering of those who come from all ways."

CREATIVE HANDS

Beautiful things are always significant. This is true of the human hand. What a variety of things are associated with it! What a world of beauty it has created! Nobody pays attention when we say that a thing is hand made. This means that it was made by someone who put their heart, as well as their hands, into the product.

I shall never forget the wonderful hands of George Grey Barnard, the American sculptor. He had a wonderfully rich head, when he talked, his hands would seem to sculpture in the very air. His talk and hands fascinated me. He was a great artist. His marble "The Refugee" is one of the most beautiful marble figures I have ever seen. No one has done a greater Lincoln (and Barnard did a number of them) than his heroic one in Lyle Park, Cincinnati, Ohio, stands alone among a number of great ones. The great feet and hands of this figure are a great heart.

I cannot divorce the patient hands from my wonderful rugs and tapestries. I understand that they reflect his inner visions, his rare rugs of the East. They never could have proved to be such masterpieces if he had not made the creators gave their lives and souls to the creation of them.

Think of the masterpieces that have enriched the world — the creation of those who worshipped at the altar of beauty. Creative hands may be witnessed from endless sources. And the world is better that it is so. How wonderful that people can have behind them so much of themselves! Our cue to greatness is unmistakable.

Investigation of features in connection with the training of Canada's Overseas Force has elicited information that will be of use as well equipped as the British Army when it takes the field. Canadian machine gunners will be delivered before April, 1921, the date predicted for first delivery in the contract. The troops now have all the machine guns needed for training purposes. Excellent ration are being provided, prepared by experienced cooks and many show gains in weight after a short period in uniform. Experiments are being made with an intelligence test. In ordering Highland regiments to use ballia dress instead of the kilt the Canadian authorities were following the lead of the British. Canada is the British army; the kilt could be worn on Mess. Some Highland enthusiasts might be worn with the battle dress but the kilt was unsuitable for conditions in the theatre of war. Canadian troops overseas will be identified by a metal shoulder patch bearing the word "Canada" in white letters.

One hundred and sixteen years is a long period of time to look back but many communities have young country like Canada so far removed from present parents who with undaunted courage carved out of the wilderness a happy, prosperous state" said the Rev. Dr. F. Scott Mackenzie, Principal of Presbyterian College in Montreal in addressing a capacity congregation at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The occasion was the 116th anniversary of the founding of the church in this community. The Rev. W. J. Walker, pastor, welcomed the distinguished visitor. Flowers placed in the pulpit by the church by Miss Irvine, in memory of her brother, Alexander Irvine several years was a devoted worker in the congregation and a beautiful touch to the occasion.

Letter To The Editor

Objects to Request For Cash Donation

Editor,

Canada Intelligencer:

Within the past several days, the Home and Public Schools Association, Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School has seen fit to send home with pupils of the school a letter requesting a cash donation. The first paragraph says: "Due to the poor response for membership in the Home and School Association, it is necessary to appeal for a membership fee of fifty cents to all non-members. This money enables the Executive to send out monthly bulletins to members and the big project of providing a turkey banquet to Grade 13 graduates each spring."

We would like to register publicly a strong protest against this method of collecting money, even though the amount of money involved is small, it would be hurt too many people.

Surely the response to membership drives is poor, does that not mean that people are dissatisfied, or if they are not interested, is it fair to ask children to beg for money? Why may receive bulletins? The writer does not belong because he does not believe in organizations to serve no useful purpose whatever. Why not have dances for the principals or teachers whenever conditions make it necessary or agreed to a pupil's attitude at the school — good or bad.

If the "big project," as their letter states is to provide a meal for Grade 13 graduates, then perhaps they had best have their energies and talents in more constructive fields.

We refer to this action as a type of milk extraction because a student failing to bring back the cash intended is placed in a rather embarrassing position.

I wonder how many parents would like money given to a pupil to obtain at the school — good or bad.

What's the purpose, school-boy?

A DRINK BEFORE DIN NER IS NOT HARMFUL

"Dear Dr. Molner: As I am one of several children, I have a problem. When I am about to be a stranger evening I get a tired, dragged-out feeling and I've been using whisky in the house I usually have a highball. Sometimes I might even have another one."

"I never get 'tight' from it, but it seems to give me a little 'lift' while I bathe the children and get them in bed. I never touch whisky any other time, unless we go to a party, which is rare because it is so hard to find a baby-sitter.

"Now my husband accuses me of becoming an 'alcoholic.' Is this your opinion of me, too? My husband claims when you drink alone it is the beginning of an alcoholic. I certainly do not want to become one, because I have many children and husband's respect and love.

"He drinks any time he gets the urge, and sometimes comes in very late, just able to make it. My neighbor tells me she thinks he is jealous of me, that he wants to be the center of attention. He has always been a heavy drinker, but he never drinks at home when I am present. He claims he drinks because I do not drink with him. He has always been a heavy drinker, but he never drinks at home when I am present. He claims he drinks because I do not drink with him. He has always been a heavy drinker, but he never drinks at home when I am present. He claims he drinks because I do not drink with him.

"He phoned my mother and asked her to talk to me, that I was drinking and he understand the idea of it. To my mother, I am a nervous wreck and embarrassed. When my mother heard the whole story she told me to quit, that I was disgusted, and that if he took me out once in a while I should see something to look forward to, instead of my daily routine constantly, maybe I would not be drinking alone before dinner. I have asked my husband just to have a highball on the before supper, but he always refuses.

"I have been worrying myself sick. Am I an alcoholic? Should I stop having my highball before dinner? Am I entitled to that much relaxation?"

There's a frightful lot of misunderstanding about "drinking alone" and "drinking before dinner," it isn't the beginning in a case that is developing, much closer to the end.

There are, you know, countless numbers of true alcoholics who still aren't solitary drinkers. They drink in company, but are alcoholics just the same. Some become dependent on alcohol that they have to drink from early morning to late at night — and long into the night. Some try to hide it by drinking alone. Neither case resembles a highball at supper time when you are tired, bored and jangled.

Some people appear to live far away from themselves. So long as they can get something out of their system, they live in a kind of many conflicting needs and wishes that are going on and on way all the time. Therefore, if we cannot take that kind of drink-before-dinner we are immensely unhappy. But the type of person who is not like that is perfectly determined to get the most he can out of it for himself and to put the least into life is, in the first place, unpleasant, in the second place, unsuccessful, and in the third place reprehensible. He is a drain on the energy of the world or a woman, as is often the case. He has to be ministered unto, but to minister ... This was our Lord's motto, and it is a good one for us.

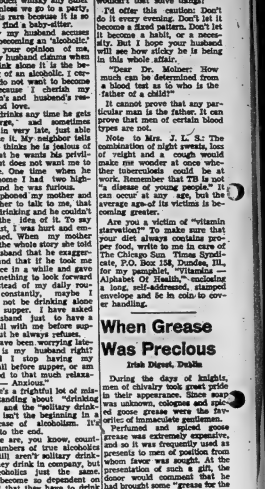
THINKING ABOUT SELF

Sooner or later we all get away from himself. So long as he is tied up to himself, he is fundamentally frustrated and unhappy. For we live in a world of many conflicting needs and we are constantly going in our way all the time. Therefore, if we cannot take that kind of drink-before-dinner we are immensely unhappy. But the type of person who is not like that is perfectly determined to get the most he can out of it for himself and to put the least into life is, in the first place, unpleasant, in the second place unsuccessful, and in the third place reprehensible. He is a drain on the energy of the world or a woman, as is often the case. He has to be ministered unto, but to minister ... This was our Lord's motto, and it is a good one for us.

When Grease Was Precious

Irish Digest, Dublin

During the days of knights, men of chivalry took great pride in their appearance. Cleanliness was unknown, colognes and spiced goose grease were signs of a man of immaculate gentlemen.



Perfumed and spiced goose grease was a valuable commodity and so it was frequently used as a substitute for money. Presents for whom favor was sought. At the presentation of such a gift, the lady would graciously smile and had brought some "grease for the pan."

By the 16th century, bribes had reached the present day levels of a more valuable value, but from this ancient custom we derive the common expression: "Greasing the palm".

Stan Midgley Skilfully Portrays Mountain Holiday at Collegiate

Last evening at the Collegiate auditorium, Stan Midgley, the "Mark Twain" of the camera, delighted his audience in his portrayal of a "California Holiday," by beautiful colored pictures and interesting narrative spiced at intervals with pleasing humor. This was the second travelogue in the seventh annual World Travel Adventure Series sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville.

Mr. Midgley who was introduced by Mr. George Tripp, vice-president of the club, began his bicycle trip on the seashore in the Redwood empire of Northern California with its towering trees, climbing ever upwards till months later, he wound up atop the highest rock in the United States.

There were wonderful sunsets; breath-taking towering mountain peaks; deep gorges, shimmering falls gliding down steep mountain sides; a river with rolling wheels of water, something unique in nature; scenes along the Salmon River; trout fishing; the Scott valley with its golden California poppies; calm wildernesses undisturbed by man, far from the beaten path where one may drink and drink in nature's loveliness; Mount Shasta with its white cap of snow; Shasta Dam and the lovely lake bearing its name; views from mountain tops where distant places, some more than 15 miles away, were brought near through telescopic lenses; the nerve-thrilling half dome; through the National Parks with their fauna and flowers; and then down, down into the Giant Forest of Sequoia Park; views of flowering dogwood, rose-colored azaleas; white Shasta daisies, and many scenes of golden October in all its haunting loveliness.

Along the way humorous episodes occurred, as the making of pancakes, and the dexterity with which they were flipped into the air and caught so deftly. One wonders whether Mr. Midgley's seven years in chemistry had anything to do with the airy lightness of the pancakes which circled so amicably, coming back to rest in their home setting.

This is but a brief review of the wonders displayed, which will ever remain a beauty spot among the pictures of memory. Those who failed to attend have missed a lot; but other travelogues are to come. A word to the wise is sufficient.

B.P.W. Club Sponsors Fine Talent Bazaar

The Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club held a successful talent bazaar on Monday evening in the banquet room of the Belmont restaurant. For the past few years the club featured a talent bazaar at one of its fall meetings but held it within its membership. This year the club decided to open the occasion to the public and it was generously supported.

Miss Mildred Hall, president, greeted the guests.

Mrs. Charlotte Strachan was general convener and Miss Joy Nichols acted as treasurer.

For the December meeting the club members have been invited to the president's home on Trent Road.

With civic elections at hand, the members were urged to exercise their franchise and vote.

PROCLAMATION

RETARDED CHILDREN'S WEEK

NOVEMBER 15th to 26th 1959

Whereas it has been established that mentally retarded children can be helped through special schooling and recreational, social and workshop programs and that there is a great need for research into the causes of mental retardation;

And, whereas public understanding will greatly contribute to easing the plight of some 3% of the population who are in some degree mentally retarded;

Now, therefore, I, as Mayor of the City of Belleville, support the Quinte Association for Retarded Children in its efforts to help our community's mentally retarded by declaring the period of November 15 to 26, 1959, as "Retarded Children's Week" in Belleville.

Gamma Mu Plans Square Dance

The first November meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. McDonald, Bridge Street East.

The president, Mrs. J. Pringle, conducted a short business meeting and welcomed two new pledges, Mrs. R. Sibbet and Mrs. R. Hoey, into the chapter. It was decided that the group would continue to assist the community as last year this Christmas.

Afterwards the members with their husbands attended the O'Keefe show at the Armouries. Refreshments were served in the mess.

The second meeting was held at the home of Mrs. W. J. McCormick, Dufferin Avenue, conducted by the vice - president, Mrs. Bruce Bishop, in the absence of the president. She welcomed a guest, Mrs. A. Hall, who has recently moved to the city.

Plans were made for a square dance hoedown later this month, to which the husbands are invited.

The program, "Love's Miracle in Marriage", was presented by Mrs. D. Boyce, Mrs. W. Cochrane and Mrs. C. McSherran.

Refreshments were served by the co-hostesses, Mrs. V. While and Mrs. R. Jeffrey.

H-S Council Hears Complete Report on Area C Conference

The November meeting of the Belleville and district Home and School Council was held Thursday evening at Prince Charles' School.

Mrs. R. Jones, president, welcomed members from 14 associations and from Shannonville, Tweed and Batawa.

Members were asked to note an executive meeting will be held at Corby Public Library on December 17th. The next general meeting will be at Prince Charles' School on January 21st.

AREA "C" CONFERENCE

A comprehensive report was given by Mrs. D. McDonald a delegate to the Area "C" conference in Cobourg. The topics were How Home and School Can Further Parent Education and Effective Meetings.

Associations were told of the great need for books in Africa. Children are pathetically eager to learn to read, but in most cases not even one book is available to start a school.

Harriet Stevens will be present at the next meeting to give details on this worthy project for underprivileged children.

The program was a symposium on "Program Planning," carrying further the course of study for association executives, planned to stimulate membership and to build better Home and School relations.

Mrs. R. Jones was panel moderator; Mrs. A. J. Fort took the part of a school principal, Mrs. J. Winstanley, president of a secondary school association, Mrs. E. Beatty, president of an elementary school association, Mrs. B. Stinson, parent of an elementary student and Mrs. G. Digby, parent of a secondary school student.

Each in turn expressed their views on the type of program they would like to see presented, as it related to them. The first subject, "Parent Education" was discussed and each panelist had a different idea on presentation as it related to elementary or secondary schools. Other subjects were: Citizenship; Health and Safety; Religion; School Standards and a shot-in-the-arm program to perk up lagging attendance.

The program should always include as many members as possible. This could be done by buzz sessions and discussion periods. The use of evaluation sheets for constructive criticism are a great help to program chairmen.

CAREFUL STUDY PROGRAMS

Good programs do not just happen; they are the result of careful study, preparation and presentation. Apply these tests to your program and see if the results satisfy you.

Do they observe the aims, objectives and policies? Are they adapted to the needs of the community? Do they lead to results? Are they arranged to allow time for essentials? Do they have variety? Do they promote study or discussion groups? Are the hospitality and courtesy committees active and effective? Are they of such a nature that members look forward to them?

Mr. H. D. Kerr of Batawa gave a resume of an excellent program at Quinte Secondary School this month, "World Literacy." Illiteracy is a major obstacle to world progress. Until all people become better educated in world affairs, the problems of international cooperation which now beset humanity, cannot be solved in any enduring way.

"We are urged to look beyond our own community and country to help others thus benefiting ourselves in the future."

Mr. B. F. Wheeler, citizenship chairman, had books and pamphlets for associations on films available at the library and National Film Board. These are available on all subjects to aid in program planning.

The social committee of Bayside school provided refreshments.

Mrs. G. Digby was the pianist.

Young Couple Feted With Gift Shower

2nd THURLOW — A large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Pocyulka in honor of their son, Alex, and his bride, who were married recently in Toronto.

Mr. Fred Mitchell called the meeting to order and after a few appropriate remarks of Alex's school days and congratulations, called on Mr. Ronald Atkins, who read the address. Signed on behalf of the community by Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, Mrs. Earl Grills, Mrs. Donald Mitchell, Mrs. Fred Mitchell and Mr. Ronald Atkins, in which a welcome was extended to Janet, and best wishes of all were expressed for their future happiness.

They were presented with a miscellaneous shower.

After unwrapping of the many gifts Alex and Janet made suitable replies, thanking all for the lovely and useful gifts.

Refreshments were served and a social time spent.

On Sunday they were at home to relatives and friends at the home of the bridegroom's parents when a reception was held in their honor.

WHAT WE MEAN BY CUSTOMER RELATIONS

IT'S THE WAY

- - we speak to the man who wants to buy only ten feet of lumber

St. Michael's PTA Hears: Fine Report

St. Michael's Parent-Teacher Association held its third meeting of the season Monday evening. Mr. Clarence Hoppe presided. A number of parents were present.

During the business session plans were discussed for the Christmas concert to be held in December in St. Michael's Academy auditorium.

Mr. Herb Brown, vice-president of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Parent-Teacher Associations, gave an interesting account of the executive meeting, which he recently attended in Kingston. He explained how the Archdiocesan Council was composed of 26 units of the surrounding districts. The Council acted as a liaison between the units and the Federation of C.P.T.A. associations.

Plans were discussed at the meeting for a safety patrol and a work shop to be held in Kingston. Mr. Hoppe hoped to get representatives from the Belleville C.P.T.A. units attending the work shop.

After the business meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. F. R. Ross and her committee.

Safety Rules Discussed at P.T.A. Meeting

The November meeting of St. Joseph's P.T.A. was opened with prayer by the spiritual director, the Reverend J. J. Buckley.

Mrs. Lloyd Ward was appointed chairman of the evening and announced that a turkey raffle had been arranged with Mr. Jack Doran in charge. All members were asked to give their full support.

Attendance prize was won by Mrs. Harry Bates and Mrs. Ward.

GUEST SPEAKER

Guest speaker was Sgt. Robson of the Belleville police department. His humorous, but pointed talk, gave his listeners a good idea of just how he puts across the importance of safety rules to the school children.

Sgt. Robson spoke from only one and a half hours in each classroom to instruct the students on safety measures, dwelling particularly on traffic hazards.

He stated that although he is strict regarding children's misdemeanors in safety rules, he has found that the adults give them a poor example to follow.

Sgt. Robson spoke first regarding automobiles and pedestrians. He covered this with information on the correct handling of bicycles, including proper signalling for turns, and essential equipment on bikes. He had numerous enlarged photographs to illustrate his talk and left several pamphlets for distribution.

This instructive lesson was followed by the film "Lucky You," which Belleville school children have been fortunate enough to see. It was usually enjoyed by members of the PTA.

APPRECIATION VOICED

In a few closing words Sgt. Robson expressed his appreciation for the co-operation he has received in Belleville from teachers and parents, and from the many families which have donated generously with equipment.

Sgt. Robson was thanked by Mrs. Terry Wheeler and the appreciation of the audience was in sincere expression of their appreciation.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served by Mrs. Belzne and her committee, supplied by the mothers of Miss Durkin's students.

Bridge St. United Church W.A. Yuletide Tea, Bazaar Successful

Christmas, with all its happiness and joyous re-unions just around the corner, was brought to mind Wednesday afternoon at the attractive Yuletide bazaar and tea held in the Sunday School rooms of Bridge Street United Church under the auspices of the Women's Association.

The Reverend Harry Jackson, pastor of the church, officially opened the bazaar with prayer, appreciative thanks for the fine work done by the W.A. and best wishes for its success.

The receptionists were Mrs. H. M. Davis, Mrs. R. F. Sherwin, wives of the pastors, and Mrs. W. Daley, president of the W.A., and the treasurers, Mrs. H. E. McMurray and Mrs. C. E. Meyers.

Tall gaily lighted Scotch pines lined the tea room, and massed green boughs and scarlet poinsettias the piano, fireplace and window ledges, while smaller trees stood sentinel on the door, forming a pretty forest-ground for the country store.

THINGS FOR SALE

The twin tea tables with their snow-white Madeira lace cloths and silver fittings, with tiny branched silver candelabra with frosty candles and holly, were particularly flanked the lovely centrepieces of white Shasta 'mums and holly, with their gleaming tapers and frosted sprays formed a delightful Yuletide atmosphere.

Each little quartet table had its white cloth centred by a crystal candle globe resting on balsam sprays mingled with holly, scarlet and gold-tinsel globes.

The tea room hostesses were Mrs. G. Massey and Mrs. J. B. Casey; Mrs. G. W. Bury and Mrs. A. E. Miles and Mrs. J. E. McArthur.

PRESIDING

Presiding at the silver services, Mrs. R. B. Morden and Mrs. Ralph Hall; Mrs. C. Hyde and Mrs. G. R. Lockin; Mrs. E. S. Fairman and Mrs. Ray Wert; Mrs. J. Ross Gray and Mrs. H. A. Parker, Mrs. F. R. Coyle, Miss Mary Sherman; Mrs. F. S. Deacon and Mrs. W. H. Finkle.

Those serving were Messdames R Wootton, A. May, P. Jones, D. Dennison, E. Leslie, J. Nelles, H. Bedard, L. Hall, D. Dickie, V. White, H. McCabe, H. J. Fuke, J. Andrews, J. Ireland, A. ing, "Remembrance Day," by Mrs. Lee; solo, "O God Our Help In Ages Past," by Mrs. Wannamaker. Mrs. Weese read "Courage for Living," accompanied with soft background music.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Farnsworth, guest speaker, chose as her theme, "In memory of our fallen heroes. Remembrance Day—at the going down of the sun and in the morning, we will remember them."

Mrs. Bellyman read "Crossing Of the Peat," and with the sing-situated in the adjoining S.S. rooms included the home booth which was gay with gaily-lands of red and green and red poinsettias. The delicious confections were most tempting with home, apple and pumpkin pies; cheese pie, and tasty buns and homemade bread; delicious cakes in layer style topped with rich boiled icing; medium date and orange loaves; chocolate loaf cakes; jellied chicken; baked apples; vegetable salads and tea biscuits. Convening these were Messdames H. C. Sidney; C. Morton; S. Denyer; S. M. Gilmour.

That drawing card at all bazaars, the "white elephant" booth, was eagerly sought after with intriguing and whimsy-have-you. There were pots of African violets; mixing bowls; powder and toilet articles; little salt and pepper sets depicting hen and rooster, and little dog; costume jewellery, pearl beads; tea cups and saucers; baby bibs; fancy handkerchiefs; purses; mitts; records; glove stretcher; baby suits and violet sachets; and many more. Mrs. E. W. Sutton, Mrs. K. Finder.

RIOT OF GAY COLORS

Gay flowers were a riot of gay colors and so pretty it was hard to select that special one for mother, wife, friend or sister. Pots of red and white poinsettias, yellows, pinks and greens and combinations of these; sweet apples; containers of honey; candied apples; marmalade; recipe books; pickles and Christmas stockings; aprons; fancy articles and treats and gifts. These, with the colorful and festive background of green pine cones completed a most pleasing picture. In charge of these was Dr. Elizabeth Scott.

MANY LOVELY ARTICLES

The fancy work contained many lovely articles; pretty sprays of pink apple blossoms and a pert rooster, beautiful satin rose-colored cushion top done in lattice work; pretty dressed dolls in green and yellow; stuffed Peter Rabbits and cuddly pussy cats; place mats woven with fringed edges in blue and white; filet crochet centrepiece; gay, warm pyjama suits; and some unusual toilet seat covers, quilted and centred with fluffy bouquets of flowers.

In charge here were Mrs. J. Perrott; Mrs. F. Johnson; Mrs. D. Sutton; Mrs. C. Miller.

The little candy booth, tucked away in the north east corner was quite pretty with its little Christmas tree over looking a quaint, old-fashioned. For little jars of nuts and bolts to while away the commercials by TV; delicious fudge and neatly arranged boxes of chocolates; maple cream; strawberries in sugar; and coconut chews. Mrs. H. Fuke and Mrs. J. G. Gordon convened.

A dainty Yuletide tea and gay bazaar bringing commendations to the conveners, the decorating committee, Mrs. H. M. Meyers, and to all who had assisted in its successful culmination.

Community N.R. Services Told At Recent Hospital Aux. Meeting

An outline of services provided by the Belleville Community Nursing Registry since its inception in 1943, was given by Mrs. Jay Campbell, director of that organization, at a recent meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

Mrs. Campbell explained that the Registry, originally established in the city 16 years ago to place registered private duty nurses, provides an important community service by centralizing calls between the public, the medical profession, the hospital and such organizations as the Victorian Order of Nurses, the Public Health Department, and the local unit of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

Other duties include filling emergency calls for ambulances, assisting in educating the public in health service, and placing of private nurses, where needed.

PRIVATE DUTY NURSES

The Registry has assigned private duty nurses to the Bancroft Outpost Hospital's staff during the summer relief, and private duty in Trenton Memorial Hospital, Picton and Tweed, and as far away as Bermuda.

The speaker also disclosed the Registry's placement service has assisted in locating nurses for local industries either on a permanent or temporary basis, for medical and social officers for the Home for the Aged, for summer camps, and for relief nursing in the Public Health Department.

COMMUNITY NURSING

Mrs. Campbell briefly outlined the history of Community Nursing Registries which were established in Ontario in 1940, under the direction of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario.

She said, prior to the establishment of a Nursing Registry in Belleville, private duty nurses placed their names on a board in McKeown's Drug Store. The call board was later placed beside the switch board in the General Hospital at the request of the hospital alumnae, but this work facilated too heavy a work load for hospital personnel.

The Registry was then established and a director, a registered nurse appointed on a 24 hour duty in her own home. Three years later an assistant director was appointed for four hours per day, but in 1949 this was increased to eight hours a day, she said.

FINANCIAL STRUGGLE

A non-profit organization, the Registry has been undergoing a continuous financial struggle since its establishment. At present it is financed by fees from the V.O.N. and C.A.R.R., principal users of the services; through nurses' membership fees, annual donations from the hospital board, proceeds from an annual tea, and educational programs for graduate nurses, and from a lately discovered annual bazaar and tea. The bazaar and tea is a joint effort of the Nursing Registry, the student nurses, the hospital alumnae, and the Quinte Chapter of the R.N.A.O. The proceeds are split four ways, she stated.

GRANTS RECEIVED

Between 1956 and 1952 the Registry received grants from city council and annual donations from the local medical association, but both these sources of income were discontinued this year, she said. In the past funds were raised by tag days, raffles and rummages sales, but these have been discontinued. Another former source of income, individual doctors' fees received between 1951 and 1954 for the Registrys' call service have also been discontinued since many of the doctors have switched to the new answering service, the speaker explained.

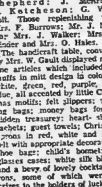
Curling Club Holds Pretty Yuletide Tea

Smiling hostess and round-the-rink convenors beamed their strategic positions at the Curling Club yesterday afternoon and hearty comradeship was the theme of the Christmas tea and display of attractive handicraft.

Receiving were the 1st vice-president, Mrs. Victor White, and Mrs. J. C. Houston.

The tea table was lovely in its unique setting of a double-tier of white net tablecloth over damask, edged with red pom-pom fringe, and appliqued with little evergreen trees, sparkling with silver sprays of red holly and green leaves, Christmas stockings, red bells and candy canes, all centred by an emulsite arrangement of white Shasta 'mums mingled with red carnations in a composite candelabra and silver bowl with all greenery.

Presiding at the silver tea services were: Mrs. R. Lanning; Mrs. William Gault and Mrs. J. Everett.



Those serving included, Messdames D. Sinclair, E. Bellefeuil; H. Ketcheson; G. Wansbrough, Miss Margaret Ketcheson; Mrs. F. Burrows; Mr. J. Walker; Mrs. J. Pinder and Mrs. D. Haley.

The handicraft table, conveyed by Mrs. Sinclair, displayed exquisite articles which included, as to mufts in mitt design in colors of white, forest, red, purple, navy blue, all accented by little Christmas motifs; gay fingertip towels; many bags; nurses' purses; the hidden treasury; basket charges; pin cushions; guest towels; Christmas aprons in red, white and green with appropriate decorations; fine bags; child's hornet; felt glasses cases; white silk blouses and a very lovely cocktail aprons, some of which were for prizes to the holders of lucky tickets.

During tea the guests enjoyed watching a curling game which was most interesting.

Entertaining tea bringing appreciative thanks to those who were instrumental in its formal opening.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Wagner Shea

THE LINGERING GUEST

How to speed the parting guest is a gracious (acitful manner is a social art that all hostesses must learn to cultivate. If each individual, when a guest, would make a point of leaving while he is still wanted, this situation would never arise. Perhaps the following tips are worth thinking about.

Particularly irritating are those guests who make a move to leave, but keep everybody standing, usually by the open front door, while they chatter on and on. We've all had this experience and, admit it, we may even have been the reluctantly departing guest! Remember, an anticlimax is always bad. Nothing dulls the enjoyment of a pleasant evening more than guests who hang on and on, and then seem unable to complete their farewell. When you are ready to leave a party , or any gathering for that matter, make your adieus graciously, and then follow Shakespeare's advice: "Stand not upon the order of your going, but go at once!"

Social calls should be of short duration. Never longer than a half hour. When calling upon a comparative stranger, fifteen minutes should be the limit. When you are invited to dinner, remember that you weren't asked to spend the night. It's all right to leave by ten o'clock on a week night. Very often you want desperately to leave, for you have to rise early the next morning for a heavy day, but you're afraid you'll seem ungracious. Just remember that your host and hostess may be wishing just as desperately that you'll go. When you're invited to a luncheon, remember the invitation was not for the entire afternoon; your hostess may have other plans. If you haven't. After a one o'clock luncheon, you should be on your way by two-thirty, or three, at the latest.

Let's go back for a moment to the guest who hangs on and on the open front door, wraps on ready to leave. Not only do the host and hostess become thoroughly chilled, but so does the house. How to get these guests through that open door? You might try this! Say, in your most gracious manner, "Wouldn't you like to come back to the living room and sit down and finish talking?" Of course you're taking a chance there, for your invitation might be accepted! But more often, I think, the guests will take the hint and go.

Naturally a hostess receives a certain satisfaction when a guest lingers on, for it means that he has enjoyed himself so much he can't bear to tear himself away. However, this satisfaction can be chilled if the guest overstays his welcome to the point where his frustrated hostess can only think, "Why doesn't he go home?" There's a knack in learning to leave while you are still invited.

Question: I have been asked to attend a dinner dance with a group of people. It is to take place in a night club in a large hotel. Dress (- to be a matter of choice, and I intend to wear a dressy afternoon gown. I cannot afford to buy an evening dress. Some of those attending are wearing evening clothes. Would a flower in my hair make me a little less conspicuous than a hat? — Miss A.D.Q.

Answer: If quite a number of those attending the party of which you speak will be in evening clothes, wearing flowers in your hair would be more appropriate than a hat. Wearing a hat would only call attention to the fact that you are in street clothes.

The Experts Say

Wait too Long Before Seeking Help in Marital Problems

By EDNA HAXELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Deciding when you need a marriage counsellor is like deciding whether to apply first aid or to call the doctor, says Violet Mumm.

"Most people wait too long before seeking help with marital problems, says Miss Mumm, director of case work for the Neighborhood Workers' Association in Toronto.

"If it's got to the stage where husband and wife haven't talked to each other for months, a bitterness develops that is hard to overcome."

If the situation is getting worse, or if these things become repetitive, then it's time to get advice."

STRESSES CO-OPERATION

The person that can't be helped she explained, is the one who wants his or her partner to change their ways. Case workers try to show such people that they must also adjust their own behavior, or learn to live with the situation.

"People do change for the better, but they are voluntary changes," she said. Most people find it difficult to make radical changes.

There is no such thing as an ideal marriage, in Miss Mumm' experience. "Some people are helped just by learning that many other married couples have problems which they have learned to handle.

"Successful marriage depends on the maturity of the people— the ability to be concerned with each other, not concerned only for one's self."

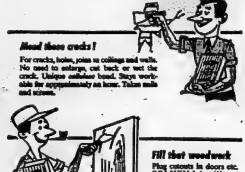
YOUNG MARRIAGES

Teen-age marriages can be successful, she says, if the couple mature enough to accept the practical side of marriage and not just consider it as an exciting adventure.

"They are still maturing. If their personalities change along the same lines the marriage will be fine, but if their interests are divergent then there will be trouble."

Most young people today approach marriage "determined to make a go of it," she said. Many of the people seeking advice are young couples "who are taking a responsible step in maintaining their marriage."

The most frequent problems brought to the counsellors are those dealing with the partnership, children, elderly relatives and emotional problems. Each month the eight centres in Toronto deal with between 275 and 300 families. Some of the centres have waiting lists.



Are the social workers depressed by their work with broken families? "Not a bit. We are continually impressed by the people who are coping with their problems and, of course, the large numbers who never need our service."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Eileen J. — The neighbors are talking about Grace.

Grace E. — I don't care. I am doing no wrong.

Eileen J. — My closest friend and I are two married women in our mid-30's. We each had a happy family life until Grace's husband became ill about a year and a half ago.

During that time Grace's husband has been in and out of the hospital for weeks at a time. She has been lonely and it has been a great strain on her. Her husband, unfortunately isn't a good patient. He has been demanding, cranky and unkind to her.

Recently Grace met a widower who has paid her a lot of attention. When her husband went to the hospital, Grace went out with him twice. All the neighbors are talking and I feel that Grace is making a big mistake.

Grace E. — I feel that at long as I do no wrong I have nothing to be ashamed of. This man has handled some of my husband's business problems while he has been ill. I don't know what I would have done without him.

This widower happens to be in his 30's — a bit too old for me. I look on him as a sort of father. He has always treated me in a perfectly gentlemanly manner and I wouldn't offend him by turning him away when he asks me out to dinner. The first time it happened, Eileen even offered to babysit with the children. She said it was so obvious that I had to have a change.

This man is as lonely as I am right now. We have done each other a lot of good.

The Council: We have no doubt that Grace is in need of sympathetic male companionship. The only question involved is whether she can afford to pay the price such companionship must cost at this time.

Reducing the problem to its simple size of what the neighbors will say is not realistic. Much more is involved — essentially, the relationship between Grace and her husband.

It is fairly evident that this ill husband is ranting against the fate that has struck him down in the prime of his youth. His chances of recovery may be directly affected by such emotional factors as his wife's need of him and her loyalty to him in time of stress. Obviously he can't feel 100 per cent certain of that loyalty if he knows or suspects that his wife finds her situation so irksome that she must seek relief in the company of another man.

It is very difficult for Grace to keep a proper perspective on her behavior. Her need for a father-ly person to lean upon may be so great that she is incapable of even noticing other aspects of the relationship. Yet we think it most unlikely that other less desirable aspects will fail to creep in if the contact is kept up.

Grace should restrict her contacts with this widower to the business angle and should go to her friend or members of her own family for comfort. She should also try to have some entertainment and relaxation with groups of friends. This will help keep her spirits up and will serve as a far more satisfactory form of sociability than the one she has chosen up to this point.

W.M.S. AFTERNOON AUXILIARY

WELLINGTON — The Women's Missionary Society of the United Church, Wellington, met in the centennial parlors with a large attendance. The meeting was opened with quiet music and a poem, "Remembrance Day."

Mrs. Marvin gave her report. Miss Pettingell and Mrs. Ross thanked for cards, flowers and visits. Mrs. Taylor told that there is a supply of books on Africa at the public library.

The next meeting in December is to be a joint meeting with the Woman's Association. A present is to be sent to Mrs. Dwyer.

Mrs. Poulter called on Mrs. Harris, a former president and presented her with a life certificate of membership, for which Mrs. Harris expressed her thanks.

Mrs. Walt took the devotional and also thanked the members for cards. Mrs. Teakey read Deut. 26: 1-15, "Take time to be holy in joy or sorrow, do not forget God, depend on God."

Mrs. Hicks introduced Mrs. McKibbon, who gave her address on Christian Citizenship and Temperance, "Governmental and Drinking steps against alcohol. Only about ten cent of hospital patients can resist the temptation after rehabilitation. Social welfare: "Can we teach people how to get on in the world financially?" Mr. Williams would like help for the older ladies in the home with their knitting and so forth. Racial attitude: Christian attitude toward those of other races makes for peace. Christian fellowship; Peace Palace at the Hague is a symbol of universal peace.

"A Rotary delegation met at the United Nations, 18,000 of all nations and never opened a meeting without prayer. U.N. simplicity is a symbol of world peace. "They shall beat their swords into plowshares."

Mrs. McKibbon showed slides of the U.N. buildings.

Mrs. Cronk thanked Mrs. McKibbon. After the meeting dainty refreshments were served.

Readers' Friday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

Mary, this is an emergency concerning the candy recipes you mentioned. With Christmas creeping up I do want the recipes . . . I am the proud owner of a brand new automatic stove . . . you had a column about set-and - forget - meals. Would you send them to me? Could you please give me instructions how to broil steaks, hamburgers, and pork chops? . . . Hedwig V.

ANSWER:

Helen, I'm not sure which candy recipe you mean. It seems to me it may have been this fudge.

PERFECTION CHOCOLATE FUDGE:

2 tablespoons good quality cocoa, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ cup granulated sugar, 1 cup brown sugar, 1-3 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup whole milk, 3 tablespoon corn syrup.

Mix together sugar, cocoa and salt. When well blended, add milk, butter and cocoa syrup. Bring to boiling point and boil gently, while stirring slowly, until it will form a soft ball when tried in cold water (or until it reaches 234-238 deg. Fahr. — no higher). Remove from heat, add vanilla, then cool for 3 minutes. Beat until mixture begins to show ridges, when spoon is drawn through it, which holds their shape. Pour into buttered pan. Note: if adding chopped nuts, cocoanut or puffed cereals, or raisins or dates, they should be stirred in just before candy begins to show ridges during final beating period.

I am mailing to you my former release on Automatic Oven Dishes for 2.

HOW TO BROIL STEAKS:

Preheat broiler 5 minutes. Leave door ajar. Place steak on cold rack of broiler pan so that top of meat is 3 inches from heating unit for 1" steak and 3 inches from heating unit for 1-2" steak. Broil 1" steaks 2 to 7 minutes (rare)7 to 9 minutes (medium); 9 to 10 minutes (well done). One-half inch steaks 1 1-3 to 3 minutes (rare); 2 to 3 1-2 minutes (medium); 2 1-2 to 3 minutes (well done).

TO BROIL HAMBURGERS:

Use same method judging time by thickness of meat cakes and "doneness" desired.

HOW TO BROIL PORK CHOPS:

Preheat broiler 5 minutes. Leave door ajar. Place loin or rib chops on cold rack of broiler pan so that top of chops is 6 inches from heat, about centre of oven. Broil 1" chops 12 to 14 minutes each side; 1-2" chops 6 to 8 minutes each side.

Carol of Diamonds For Christmas

These bedding notes are all diamond flower brooches. From left to right: (1) A diamond bridal wreath of yellow brilliants (round diamonds). (2) A diamond dahlia with petals for baguettes and brilliant-cut diamonds and a centre of brilliants. The stem is a row of baguettes. (3) (Top) A rose with petals of paved diamonds tipped with baguettes and a centre of round diamonds. The stems are gracefully curved with baguettes. (4) (Bottom) A stylized daffodil with a sunburst of baguettes in the centre and petals of paved diamonds. Trios of marquise diamonds separate the petals. (5) A marigold with petals of pear-shaped diamonds and a centre cluster of brilliants.

St. Andrew's Members Enjoy Supper

WELLINGTON — Members of St. Andrew's Church, Wellington, enjoyed a sumptuous pot-luck supper at the town hall on Thursday evening of last week. There were over 100 present.

The Women's Association of the church was in charge of the affair and each group was the guest of a hostess who had invited them.

There will be a drive in the church shortly for funds to build a parish hall. The Rev. J. J. Rogers spoke on the need of such a hall and told of the campaign about to commence. Each family of the church will be called upon by committees of churchmen who will explain the plan and answer any questions which members may have.

Undesirable Persons Use Devious Methods to Stay After Entry as Immigrants

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — The case of Christian George Hanna is the outstanding example of methods used by undesirable persons to enter Canada as immigrants.

Immigration department files contain hundreds of cases of persons who attempt to enter the country by swinging public opinion in their favor. They try to make it appear they are being deported without cause, and often succeed in finding sympathizers to argue their case in public.

These situations put the department in an awkward position because its policy is not to make public the reasons for deportation. However, the individual involved, or his lawyer, in most cases knows the reasons but is careful not to divulge them to those supporting his cause.

Such persons may be subversives, prostitutes, criminals, known Communists, gamblers, drug addicts and others who come to Canada as visitors or enter illegally and then, seek to remain.

Hanna arrived at Port Alberni, B.C., in December, 1958, as a stowaway and said he was a man without a country. His story of lonely exile on the high seas enlisted the sympathy of thousands, including some members of Parliament.

Due to the pressure of public opinion he was granted permission to land, although actually being inadmissible under immigration regulations. He was deported in October, 1958, after several brushes with the law.

It was not until nine months later that Canada as a learned Hanna had pulled off one of the biggest hoaxes in the history of Canadian immigration. He was not Christian George Hanna but Ahmed Aquad, an Egyptian citizen unable to meet immigration requirements. He had been able to enter Canada by false pretences and might still be here had he not run afoul of the law.

In rare cases, when smarting under heavy criticism of the way it handled a case, the department breaks its own rule of not giving reasons for deportation.

Such an instance occurred at the last session of Parliament.

Immigration Minister Fairclough said Jean Orests Volcy, a Haitian who had won a measure of public support by his efforts to remain in Canada, was deported in May because he had entered Canada as a student and taken a job contrary to immigration regulations. Also, he had claimed three dependents for income tax purposes when he was actually single. Later, after being married, he claimed to be single.

Undesirables who enter Canada as visitors usually are deported because they lack an immigration visa. This document is issued abroad to persons coming to this country as immigrants.

Mrs. Fairclough said in an interview that persons entering Canada without visas are deliberately attempting to evade immigration regulations.

In cases where entry has been refused she sometimes is "deceived" by letters and phone calls from sympathizers. One department official said the minister is subjected to a "mild form of persecution."

In a recent case an individual was refused an immigration visa overseas on grounds that he was a Communist. He later entered Canada as a visitor by false representation and then applied for permanent landing.

After he had been ordered deported he sought and received the support of several members of Parliament, church organizations and other public officials.

The department replied only that he was being deported because he did not possess an immigration visa. The man's supporters were not told he was being deported because he was a Communist.

In cases where security is involved the department makes no mention of this because the information it has usually comes from non-Canadian sources. It is given to Canada by the United States or Britain on the strict understanding it will remain confidential.

Deportation of visitors without immigration visas has been attacked by Toronto lawyer Frederick Erwin on grounds that this is a violation of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Mr. Justice R.L. Ferguson of the Ontario Supreme Court recently quashed two such deportation orders. He found them invalid and described as a "farce" the proceedings by which a visitor can be deported "because he does not have that which he is applying so earnestly to get from persons empowered to give it to him."

The immigration department now is appealing the two quashing orders.

Mrs. Fairclough said deportations are ordered only when the department is convinced the individual should not be in Canada.

Referring to general principles and not to cases before the courts, Mrs. Fairclough said the department must have a legal device to exclude undesirables.

"The purpose of the Immigration Act and regulations is twofold," she said. "On the one hand, its purpose is to facilitate the admission of desirable persons as future citizens of Canada; on the other hand, to exclude undesirable ones.

"The exclusion of undesirables is valid. Who would contend that Canada need not have an immigration Act or regulations and should admit without formality all and sundry persons who wish to come to his country? Such a notion is too absurd to be entertained."

It would be unjust to allow persons inadmissible as immigrants to gain permanent entry by the process of coming here under the pretext of a visit, that would be to condone illegality and would be unfair to those who seek entry by first obtaining an immigration visa.

RECEIVES CANADIAN CITIZENSHIP — Helen Molle, 22, an immigrant from Sweden, takes the oath of allegiance before receiving Canadian citizenship in a court ceremony at Toronto as Judge Wilfrid Cory presides. Presence of RCMP constable and robes of judge lend color and dignity to the ceremony. Nearly 1,500 immigrants have arrived in Canada since the end of the Second World War. (CP Photo).

Older Employees Perform As Well or Better Than Younger Ones Survey Shows

OTTAWA (CP) — A labor department report released Thursday says a survey of 1,000 older employees perform as well as or better than younger employees.

The study was carried out in co-operation with large department stores in two major cities, which were not identified, and is the most interesting within one industry "the frequent claim that abnormal age groups affect job performance declines."

The department, the study has determined that the older sales employee has as good a record of performance as the younger employee."

The labor department's statement says, "The older worker attained a higher performance rating on a shorter period of service than the younger worker."

LEAP BETWEEN AGES

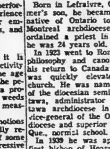
Specific findings:

1. By and large, older employees perform as well as or better than younger employees.

2. Performance improves with age, within limits, even when length of service is taken into account.

3. Peak performance in terms of 4-week periods to be reached between the age of 51 to 55. Beyond this age, performance declines favorably with that of relatively young persons, it appears at level off or decline slightly.

4. Performance tends to improve with age, with the biggest improvement occurring in the first few years of service in the store surveyed, and six to 10 years in the other.



5. The advantage in performance gained with experience appears to be greater for employees as to younger ones, and vice versa.

NATURAL SELECTION

The report says that it is possible that the relatively high selectivity in hiring increases with the age of applicants and that as the number of service lengthens a process of natural selection weeds out employees who do not measure up.

On the other hand, promotion and separations undoubtedly reduce further the sales staff number of the better, more aggressive employees.

"Both of these considerations are not thought to be too important, however, inasmuch as they would apply in virtually any employment situation."

"And daddy's been drinking lots of bottles of brown milk, mummy."

Institute Requests Color Ban On Margarine Be Removed

TORONTO (CP)—A royal commission to revise legislation that discriminates against margarine is asked in a brief filed and to be urged Thursday by the Institute of Edible Oil Foods.

In a brief to Ontario's agricultural marketing inquiry committee, the institute asked that the color ban on margarine be removed.

The brief, read by managing director Arthur May, said the color ban placed margarine in the category of a second-class product. Producers should be allowed to mix butter and margarine for sale as a premixed spread.

Committee member Gordon Green, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said yellow was just as natural to butter. And "if butter was coloured artificially would your product pink too."

Institute President, R. E. Merry said the manufacture of some edible oils is yellow but under existing regulations the color is to be bleached. He said an expanded industry would help farmers sell more butter.

Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Farmers' Union, said he didn't know why the institute was so insistent in having margarine the color of butter. Mr. May said the consumer shouldn't be deprived of the right to buy colored margarine and "it is up to the consumer to determine the color."

Mrs. F. B. Douglas, representing the Business and Professional Women's Club, said it can take up to 30 minutes for a housewife to mix color into the package of margarine. This was an unnecessary and futile task.

Mr. Greer said he thought women were efficient enough not to get margarine on their fingers in coloring.

"If only takes five minutes it's still a chore for the housewife and a bother," he said.

The institute's brief said the spectacular growth of oil seed production in Ontario says the calions between the two countries are more "clearly erected" and the Liberal paper Guardian in Manchester says "the English Conservative seems slightly less of a yawning chasm than it was before.

Both The News Chronicle, Liberal, and The Daily Herald, Labor, contend that Adenauer dominated the London talks.

The Herald also says "Dr. A. get Britain to toe the line, the Federal Republic has "fallen completely into line with Dr. Adenauer on the question of disarmament, instead of Berlin, as the first, topic on the summit agenda."

POLARIS SAID DEADLY

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Admiral Arleigh Burke said Wednesday night that about 45 Polaris missile submarines, the kind Jo U.S. Navy is building, "will be able to clobber any aggressor who would dare attack us." The chief of U.S. naval operations spoke to the National Security Industrial Association.

Former Bishop Of Montreal Dies in Victoria

VICTORIA (CP) — Most Rev. Joseph Charbonneau, 87-year-old former archbishop of Montreal who resigned suddenly in 1950 and came here to live, died Thursday following a stroke.

He was born in Montreal, the son of Canada's largest Roman Catholic ecclesiastical district for nine years before his sudden and mysterious retirement.

After coming to the west coast, Archbishop Charbonneau—maintained a complete silence about his sudden resignation from the archdiocese of Montreal.

DIFFERENCE OF REASONS

Although a Vatican newspaper report said it was because of ill-health, informants in Quebec suggested other reasons.

The archbishop's name often was linked with disagreements with Laval University of Montreal of which he had been pontifical chancellor.

He was among Quebec's archbishops and bishops who announced church-door collections by union representatives for relief of families of striking workers in the bitter strike of asbestos workers in 1949. The strike had been termed illegal by Quebec provincial authorities.

Archbishop Charbonneau also had sided with teachers in a dispute with the provincial government schools in Montreal.

Archbishop Charbonneau was known as a stern guardian of religious morals. He once raided a Montreal burlesque house and, by his own account, "found some disgusting school dances in progress."

Born in Lefravre, Ont., a farming district, he was the first native of Ontario to head the Montreal archdiocese. He was ordained a priest in 1916 when he was 24 years old.

He was sent to Rome to study philosophy and canon law. On returning to Canada in 1925 he was quickly elevated in the church. He was named superior of the theological seminary in Ottawa, administrator of the Ottawa archdiocese in 1928, then vice-general of the Ottawa archdiocese. He became bishop of Sault, Que., normal school.

In 1939 he was appointed the bishop of Saint-Jerome in Northern Ontario and less than a year later returned to Montreal as coadjutor archbishop of Montreal with the right of succession. On the death of Archbishop Gauthier Aug. 31, 1940, he assumed the archbishop's crook and mitre.

British-German Relations Better Say Newspapers

LONDON (Reuter)—Most British newspapers see British and German relations improved in the wake of Chancellor Adenauer's visit, but feel little else was accomplished.

Many papers say the joint communique issued Wednesday by planc Thursday night saying there had been "complete agreement" between Prime Minister Macmillan on the political issues of disarmament and a "general alignment" of views between the two countries on Berlin.

It was reported the two leaders had agreed a summit would be the best time for an East-West summit meeting. Adenauer decided at a press conference that Berlin could be discussed at the conference only within the context of the entire German problem.

LITTLE SOLIDARITY

But The Daily Telegraph, a supporter of Macmillan's administration comments that the communique is unable to conclude that any very substantial measure of solidarity will arise out of the meetings."

In a more optimistic vein the Liberal News Chronicle says re-

Police Continue Search for Elusive Cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson was on usual business Thursday while police continued their search for fight manager Cus D'Amato.

Johansson expected to defend his crown 20 days before returning to Sweden. No final arrangements have been made for the proposed May or June rematch with ex-champion Floyd Patterson.

Patterson's manager, D'Amato, has been under a subpoena to appear for questioning by the district attorney's office. One of D'Amato's lawyers, Julius Novemeber, was served as the subpoena and advised the fight manager not to appear until November's session. Cyrus Scheerer, lawyer from South America.

Scheerer, in November, is a specialist in international law and the man responsible for having drawn up the contracts for the much-investigated June 26 Patterson - Johansson fight.

Two Asphyxiated In Sarnia Home, One in Hospital

SARNIA (CP)—Norman Thorner, 81, and his son Clare, 45, were found dead Thursday in their five-room home, apparently victims of carbon monoxide from a homemade gas heater.

Caroline Thorner, 79, wife of Norman and mother of Clare was in poor condition. She was found unconscious, slumped on a chesterfield.

Police said the men had been dead for three days and a hard and Mrs. Thorner had been unconscious for about two days.

They were discovered after Mrs. Robert Allison, an enumerator for the census of statistics, made two calls at the house and did not get an answer. She noticed mail and newspapers piled on the front and light burning in the house. When a telephone call to the house went unanswered, police were called.

It was reported erroneously Thursday that Mrs. Thorner had died and that deaths were caused by gas fumes.

TO BUILD STATION

PRESCOTT (CP) — A $150,157 contract has been awarded to M. J. Sedgwick and Sons, Renfrew, for construction of a coast station at Cardinal, the transport department announced Thursday.

Increase in Maximum Rate For NHA Mortgages Seems Inevitable Say Informants

OTTAWA (CP) — Barring an unusual increase in the funds available from non-government sources for housing mortgages, an increase in the maximum interest rate for National Housing Act mortgages seems inevitable, informants said Thursday.

It also is likely that the federal government will reduce its participation in direct lending to builders through National Mortgage and Housing Corporation, they said.

These are two principal aspects of a problem that will face the government in the next six or eight weeks—how to keep housing construction at or near current levels.

The impression in government circles is that housing construction will drop off somewhat next year and demand for new houses also will ease.

Informed sources said Thursday the administration has given no consideration to raising the 6½-per-cent maximum rate on loans under the National Housing Act. But the government does expect to meet requesting housing until about the end of December.

The chief force exerted towards a rise in the NHA interest rate is the tight money situation.

Despite the Bank Act stipulation of a 6-per-cent maximum rate on chartered bank loans, the government could in effect raise this figure through an amendment to the National Housing Act.

In 1954, an amendment to the NHA empowered the chartered banks to get into this lending field, notwithstanding prohibitive Bank Act terms.

A similar "notwithstanding" paragraph could be inserted dealing with interest rates on NHA mortgages. The NHA rate is set at a lower order but it cannot go higher than 2½ percentage points above the interest rate on 20-year government bonds.

Calculated on that basis, it now is as high as about 7½ per cent but the government at present is mandated it is still 6 per cent.

Government participation in direct mortgage lending may not be cut off immediately. But it is likely to be curbed.

One reason is that the direct-lending fund, totalling about $1,000,000,000 has been invested and to stimulate the economy, there may be another stimulation is no longer there.

Finance Minister Flemming is being given a balanced budget by next year.

Works Minister Walker, 61, who is responsible for the government's housing program, has already announced that the government will ask for funds for house-building loans early in the session of Parliament opening Jan. 14.

Lt.-Gov. Mackay Presents Trophy At Winter Fair

TORONTO (CP)—The skirl of bagpipes filled the Royal Winter Fair's horse ring on Thursday night as Lieutenant - Governor Keiller Mackay reviewed a cadet guard of honor from St. Andrew's College, Aurora.

Later Mr. Mackay presented Lieutenant-Governor's trophy to Judge F. C. Brickenden of London, Ont., whose three-year-old Hackney pony, Lord Kenyon II Tuesday.

The trophy, 50 Guineas, (the actual award is $250) gives annually to the champion Hackney pony or horse exhibited by a qualified member of an Ontario Pony Club. It was first won by George Earley of Kerwood, Ont.

The champion pony, descended from 166 entries. George, a stallion at Ridgetown Agricultural College, is also a Hackney.

TWO CONTINUE DOMINANT

Middlesex and Huron counties are all top championships in the Queen's Guidance class open to 4-H members Thursday.

The grand reserve winner, 15-year-old Ann Farm of Rochester, Mich., won the senior and grand champion Shetland pony Bob Lee Farm of Oakland Oaks Bardolome 60, and dominated the Shetland class.

Other best cattle winners:

Cansdale Lee, Ltd., junior champion bull, Whitney Coates and Son, Centralia.

GRAND CHAMPION WINNER

A surgeon from Brampton, Dr. W. W. Bartlett, took the grand champion Hackney trophy in backney pony judging.

Other winners:

Single trotter: 1. Lady Lee, Brownie Lee, L. L. Thibaudeau, Markdale; 3. Jennie Lee Harvey Wright, Listowel.

Hackney pony: 1. Cambridge Leader, Mr. and Mrs. E. Preston Graham, Port Credit; 2. Bonnie Lassie, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew MacDougall, Erin; 3. Candlelight Bobby, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bush, Belleville.

WOULD REVISE LAWS

GUELPH (CP)—Mayor David E. Hastings Wednesday presented a revision of Ontario liquor laws and said it will be "a good idea" if cocktail bars are introduced here. The mayor, in a radio interview, criticized the Canadian breweries and distilleries are spending advertising money in the United States because the advertising of alcoholic beverages is prohibited within the province.

No Decision Made on Renewal Of School Licence

TORONTO (CP)—Health Minister Dymond said Thursday no final decision has been made on whether to renew the licence of the Ontario School for the Practical Nursing to train certified nursing assistants.

The Canadian Press reported erroneously Wednesday a flight from the minister had notified the school that its licence would not be renewed.

Robert Burns, school director, said negotiations between the health department and the school are continuing. About 500 nursing assistants have been graduated since the Ontario government established in December, 1957, a two-year pilot project to train such nursing personnel.

The Canadian School of Practical Nursing is the only community-operated school offering certified nursing assistants. Other schools in the province are operated by the government and by private hospitals.

STORY IS MODIFIED

Dr. Dymond has notified the school that its graduates after 1960 would only be eligible to write the government tests for provincial registration.

Mr. Burns said the nursing branch of the health department has taken "the heart right out of the school" and was in effect setting up a branch's influence and control in the training of nursing assistants.

The school was built about two years the school has tried to obtain financial assistance for improving its courses from the nursing branch. It has been unsuccessful. It has been furthermore.

He said the nursing branch has refused to allow a staff member of the Ontario Nursing Council to sit on the advisory board of the school and that the rest of the council — which has recommended that the school should not be renewed—had received no representations from the school or from hospitals where students are training, and had not visited the school to see student or graduate of the school.

Mr. Burns said that last June 95 per cent or 38 student candidates were successful in departmental examinations for certification written last June.

United States Still Trailing By Six Points

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Steinkraus and the United States equestrian team, won the Canada Cup Trophy Friday in the championship class Thursday night with the only clear round of the competition, but still trailed Canada in the team point standings.

By unofficial scoring, the win boosted the Yanks to 16½ points ahead of Canada in the total-points standings. Unofficial results issued revised standings Thursday which leave the U. S. with 32½ points to Canada's 26½ points.

Bill Steinkraus, riding Trail Guide, covered the 12-jump course without faltering and was the only rider to qualify for the event. Five riders, including Tom Gayford and Mac Elder, had qualified for second place with one knockdown each.

Despite the win by Steinkraus, his teammate, George Morris, still leads in the individual standings.

Morris has 17 points on an unofficial total, one point ahead of Gayford, Argentina's captain, Pedo Mayorga, is third with 19 points.

The official ruling leaves Canada's Jim Day with 21 points. The U.S. has 25, Argentina 22 and Brazil and Mexico are tied with eight.

Accused Found Insane at Time Of Stabbing

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Brady, 18, was found not guilty of murder Thursday after his lawyer court jury who ruled he was insane when he stabbed Miss Ida Dean, 81-year-old Toronto roomer, 15 times in her home last March.

Mr. Justice D. C. Wells ordered that the young magazine subscription salesman be detained in custody until the pleasure of the lieutenant - governor. He told the jury he thought its verdict perfectly proper.

The jury had been asked by defence lawyer Patrick Hartt, to return to such a verdict because the boy had suffered an epileptic seizure at the time of the attack and had not intended to kill the woman.

Possibility Sudbury-Area Local of Mine-Mill May Join Labor Congress on Own

OTTAWA (CP) — When the left-wing national leadership of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Ind. took a licking in the Sudbury Ontario this week it created questions as to the future of this country labor body.

A major one is whether the vote among 16,000 hard-rock miners around Sudbury to sever upheaval of the top-heavy leadership of Mine-Mill in this country.

The answer would appear to be no.

Another is what does the vote do towards getting the 28,000-member union back into the central stream of Canadian unionism—the Canadian Labor Congress?

The short answer seems to be not much, so far as can be seen now.

Mine-Mill was thrown out of the old Canadian Congress of Labor in 1949 for Communist domination.

AT WAR WITH USW

This year, engaged in a bitter and long organizing battle with powerful CLC-affiliated United Steel Workers, it applied for readmission to the congress, an entry which could mitigate the USW's raiding tactics against steel union.

The congress has given no definite answer up to now, but indications are that admission is unlikely. It is highly unlikely while the union continues under the present Communist-dominated leadership.

Another dull hurdle be surmounted—and there is no inkling that it will—another conditions would be that it be the working out of an arrangement with Mine-Mill that is satisfactory to arch-rival Steel, which swings much weight in labor.

STEEL IN URANIUM AREAS

The Steel union, which is Canadian, steel has been moving in on its territory, notably in Ontario's uranium areas. Steel would be highly unlikely to consider a merger with Mine-Mill in addition. So would Mine-Mill.

The problem may not be insoluble, but no one is known to have suggested a workable solution.

What are the chances of the Sudbury-area local of Mine-Mill breaking away from the national body for a hookup with the congress? Not very.

This is a question that no one can answer with a direct look probable.

But Tuesday's local election at Sudbury, Don Gillis, strong anti-Communist, was returned to the presidency. Mr. Gillis got 1231 votes against 5,963 for Nels Thibault, who has been a strong supporter in an attempt to knock out Gillis in the next year.

ALL OR NOTHING

It is pretty certain that not all of Canada's Mine-Mill will be big as what Gillis got. In a referendum earlier, the union as a whole voted 5,963 to 1,231 against affiliation with the CLC, but as an Sudbury's vote indicates, it probably was somewhat on this scale, so a vote for outright affiliation would be unlikely. Gillis himself has not suggested he would try this.

He did state this week he will again urge the congress to grant affiliation to Mine-Mill.

Congress officials have been silent except for a brief press statement welcoming Gillis' election as an indication means a settlement of sympathy for CLC affiliation. No one will hazard a guess as to how that there now appears to be a "better atmosphere" though the Gillis win made no change except to solidify the strength of the regime already in office in Sudbury.

TRUCE JOINT EFFORT

NEW YORK (AP) — Russia's atomic energy chief, Prof. S. Nemyonov, said Wednesday the United States and the Soviet Union could end nuclear duplication and share some of the costs of a test ban. But he said prospects for peaceful use. Yemelyanov made the other remarks to journalists concluded an inspection tour of major U.S. atomic research centers.

GIANT COMMUNICATIONS PROJECT — Plans are under way for a giant border-to-border communications link across Western Canada between the United States Northwest and Alaska.

The project will cost more than $100,000,000 and take two years to complete. It will stretch more than 2,000 miles from Dawson Creek in Northeastern B.C. through Alberta, generally following the Alaska Highway through British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska to Fairbanks.

While much of the survey work remains to be done, the map shows roughly where the line is expected to take.

It will consist of two microwave links, each with a capacity of 120 telegraph or telephone circuits, and one 4-mc/s carry television if needed.

Canadian National Telegraphs will build the line from the Alberta-Montana boundary to the Alaska border, where the Alaska Communications System will pick it up and extend it to Fairbanks.

The U.S. will lease the initial microwave circuit at a premium, leaving the capital cost of the project to Canada. The deal will leave provision to add other channels later as needed. (CP Newsmap).

W. German Leader Succeeds In Burying 'Disengagement'

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Disengagement is dead.

Subject to the usual political qualifications, the statement is a certain conclusion to be drawn from Chancellor Adenauer's visit to London.

After all the talk last spring about the "thinning out" and "demilitarized" zone in central Europe, after the countless variants on the theme of "freezing of forces," it looks as though the West German leader has succeeded in burying the idea for good and all.

Prime Minister Macmillan has also says shied away from the word itself preferring to talk of "controlled limitation of armaments." But ever since his trip to Moscow in February, the basic shown increasing sympathy for some measure of relief for the people of central Europe. Now it is agreed that the Soviet threat has not diminished.

Nor, in a reporter's question, the chancellor said the new economic groupings in Europe will not cause any difficulties to NATO; that "ways and means" could be found to avoid a split.

Fears about NATO's future have been expressed in view of recent French statements reviving thoughts of a European nuclear force that would tend to play down the 15-nation partnership.

If Laughter Canned Must Be Revealed After Dec. 15

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The roars of canned laughter, artfully tucked around even the feeblest of jokes, will be missing from most CBS programs by Dec. 15. And if they can't erase it, somebody will have to confess it is there. . .

Between then and now there will be other changes on the network, all based on an executive memorandum and all emanating from the recent quiz show scandals and constantly widening investigations into other aspects of TV activities.

Gamers and contests with big money or lavish prizes have already been banned. In any remaining CBS game or panel shows, any build-up easily designed to deceive the viewer must be removed or revealed. And when studio rehearsals are used, methods of selection must be disclosed to the viewers.

MUST DISCLOSE ALL

In interview shows, too, the audiences henceforth will get all the facts. We'll know whether the interviewer rehearsed or received his questions in advance, whether the scope of the interview has been deliberately limited, if the film or tape has been edited and if the program was recorded or in advance.

In addition, we will be told whether a show is live, taped or filmed.

The test in each case must be whether any substantial omission of the viewing audience is likely in the circumstances to be deceived or misled concerning the true nature of the program being offered," states the order signed by James T. Aubrey, network executive vice - president, and he wants them all in effect 30 days before Christmas. To implement the directive, the network late Thursday announced creation of a department of program practices.

MORE CULTURE AT NIGHT

A network spokesman more than hinted that CBS might soon find prime evening time during the week for shows in the so-called "cultural area," public affairs programs and special events.

At NBC, an executive reiterated his network's position that it alone is master of its program, expressed confidence in the present balance and variety of its shows and added: "There are a number of things under study and we have nothing to say about them now. We'll tell about them when we are ready."

The spokesman for ABC said that the network had no comment on its future handling of such matters.

The Killers, Ernest Hemingway's short story adapted as a play, provided a gripping 90 minutes on CBS Thursday night.

It was performed by a competent cast headed by Dean Stockwell. Heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson played a boxer hunted by the fight mob,

Mary Costa Gets Big Break In Landing Singing Contract

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The big news in the opera world is a one-time door-opener named Mary Costa.

TV fans will remember Mary as the blonde salesgirl who pitched a song for an auto firm on the Climax show. She parlayed more fenders and opened more doors than a used-car salesman in the busy season.

Now the doors are opening for Mary. The reason is her debut with the San Francisco Opera Company. She drew applauding reviews up and down the Pacific coast, especially for her Musetta in La Boheme.

Back in her Beverly Hills home after the rigors of singing in five operas, Mary is still aglow. And well she should be, because she now has the ace impresario Sol Hurok to masterminder career. Just after the opera season ended, she signed a deal with Hurok that will guarantee her $250.00 over a five-year period.

"One of the biggest kicks in all this," she remarked, "is in seeing the surprise of people who know me in Hollywood. One of the people in the Chrysler Corporation said to me, 'gee, Mary, why didn't you sing like that on our show!' They wouldn't let me!

"But I don't regret anything. I don't feel that any of the time is wasted.

"And I'm glad I waited until I was asked to sing leading roles. I don't think I would have had the same impact if I had started singing small roles and worked my way up."

Likewise, she is glad she turned down a contract offer from the Metropolitan. It would have tied her down to small roles and small money until she "had developed."

Hurok has big plans for her, including a Jerry Kenney TV special, concerts and a European tour. And next summer he plans to make a movie abroad with Maurice Chevalier. It will be written, directed and produced by her able husband, Frank Tashlin.

"I think the time is ripe for the kind of movie Grace Moore used to do," she said. "Again I'm glad we waited to do this picture, because now people won't be able to say, 'Well, she got the job because she's the producer's wife.'"

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Isn't it about time the powers-that-be of the Ontario Senior "A" Hockey League woke up and did something about the constant exposure of supposedly amateur Canadian hockey leaders by United States amateur leagues?

It is a known fact that senior "A" players have been enticed to American leagues, and are playing in them without benefit of release from the Canadian leagues.

By agreement between the United States International League and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association these players should be suspended.

But they're going merrily on their way, playing for salaries well above the maximums paid by the Ontario Senior "A" league while the brigade of that loop and the CAHA are doing nothing about it.

The defection of goalie Marc Edwards to the International League without receiving his release from the Kitchener Dutchmen and the other Ontario senior clubs, is a glaring instance of the laxity of the regulations agreed upon by the United States and Canadian amateur organizations.

If something was done about this instance it might help solve some of the goaltending difficulties of the McFarlands.

A report from Kitchener this morning stated the McFarlands, reading the services of Connie Maslago for the rest of the season, or until Olympics time, had their request refused by the Dutchmen management. It seems Manager Ernie Gosnen is loath to part with Maslago in case something happens to his veteran goalie Reed Bowley. You cannot blame him for that. But if Edwards was to return to the Dutchmen fold as he should, there is a possibility the Maxi might get one or the other.

Minnie Minoso was spirited away from the Macs by the newly-formed New York Rovers of the United States Eastern Hockey League without, Macs officials say, benefit of release from the club or league.

Secretary-manager Bill Hanley of the OHA was approached on the matter and he in turn contacted the Rovers' management.

Nothing was done. After all, Tommy Lockhart, the new owner of the Rovers, is also the president of the USEHL. That should be do about it. It is strictly up to the CAHA.

This reporter sat in on a meeting of the Ontario Senior "A" League last spring when the Cornwall Cheviot management decided to postpone operations for a year. Also present was waiver price czar at $750 by Cornwall manager Ray Miron—and agreed to by the league.

It was decided the Cornwall players would be drafted by other teams in the league. When the distribution was finished Chatham had drafted Marcel Goyette and Augie Kukulowicz. So what happened?

When the Maroon training camp opened this fall, Goyette and Kukulowicz showed up there in the afternoon, nor did they report later. Instead Goyette turned up with the Louisville Rebels and "Kuke" with Dower of the Western United States Amateur League.

The Maroon management was left at the turn of affairs, asked the CAHA, which is affiliated with the Eastern and Western United States Leagues via the International Ice Hockey Association, to suspend the two players.

So what happened? Goyette is still playing with the Rebels and Kuky with Dower.

The CAHA has done enough for the pros. It is about time it started to look after its own "amateur" family.

Bombers Have No Problems With Kitchen Quarterbacks

WINNIPEG (CP) — Whatever problems Winnipeg Blue Bombers have as they prepare for the Grey Cup game, they don't have to worry about the Ladies' Aid.

Winnipeg coach Bud Grant, who was commenting on statements by Hamilton coach Jim Trimble that Tiger - Cats are having trouble because of the Kitchen Quarterback Club formed by players' wives.

Grant, a married man with four children, said it is true that wives can have a disturbing effect on a football club. He also said he has played on football teams when there has been a problem with players' wives.

He has played with the University of Minnesota, the Philadelphia Eagles and finally the Blue Bombers, but he did not mention the team that had wife problems.

NO PROBLEM

He was emphatic, however, in saying he had no problem with the Bomber camp.

"Our boys are very close; get along extremely well. The wives apparently do, too."

Hazel Tinsley, wife of Blue Bombers' veteran 10-year tackle Buddy Tinsley, outdid the unanimous praise.

Another football wife's voice is being heard in the East.

Jan Falonoy, wife of Hamilton's all-star quarterback Bernie Faloney, said she can't understand why Trimble is blaming the kitchen quarterbacks' show for the team's troubles.

Mrs. Faloney said the show was Trimble's idea in the first place.

"What did he expect us to do for 16 weeks—say nothing? We've had a little fun, but certainly haven't cut up anyone on the team."

New Stars Are Twinkling In National Firmament

Strong Contenders Threaten All Spots on All-Star Team; Boston's Horvath Standout

By ALEX FARRELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It's beginning to appear there will be some changes in the National Hockey League's all-star lineup this season. With the schedule just past the one-quarter mark, strong new contenders have emerged at every position.

Interest is focusing on goal, where incumbent Jacques Plante of Montreal has overcome the early lead built up by Detroit's Terry Sawchuk, and centre, where Boston sensation Bronco Horvath has been stealing the thunder of Montreal's Jean Beliveau.

Plante, twice an all-star, and Sawchuk, three-time choice, face stiff competition from Toronto's Johnny Bower, whose stalwart puck-chopping has helped keep the low-scoring Leafs in contention. Bower has spent most of his NHL career in professional career in the minors.

Believe it, Bower over-all scorer on hockey's highest-scoring team during the last five years, has been dominating at his position almost from the time he entered the NHL.

Biggest cluster of stars is at right wing, duplicating last year's situation. New York's Andy Bathgate is very much in the running for the spot he snared last season, but so are old rivals Bernie Boom Boom Geoffrion of Montreal and Gordie Howe of Detroit, along with another new Boston discovery, Vic Stasiuk.

At left wing Dickie Moore, all-star the last two seasons, is off to a slow start. Johnny Bucyk of Boston has been showing the way but a shoulder separation, suffered last weekend against Montreal has sidelined him indefinitely and will likely hurt his chances.

On defence Canadiens' Doug Harvey has come back strongly after missing out last season for the first time since 1951. But if he makes it, either teammate Tom Johnson or New York's Bill Gadsby will have to give way.

Other top contenders at this point include Detroit's Marcel Pronovost, Boston's Doug Mohns and Montreal sophomore Albert Langlois.

Skiers Debut Over Weekend

TORONTO (CP)—Hardy skiers are expected to make their first tracks of the season this weekend with reliable conditions reported in the Collingwood, Muskoka and Parry Sound districts.

Parry Sound area, with about 20 inches of snow, has the best skiing conditions but there are no lifts. Huntsville district reports, where the snow ranged fro mfive to ten inches, do not intend to operate their tows this weekend.

If more snow falls, a lift may be operated at Blue Mountain winter park near Collingwood.

Snow-flurries were forecast for today throughout the area.

Quinte Saints, Petes Get Pat on Back

The fine on-the-field sportsmanship and behavior of the Quinte Secondary School Saints and the Peterborough C.I. team in their recent COSSA semi-final playoff has received well-deserved official praise.

Quinte coach Jack Sisson has received a letter from R. A. (Pete) Beech, executive secretary of the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations which speaks for itself. Here it is:

"I just want to pass along to you my congratulations on the impression your team created with the officials who handled the game in Bailey-ville on November 11. Charlie Howerow made a point of calling me to tell me how impressed he was with the good sportsmanship and general behavior of the players on both teams along with the spectators and individuals connected with the team.

"This is the first time in a long while I have had the pleasant experience of listening to an official praise the whole conduct and conditions re-ported in the Collingwood, Muskoka and Parry Sound districts.

Parry Sound area, with about 20 inches of snow, has the best skiing conditions but there are no lifts. Huntsville district reports, where the snow ranged fro mfive to ten inches, do not intend to operate their tows this weekend.

If more snow falls, a lift may be operated at Blue Mountain winter park near Collingwood.

Snow-flurries were forecast for today throughout the area.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Ranking heavyweights Zora Folley and Eddie Machen agreed Thursday to a 10-round rematch of their November draw last year.

Matchmaker Bennie Ford of the San Francisco Boxing Club announced they would meet Jan. 18 at the Cow Palace in a non-televised scrap.

Folley Wednesday night outpointed Alonzo Johnson at Phoenix in a 10-rounder and holds the No. 2 challenger's ranking. Machen, rated No. 4, has won six straight since being floored in the first round by Ingemar Johansson before the Swede knocked out Floyd Patterson to become champion.

Canadiens Clip Lions' Streak; Royals Lose

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A bid by Trois-Rivieres Lions to take over second place in the Eastern Professional Hockey League was halted Thursday night on some brilliant netminding by Ken Walters of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

The Lions went into the contest confidently riding a five-game winning streak which included two-goal wins against teams in the top half of the standings. Only two weeks ago they'd been tied for last place.

But Hull-Ottawa won the game 3-2 as Walters delighted a home crowd by stopping plenty of hot shots, one a slicer by Mel Pearson with only two seconds remaining.

The victory put the Canadiens in sole possession of second place and left the Lions in fourth spot, a point behind Montreal Royals who continued to slump and were edged 3-1 at Sault Ste. Marie by the driving Thunderbirds.

The Soo club is a point back of the Lions. Sudbury Wolves, idle Thursday night, are in first place two points ahead of the Canadiens, who lead Montreal by another two points. Kingston Frontenacs are last with only four wins and two ties in 18 games.

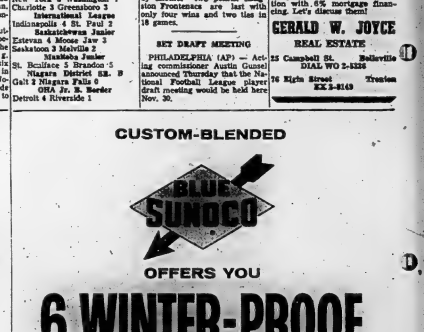
BRICK OR FRAME?

Over the past five years the number of prospective home purchasers who have been heard "insisted" on their new home being brick. Or the stock question is how much more a brick than frame?"



The actual difference in cost on a standard three bedroom bungalow between frame and brick is probably less than $300. Many feel that the cost is much greater.

Older frame homes can in many cases be a lot better looking than "sweetheres" older brick houses, and much more can be done with color and design than to a brick house. Don't say "no" to a frame house until you have discussed it thoroughly with your decorator or architect. We have 25 styles on new brick bungalows now under construction with 6% mortgage financing. FIGHTER CHARGED

QUEBEC (CP)—Dave Hilton, 19 - year - old Canadian featherweight boxer, and five other Quebecers were charged Thursday with attempted indecent assault on a 16-year-old girl. Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 28. Bond for each was $300. Hilton won the featherweight title last May 18 over Gerry Simpson of Montreal.

Jungle Jim's Tarzans 'Up', Clair Has TiCats Guessing

HAMILTON (CP) — Jungle Jim Trimble, coach of the pacesetting Big Four champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats, has come up with another way of saying "my boys will be up for this one."

After putting his squad through a practice session Thursday, Trimble said "their attitude is vastly improved."

Ticats apparently didn't have the proper attitude when they lost 17-0 to Ottawa Rough Riders last Saturday in Ottawa. The second game of the two-game totalpoints final series will be played here Saturday with kickoff time at 1 p.m. EST. The engagement will be televised nationally.

Ticats appear to be physically fit and ready for their toughest game of the season. They'll be facing a hungry Ottawa squad which is on an eight-game win streak.

LESS MUD THIS TIME

The weather which stalled Ticats' passing attack on a muddy field in the opening game is expected to be more favorable this time. The forecast for Saturday: Clouds and southeasterly winds of 15 to 20 miles an hour and a possibility of rain late in the afternoon.

An inch of snow which fell on Civic Stadium Wednesday was cleared off Thursday and a tarpaulin pulled back to cover the field. It won't be lifted until shortly before the kickoff.

Tonight a Grey Cup pep rally of festivity is due to break out here. A huge public rally with a 48-piece band, majorettes and even Ticat players will be held downtown.

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders leave by plane for Hamilton today with coach Frank Clair refusing to commit himself on his choice of a starting quarterback for Saturday's second game of the Big Four football final against Tiger Cats. The question is will Clair decide to break the spell cast by Ticat Canadian Russ Jackson, starting quarterback in Riders' last 11 games, who has led Ottawa to his victories, the last eight in a row?

GARY SCHREIDER
Expected To Play

Or will he attempt to cross up Hamilton coach Jim Trimble's defences by tossing in veteran import passer Babe Parilli at the start?

"We're going to keep Hamilton guessing until the last possible minute," Clair said as Riders completed heavy duty drills in preparation for the second game of the home-and-home series.

The game begins at 1 p.m. EST and will be televised nationally by the CBC.

12-POINT LEAD

Riders hold a 12-point lead in the two-game, total-points series, after defeating Hamilton, the defending eastern champions, 17-3 here last Saturday.

Jackson sprained an ankle in the final moments of the game but reports it has responded to treatment.

"It's been me a little if I think of it," he said, "but it's as good as new. I'll be all right."

Jackson is the running quarterback on the Ottawa club, with Parilli, who also punts, spelling him occasionally when a situation calls for a passing attack.

Clair also has planned some adjustment, including what he described as a half-dozen new formations for new plays that he says may not be used against Tiger-Cats.

NEW ROLE

His also has drilling offensive tackle Milt Graham for duty at defensive end, in case he's pressed to step in for regular defensive end Lou Bruce whose bruised-up knee was reinjured a slightly last week. But Brule is expected to start.

Gary Schreider, who stayed in bed last Saturday (Aug. 1) a cheerleyhorse that acted up suddenly, was back at practice all week and is expected to get into action — at least for his regular kicking role on field goals and converts.

But Harry Lunn may step in for him as a defensive half.

Clair all week has warned that Riders' 12-point cushion in the series is nothing to get excited about because "we'll still have to play the greatest game we've played in four years to beat Hamilton."

"Well, that's their 12th straight fake win over us!"

Bombers Have No Secrets, Will Work Out in the Open

By AL VICKERY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — The days of football spy-gazing are to be numbered.

Coach Bud Grant is taking the western champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers to Toronto next Monday and he tells all comers in the open for the Nov. 28 Grey Cup battle at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

Bombers will defend their Canadian championship title against the winner of the Big Four final between Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders.

Bomber manager Jim Ausley club will stay at a midtown hotel club will stay at a midtown hotel ing the locker facilities at nearby Varsity Stadium and practising on the University of Toronto campus.

"They're tearing the turf up at the stadium so we'll use the campus spot Toronto Argonauts used for practice grounds, before moving to the CNE," Ausley said.

Grant apparently doesn't care who takes in the Bomber practice sessions.

"What does it matter what anyone sees now?" he said.

"We'll stick mostly to what we've been using all season, and through the western playoffs. A no-no about a half or two hours thereafter The Minor Periods scheduled for Saturday are of somewhat shorter duration.

When Tobert went to Toronto for the 1950 Grey Cup final against Argonauts coach Frank Larsen had the team stay and work out at London, Ont. All was in vain, Bombers were beaten 13-0.

Bombers' next trip to the Grey Cup was in 1953 under voluble George Trafton, who took the team to a motel at Aurora, 30 miles north of Toronto. The quiet atmosphere and closed doors didn't seem to help. Bombers lost 12-6 to Hamilton.

On their next jaunt under Grant in 1957 Bombers moved closer to town, stayed in the nearby buildings with field glasses to watch the opposition.

Coach Grant is taking no chances and closed practice sessions will park and barred the doors in an attempt to keep out "spies."

On several occasions there were charges and counter-charges from rival coaches that agents were sneaking into the Bomber workouts or sitting up in trees.

Grant said that Ottawa's assistant coach, George Terlep, has the "complete book on us as he scouted the western final between us and Edmonton Eskimos." Assistant coach Jack Jacobs of the Ticats also scouted the western playoffs.

"Those two guys know so much about our club they even have the names and numbers for our plays," Grant said. He will rely on scouting reports of Jim Van Pelt, injured quarterback who took in the eastern playoffs.

Petes, Majors Win Over Cubs, Bilts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lou Maschio was kept busy at Hamilton Thursday night where he refereed an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game between St. Michael's College Majors and Hamilton Tiger-Cubs.

He called 28 penalties during the fast game. Each side drew three five-minute, majors as St. Michael's defeated the Cubs 5-3 for their sixth win in seven starts.

Hamilton with two wins and a tie in 10 outings, is still one point ahead of the last-place St. Catharines TeePees.

Peterborough Petes edged Guelph Biltmores 4-3 in other action to remain deadlocked for first place with the Majors. Guelph has one possession of third spot.

Dave Keon led the Majors with two goals. Larry Keenan, Dave Draper and George Olah divided the others.

Bob Pond and Bert Templeton scored for the losers, both late in the third period.

Guelph drew first blood in the Peterborough game, watched by a crowd of 2,483, when Jean Ratelle scored at 10.40 of the first period.

Weiner Connelly and Wayne Hoddy made it 2-1 for Petes in the second. Reg Middleton and Jim Roberts finished the Petes' scoring in the third with Paul Andrea replying for Bilts.

The team split 14 penalties.

May Enter Soccer League

ROCHESTER N.Y. (CP) — There is a possibility of three teams from Rochester and Buffalo entering the International Soccer League next season, manager Bill Rodes of Toronto said Thursday night following a meeting with Danny Fowler, president of the Northwestern New York State Soccer League.

The three teams were named as Rochester Italians, Rochester Ukrainians and Buffalo Simon Pures. The International League now comprises four teams in Hamilton and Toronto and one each in Guelph and Kitchener.

Aussies, Thomson Show Way In Canadian Cup Tournament

MELBOURNE (CP) — Peter Thomson fired a third straight 69 — par round today to retain Australia's lead in the Canada Cup golf tournament to an almost insurmountable height as Canada clung doggedly to second place.

Thomson, four - time British open king who grew up near the Royal Melbourne course here, added a two-under-par 68 to his previous rounds of 67 and 69 for a 54-hole total of 204.

This gave the Australians a seven-point lead over Canada, represented by Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Al Balding of Markham, Ont., in the team standings and Thomson a one-point edge in over Leonard in the individual competition.

Leonard sank an eight-foot putt on the final green for a 69 and a total of 205. Balding had trouble and came in with a 75 for a total of 222.

The United States and South Africa were tied for third place. The team was tied with 433. Sam Snead of the U.S. was third best individual with 211. He had a 73 today.

Thomson's brilliant round offset a mild blowup by his partner Kel Nagle, who soared to a 76 after previous par rounds of 70 and 72.

The Australian team total, with one round left to play, was 425, followed by Canada at 427, United States and partners' Cary Middlecoff, soared eight strokes over par today and left the course still growing over lack of practice and unfamiliar playing conditions.

Canada might have cut deeply into Australia's advantage except for a bit of bad luck by Balding at the 10th hole. He twice hit his tee shot into the woods and with a three-over-par seven. Balding is a four-way tie for 12th place in the individual scoring.

Crighton Stirs Cleat-Feet Boiling Pot

TORONTO (CP)—Hec Crighton the man who wrote the Canadian football rule book, now pedals cleats used by Winnipeg Blue Bombers in a Western Interprovincial Football Union playoff game are illegal—and he hasn't even seen them.

Crighton merely applied mathematics to the rule governing cleats to come up with the answer.

The rule on cleats says: "No cleat, where it comes in contact with the ground, shall have a lesser end area than three-sixteenth square inches and no dimension less than three-sixteenth square inches."

Crighton said he understands the cleats which Bombers wore when they defeated Edmonton Eskimos 19-11 on a frozen field at Edmonton are one - quarter inch in diameter.

After some quick computation, Crighton checked with a mathematics specialist at the high school where he is a teacher. The answer: The Bomber cleats have an area touching the ground of 11-24ths of an inch or approximately 1-36.

Bombers got an okay on the cleats from Football Commissioner Sydney Hall before they used them. Halter said he had not received any official protest about the cleats but added "there may be a suggestion that the rule in connection with cleats should be changed."

Bombers also won the second game of the playoff to earn the right to represent the West in the Grey Cup here Nov. 28.

PECK STEPS OUT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gregory Peck bowed out of a co-starring role with Marilyn Monroe Wednesday. He blamed a delay in the starting date. Others said his action resulted from refusal to accept the size of the stars' roles in the 20th Century - Fox film Three Cases of Love, formerly entitled The Billionaire.

N.B. Publisher Outlines Plans To Correct Ills

TORONTO (CP) — Brig. Michael Wardell, Fredericton newspaper publisher, Wednesday outlined three plans to solve the Maritimes' economic ills and criticized the federal government for giving away $30,000,000 in Colombo plan payments while the hard - pressed Atlantic Provinces trailed the rest of Canada.

Brig. Wardell compared the Colombo plan payments to "a father of a family who pours his money prodigally into the public plate, while keeping his own family locked up and starving in the back rooms." He spoke to the Public Relations Society of Toronto.

He was not entirely against Colombo plan payments, which he said Canada could afford. "But . . . I believe that we can attend to redress the disabilities of the Atlantic provinces."

SEVERAL PROPOSALS

The publisher said the Atlantic Provinces could prosper if the federal government would increase coal subventions and pay the cost of freighting sugar from the Maritimes to the Quebec border, build a super-highway from the Maritimes through Maine to Montreal, and build a canal through the Isthmus of Chignecto.

The opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway has forced some large manufacturers to move from the Maritimes to Central Canada, he said.

The largest, Dominion Steel and Coal, was planning to build "a great new steel plant" at Contrecoeur, Que.

The Maritimes' second largest exporter, the Atlantic Sugar refinery at Saint John, N. B., had filed a brief with the royal commission on transportation which said the seaway "built at public expense, has so damaged the company's operations that it must move westward into Central Canada like Ducon."

NABBED DURING LESSON

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—A mother wanted to teach her six - and 10-year-old sons that crime doesn't pay, so she had them skip school and go to court here to see the trial of Jim O'Neill, charged as a habitual criminal. The boys didn't learn their lesson very well, according to assistant prosecutor Peter Pappas. He collared them in connection with the disappearance of a wallet and $5 from the purse of a woman spectator.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Saturday, November 21

General tendencies: Not a Saturday to try to work any devices or oblique angles, for if you do you lose out on an opportunity and now affected you be very generous and magnanimous. If you think big, you can really get excellent results of a like nature right now. The evening is fine for affection, romance, whatever is creative.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Avoid one in authority in A.M. who is jealous and would steer you in the wrong direction. The remainder of the day is fine in which to work and prosper and tonight is excellent for social niceties. Plan a charming evening's fun.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Sidestep an overly clever associate who could ruin some business arrangement that was going to help materially to ameliorate affairs at home. P. M. give a nice party at own abode and be especially kind with close ties. Expand.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Get out of usual dull doldrums routine now and be out visiting the right people. Cement better relations. Tonight is fine time for fun at mutually desirable activity with congenials. Be careful while out driving or walking.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — A fine day for being cheerful and keeping others happy too. However, do not be extravagant with money. Then later in the day you should consult with one in authority as to how you can increase income in the near future.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Put a brake on that temper. Be kind to a family tie who does not see eye to eye with you. Take time to improve your appearance instead and plan a very nice social evening. Entertain or be entertained as befits a Royal Leo.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — Don't permit that private worry to take on such great proportion that you cannot operate efficiently today. Go out and confer with others, shop, etc. P. M. excellent for doing that which requires concentration. Be alert.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — Get your trusted comrades to assist you when pressure is placed upon you by unscrupulous individual to invest more than you can afford on something that has very little value. P. M. have fun. Meet new people.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — You are tempted to argue strongly with one in authority because he, or she, does not see eye to eye with you. Refrain from doing so and listen instead; and by co-operating more fully there will be fine benefits for you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Get home chores out of the way in early A.M. Then settle forth to nice places and new people. A good day for research and time too. Also read your paper for the latest trends and articles. Be ahead of the other fellow.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 to Jan. 20) — A ball-headed pal does not agree with some higher-up who demands much of your time and work. Avoid the evening before talking over new plans with associates. Today's talks will bring firm decision. P. M. time for romance.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — A. M. is pretty confusing, since obligations are not associates disagree, etc. Better wait until after sundown before talking further with partners and coming to some better understanding. Do civic duties.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — A. M. should be spent putting abode in better order or coming to grips with promises made to some fellow worker. After lunch is best for going off to interesting sites and meeting progressive and fascinating people.

If your child is born today — The wonderful child born today can accomplish so very much in life, provided you early give sufficient training in the spiritual truths and ethical behavior. This does away with inner conflict and the big issues shead are seen clearly and can be brought to early fruition. Excellent chart for any fields that require insight and have a broad scope. Also, show the value of being patient.

CONCERNED ABOUT DEER

SOENDRE STROMENFJORD, Greenland (Reuters)—The United States Air Force at this West Greenland base has offered to organize an emergency air-lift of food to about 10,000 starving reindeer which have been spotted moving northwards in huge herds across the Greenland snow plains. Its recent weeks an abnormal blizzard has formed over many natural feeding grounds in Southern Greenland.

Former Cabinet Minister Arrested In Probe of Ceylon Assassination

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Police have arrested Mrs. Wimala Wijewardene, the only woman ever to hold a cabinet post in Ceylon, in connection with the assassination of Prime Minister Solomon Bandaranaike Sept. 26.

They also arrested Dickie de Zoysa, brother of Finance Minister Sharvey de Zoysa and Deputy Police Inspector Sidney de Zoysa.

Mrs. Wijewardene, 51, was ousted from Prime Minister Wijeyananda Dahanayake's cabinet Oct. 30 because of her close association with the chief suspect in the assassination, Buddhist priest Maptigama Buddharakkita Thero.

Mrs. Wijewardene belongs to a right-wing political bloc guided by the monk which frequently opposed the Socialist-minded Bandaranaike.

De Zoysa was the director of a shipping firm controlled by a financial combine that has been linked with the Buddhist priest.

Both his brothers have been under fire from members of Parliament critical of the government's investigation of the assassination.

CHARGE USED RANK

Sidney de Zoysa was charged with using his police rank to obstruct the investigation. Eight ministers demanded Stanley de Zoysa's resignation, charging he associated with a person involved in Bandaranaike's slaying.

Bandaranaike appointed Mrs. Wijewardene to his cabinet in 1956 but later they clashed frequently, particularly over his campaign to suppress modern, Western medical practices. The woman minister was a defender of the traditional eastern medical system of herb brews and massage called ayurveda.

Previously, five persons were arrested in connection with the assassination, including two Buddhist monks, a police officer and two civilians.

SEES PRICE RISE

CHICAGO (AP)—The cost of metropolitan newspapers inevitably will rise to 10 cents, Arthur Hall, Chicago Daily News general manager, said Wednesday. He told a meeting of distributors of periodicals that the price increase will be one of several financial reforms necessary to enable newspapers to expand their role as interpreters of world events during the 1960s. Newspapers also will have to increase advertising rates and print fewer editions a day.

Supreme Court Jury Awards Woman Money

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A Supreme Court jury Tuesday night named a 67-year-old woman as the rightful owner of jewelry and $9,500 in cash found in a field by three boys.

Its owner testified that every weekend she left the money in the field near her home when she went shopping. She told the court the distrusted banks.

But Mrs. Mary Panek, who won the suit, still had to settle a claim by the Erie County welfare department.

The money and jewelry were found in a paper bag in a field by the 11 to the boys, who were hunting rabbits.

The boys, James Weiglein, 11, Roy Anderson, 14, and Otis Montgomery, 13, contested Mrs. Panek's claim, which led to a jury trial.

The welfare department said Mrs. Panek had received about $8,000 in welfare funds during the five years ending in 1957. Mrs. Panek and the department agreed to a compromise by which she would pay the county $5,500 if the money was awarded to her.

She said she had no money when she applied for welfare aid in 1952 and that the city had been given to her by her children.

2 Million Shares Of Ford Stock To Be Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford Foundation announced on Thursday it will sell 2,000,000 shares of Ford Motor Company common stock to the public.

The price at which the shares will be sold will be announced later.

The announcement of the foundation's intention to sell the big block of shares was made when the Ford Company asked the Securities and Exchange Commission to permit their sale.

Ford said the foundation wants to diversify its investments. The foundation, which sponsors a wide variety of philanthropies, was set up under the will of Henry Ford and its assets originally consisted only of Ford stock.

This is the third sale of Ford stock by the foundation.

Persecution Can Backfire

By ROY L. SMITH

In a world such as ours which has known so much of persecution and revenge, it may be well to remind ourselves occasionally that persecution, spite, and malice are very apt to defeat themselves. On the other hand, persecution sometimes becomes the most valuable ally victory knows.

When Hitler set out to exterminate the Jews in Germany, he forced Albert Einstein to migrate to the United States. At the same time he made it unnecessary for other scientists of Jewish blood to flee to other countries. Frau Meitner, for example, took refuge in Sweden. Then when the brilliant Hitler Jews discovered that her colleagues had succeeded in splitting the atom she reported the news in a British magazine. In this time the whole matter got under way in America, and Professor Einstein called it to the attention of President Roosevelt, and out of that incident there was started the process that resulted in the fabrication of the atomic bomb.

Hitler's persecution of the Jews resulted in Germany's destruction as a nation. That is the way malice usually works. It turns upon the one who is malicious and destroys him.

SALT SCATTERED

When Jesus warned His disciples that they were to become the salt of the earth, it is quite probable that they were more or less mystified.

It would have been easy for men who went with the authority of the Roman Empire back of them to believe that they were salting the earth. But refugees, with every man's hand against them, must have found it difficult to believe they were fulfilling a divine destiny.

It is just a little ironical that Germany should have expelled Karl Marx for his radicalism, that France and Belgium should have refused him sanctuary, and that he should have found a home in England and a favorable climate in the British Museum wherein he could continue his studies for 30 years, producing Das Kapital. Then, a century later, his doctrines would return to wreck Gemany and render France so unstable that no government has been able to survive more than a few months or years at most. One wonders what the history of the world might have been like if Germany had treated Marx with good-natured tolerance and indifference. Every biography of the crusty old Alsatian Jew makes it evident that with every rebuff he became more bitter, his combativeness was increased, his hard-handedness of his world.

WORLD OUR MISSION

There was a time not so many years ago when it was a common thing to hear men say that they did not believe in Christian missions. "Those people have a religion that suits them, and we have no right to force our religion down their throats," they said. But recent years have made it inescapably plain that other men's religion is our business.

When Adolph Hitler undertook to corrupt the German people with the diabolical doctrine of geopolitics, he was preparing the dynamite that was to blow this world to bits. We said that it made no difference to us that the German people were beginning to believe. But when our world got upset under German blows, we discovered it did make a difference.

The Uniform Sunday School Lesson Outline" November 25: "PHILIP WILLING EVANGELIST," Acts 8.

When the Japanese war lords taught the Japanese youth that their emperor was divine, we laughed it off as though it were nothing more than something silly. But when we found that "no Jap ever surrenders" because he believed his divine emperor was to receive him into a special Japanese heaven, it be dird a suicide, that changed the complexion of the entire matter.

The thing that made the German, the Italian and the Japanese armies dangerous was not their military equipment, but their theologies. It was what the soldiers believed that made the difference.

It was what the Chinese Communists have been taught to believe that makes them the menace to world peace they are today. Brainwash 600,000,000 Orientals and indoctrinate them with communism, and you have changed the future of the world.

Unless the Christian Church can catch a vision of its world-wide responsibility it will cease to be a world wide-force.

Ottawa, Quebec Reach Agreement On College Grants

1 Per Cent Corporation Tax Seen Key to Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — A way has been found to break the deadlock between the federal government and Quebec over university grants, informants said Friday night.

But it may be some time before the formula is written into law and into the federal-provincial tax rental agreements.

The informants said Premier Antonio Barrette of Quebec and Finance Minister Fleming have agreed in principle that the Quebec government pay the grants from an additional one-per-cent provincial tax on corporation income. The corporations would get a compensating reduction in what they paid their federal corporation income tax.

CLOSE AGREEMENT UNKNOWN

It was not clear when this arrangement would go into effect. The present tax rental agreements run to March 31, 1962. Unless the provinces receive 13 per cent of personal income tax collections, nine per cent of taxable corporation income and 50 per cent of succession duties.

In the light of an agreement between Ottawa and Quebec involving a federal abatement on personal income tax, other provinces could be expected to demand a similar deal. This is the point of contention.

Informants said the card reclaimed the person's age group —14 to 19, 20 to 35, 35 to 50, and over 50 — his school graduation and if married the number of children who are teenaged and younger.

Each person answered for his program preferences from this general, list: News and talks, variety and light music, children's and schools, religious, sports, serious music, drama, farm, panel and "other."

How many cards were returned?

"We've got enough for the thing to start." a CBC official said. He declined to state the number of people involved or their names, but said more names—from the mayors — and more would be added later.

Into CBC head office here.

The corporation has assigned a program category to each person returning a card. Each is given a form on which to write his preferences for the category of programs he wishes, as seen or heard over two one-week periods during next year and ending in late January.

Other than providing 14 programming dates, the CBC does not guide the volunteer critics on what aspects of each program to watch or listen for, and makes clear that they also can comment on any program outside their designated category.

It will be late next spring before results of the polls are tabulated and interpreted by the CBC's audience research director. The pollsters will submit their report to the corporation management, along with recommendations.

To those participating the CBC sent a cover-all information sheet to CBC Times—a weekly publication listing radio and TV program times.

Armchair Critics Of CBC Start Work Next Week

OTTAWA (CP) — Next week the CBC will start putting its armchair critics to work, but it isn't saying how many will be or the job.

The publicly-owned corporation will mail a month ago to some 2,500 people, asking them to join a public-opinion project to "provide us with listener and viewer reaction to all aspects of programming."

Their names had been sought earlier in letters to mayors and other community leaders across Canada, about 30 per cent of whom obliged. The CBC said at the time it was pleased with this response, since survey veterans had predicted only 10 per cent.

HAVE AITKEN STARTED IT

The original idea belonged to Mrs. Dale Aitken of Toronto, a member of the CBC board of directors. She suggested a kind of comment on CBC radio and TV programs that none is available from the full-time critics.

In the follow-up letters these people have been told what they could indicate their willingness to participate in the project in a small questionnaire card.

Information requested on the card included the person's age group —14 to 19, 20 to 35, 35 to 50, and over 50; sex; his school graduation and if married the number of children who are teenaged and younger.

Each person answered for his program preferences from this general, list: News and talks, variety and light music, children's and schools, religious, sports, serious music, drama, farm, panel and "other."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: A trough of low pressure over southern Michigan shows signs of intensification and may produce rain, sleet, sleet or two inches of fresh snow as it moved through South Ontario tonight. In extreme southern sections of the province most of the precipitation will be in the form of very light rain or drizzle. Another weather disturbance that moved inland from the Pacific Friday night is forecast to move rapidly eastward. Accordingly, snow is forecast to spread across Northern Ontario today and to southern Ontario by southern localities by evening.

THREE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH AT KINGSTON

Parents in Hospital Suffering Shock

KINGSTON (CP) — A man watching from the street Friday night saw two children running frantically back and forth in their smoke-filled home a few seconds before they and their baby sister were burned to death.

Dead are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker—Linda Mae, 5, Joanne, 3 and Carolyn, six months old.

Ron Watts, called from a nearby restaurant, said he tried to get the children out by opening a window, but the rush of air from outside fanned the flames and drove him back.

Police officer John Pomeroy tried to force open a picture window in the single-storey frame house but was too only made the flames leap higher.

PARENTS IN HOSPITAL

The parents were in hospital, the mother suffering from shock and her father with superficial face burns.

Mr. Baker is under police guard.

A nearby resident, John Pilmore, was on duty when he store when he saw Mrs. Baker run from the burning duplex. The children were trapped in the house, he said.

Mrs. Baker re-enter the burning house but was forced back by the flames, he said.

Firemen said they could not be sure how the blaze started. They put it out in less than half an hour.

The frame house was attached to a large stone apartment building, also destroyed.

The Baker family moved to Kingston late this summer and were not well known by neighbors.

Death Sentence Is Commuted to Life in Prison

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet has commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence against Imre Dudas, 31, a former Hungarian immigrant convicted in an Ontario retrial last September of the murder of Mrs. Ann Rear-old son.

Dudas had been scheduled to be hanged next Tuesday. He will serve the life term in Kingston Penitentiary.

His first was convicted last March 15, 1958, of the May 15, 1958, of Joseph Junior, who came to Canada from Hungary in 1956 with Takacs and the woman with whom he had been living.

Mrs. Takacs was found in the Takacs home at Fairground, Ont., near Sudbury, by Takacs, when his father had been working. Takacs was convicted. The child had been clubbed and throat cut.

After an appeal to the Ontario Appeal Court, a new trial was ordered and Dudas was again convicted—without a jury recommendation for mercy — but not appeal either this conviction or the sentence.

The commutation was the 27th granted by Governor General the Progressive Conservative government took office in June, 1957. There have been seven executions in that time.

Coupling Explodes

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — John Palmer, 22, of Coldwater, was killed when a steam compressed air exploded a pressure coupling on a Canada hydraulic lift as he was repairing it. Palmer was a mechanic on a Trans-Canada Highway project 120 miles north of Lere.

30,000 Ontario Get Retroactive Increases

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost Friday announced pay increases for Ontario's 30,000 salaried civil servants.

Increases will range between $120 and $500 a year and are retroactive to Oct. 1. They will cost the government an annual $4,500,000.

Some 14,000 casual workers in the civil service are not included in the pay raises.

—Mr. Frost said the government is also studying the basic salary classifications for 10,000 civil servants in the lower and professional groups. These include doctors working for provincial hospitals, government chauffeurs and carpenters. New salary classifications will be announced for this group "within a very short time."

Civil servants getting increases will receive their extra money in December cheques and December in a special cheque before Christmas, Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost said.

"The effect of the increase is to bring the present salary ceiling of the civil service," Mr. Frost said, explaining that one-third of the civil servants had already been at their maximum salaries.

Premier Frost indicated that the government is still not ready to give the civil service full bargaining benefits enjoyed by organized labor.

"We have already recognized it (the Civil Service Association of Ontario) as an official association," he said. "We were not bound to, but we have. They have three members who sit on the joint advisory council and we have given them certain duties and should take place."

Mr. Allan said "completely new grievance procedure" has been worked out with the association.

Harold Bowen, executive secretary of the Civil Service Association, said the increases are welcome but not enough.

Association President W. C. Harper said the increases are "extremely welcome at this time" before Christmas, but the organization would continue to press for adjustments in the future.

"The only thing wrong is that the raise does do not refer to the casual employees who are also responsible for a great deal of money."

Crew of British Ore Carrier Balks at Tow Across Ocean

HALIFAX (CP)—The captain of the crippled ore carrier Westriver today faces a 3,000-mile tow across the Atlantic with more than half his crew planning to stay here.

Twenty-two crew members of the 18,000-ton vessel refused last night they would quit the ship because she is "unseaworthy."

The British vessel, disabled while engine broke the last month, is to be towed to a British shipyard for repair. Only the skeleton crew are expected willing to make the trip. The Westriver's full crew consists of 31 officers and men.

Neil Gillespie of Isle of Bute, Scotland, a spokesman for the crew, said: "We don't want to die in Atlantic ferocity in a derelict."

The crew, all of the United Kingdom, expressed doubt the vessel could complete the cross-ocean.

TOWED THROUGH SEAWAY

The Westriver was towed through the seaway after being delayed about two weeks ago after being towed through the St. Lawrence Canals by the tug Foundation Maritime from Sorel, Que., to Port Arthur, Ont., on Lake Superior, about 12 hours out of Port Arthur with a full cargo of grain for Halifax.

Capt. Charles Thurlow said Friday night he has offered bonuses to the men to make the crossing. He said he will not say how much sign of would be paid. They would be paid, he said, after the transportation home.

An immigration spokesman here said the officials must consult with the department before they can say whether they will let the men left the ship without the department first having consulted they would be detained and deported.

If the vessel is expected to start the long trip behind a tug Sunday, he said.

Tug boat officials said the Westriver could make it in two days, but enough fuel and provisions had been put aboard for 60 days.

RAGS ARE PACKED

They have our rags packed," said Smillie. "We'll leave the ship the moment she's ready to sail."

He said he fears the ship's boilers will break down if the ship can't refuse with any lights or heat. He added he worked on the boilers; they are in bad shape and were not adequate either.

Capt. Thurlow said efforts have been cleared for sailing by port officials, the British Shipping Federation, and the National Union of Seamen, which represents the officers.

A. T. O'Leary and Co. Ltd., Halifax, the ship's local agents, said the dispute is "a matter between the master and his men."

Renewed Steel Strike Likely

WASHINGTON AP) — The Steelworkers Union and the government Friday it had better be prepared for a long strike unless some substantial progress because a renewed steel strike is likely Jan. 25.

Arthur J. Goldberg, the union's general counsel, wrote Commerce Secretary Frederick H. Mueller that present governments steel acquisition policies seemed to be gambling on a labor settlement before the present 89 - day Taft-Hartley injunction runs out.

Windsor Castle Shows His Class In Jumping

TORONTO (CP) — The 31st Royal Winter Fair closes tonight with a clash of color and musical brass and at least five formal presentations.

The $64,000 investment in Windsor Castle by Newmarket breeder Bob Ballard started to pay off Friday night as the eight-year-old gelding won the Federated Equestrian international jumping stake.

Mr. Ballard bought the Canadian-bred horse at last week's New York horse show from Sir Jayne of Chicago. He was a thoroughbred, was in the region of $65,000.

FAULTLESS TRIP

After a disappointing performance on Thursday, Windsor Castle showed his class Friday night as he took the seven-jump 13-jump course in 37.7 seconds with a clean trip.

Another Ballard horse, Gift of Gold, was third. Second was the property of Mrs. Harry Clifford Gibson of Hamilton, whose close Friday was covered by a one-quarter time fault.

The $1,500 Crump roadster stake was won by Mrs. Ann Jones owned by W. H. Lindsay, Campbellford.

McIntyre Ranching Company of Lethbridge, Alta., won the grand championship for market steers, showing cross-breds.

Blue Bell was the grand champion was a shorthorn entered by R. Bell and Sons, Acton West.

MUNICIPALITIES TO GET HEARING AT PARLEY TABLE

Federal, Provincial Govts. to Be Present

OTTAWA (CP) — Municipal officers will be welcome at the conference table with federal and provincial government representatives next summer, Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Friday.

He made the announcement to reporters after a meeting with the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities at which the mayors renewed their proposal for a federal-provincial-municipal conference on re-allocation of tax responsibilities among various levels of government.

The prime minister said the matter of the municipalities' bid for a better tax deal will have to be determined in drawing up the agenda for the meeting, which probably will be held some time in July.

He made it clear that the presence of the municipalities at the conference will be acceptable only if the provincial governments approve. And their demands, said Mr. Diefenbaker, are on the basis that they are the creatures of the provincial governments and the federal government cannot deal directly.

Following the meeting with the prime minister, Mayor Robert Simpson of Armprior, Federation president, said Mr. Diefenbaker has been "receptive" to the problems of the municipalities.

Their recommendations included federal aid for municipal borrowing problems, abolition of the federal withholding tax on municipal securities, municipal securities, tax exemptions on municipal bonds, removal of restrictions on municipal bond issues and a national municipal loan fund.

Mikoyan Says Russia to Send Rocket to Sun

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Russia's Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan says the Soviet Union is preparing to increase its space missile range so that it can reach the sun by launching a rocket "to visit the sun."

Mikoyan, the highest Soviet official ever to appear in a Latin American country, made the remark given in his honor by city officials Friday night that Russia has surpassed the United States in scientific and in economic areas.

"We are not trying to have a monopoly on occupying first place in anything," Mikoyan said. "Let the world!" he demanded in a that drew frequent applause and shouts of "Viva Rusia."

Mikoyan, here for a 10-day visit, said Russia is in over-all to push for more trade with Mexico, implied that Latin American countries owe it to their own to low U.S. leadership.

He made the remarks on his announcement that Soviet scientists expected to launch a missile to the sun.

Montreal Man And 2 Children Found Strangled

Choked With Stockings, Police Question Wife

MONTREAL (CP)—A man and his two daughters, both under five, were found strangled today in an east-end home. The wife of the victim was being taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Names of the victims were not immediately disclosed by police.

They said first indications of the tragedy came when a woman neighbor heard a 9 a.m. and said that her husband and two children had been killed.

Police rushed to the address on east-end Franchere Street and found the bodies in the kitchen. First reports from police said nylon stockings had been looped around the necks of the victims.

It was estimated they had been dead about an hour.

Detective-Lieutenant Henri Francoeur was placed in charge of the investigation.

U.S. Will Make New Try to Catch Space Capsule

VANDENBERG AFB, Calif. (AP)—Air force crews planned another attempt today at man's first mid-air catch of an object from space — a capsule hurled from a satellite.

The secret success—now or later—hinges the first American venture of a human being beyond the earth's atmosphere.

The 300-pound capsule will be ejected from the satellite Discoverer VIII which rocketed into orbit from this west coast base Friday.

Planes are poised for a snag attempt as the capsule parachutes down over the Pacific Ocean. Ejection is set for the satellite's 17th orbital pass, between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. EST tonight.

MONKEY NEXT

Frustrated on four earlier attempts, air force officials said they will keep trying until they clear this hurdle. Once a catch is made, the next step in the plan would be to send a monkey up in a satellite, then try to bring him back alive.

Numerous accidents, several of them causing fatalities, have marred the six-lane 90-speed limit highway linking Leeds and Birmingham since it opened earlier this month.

Dusk was falling Friday as the Queen rode with the prince in his stock green Rolls-Royce as they reach 100 miles an hour.

The speed-loving prince took it easy, however, for the 50 miles an hour.

The couple took the new highway on their way to Luton, 30 miles northeast London, to spend the weekend with wealthy race horse owner Sir Harold Wernher and his wife, Lady Zia.

Traffic was heavy as usual, and the Queen and Prince Philip were not recognized.

SPUR OF MOMENT

The decision to use spur of the moment to take the new highway. No special arrangements were made for the trip, police said. Motorcycle police and motorway officials knew about it before hand.

Queen, Prince Take Drive on Dream Highway

LONDON (AP) — The Queen, expecting her third child early next year, celebrated her 12th wedding anniversary Friday with a drive on Britain's newest motorway, which has been dubbed "the Queen's dream highway" and "death trap."

The Queen's chauffeur was her husband, Prince Philip.

Numerous accidents, several of them causing fatalities, have marred the six-lane 90-speed limit highway linking Leeds and Birmingham since it opened earlier this month.

Jet Jockey Did Not Have Time To Be Scared in 15-Mile Jump

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP)—Flight-surgeon Lou Hilyard says in his 15-mile parachute jump didn't have time—he was too busy, to worry.

Kittinger, a jet jockey turned spaceman in the Strato-Lab, found himself a 4-mile cosmos pig—stepped out of a bucket-like balloon gondola at 76,400 feet over the White Sands missile range this week.

Despite the minus 104-degree-zero cold, he plummeted at nearly 450 miles per hour for about five minutes. Then, still 12,000 feet high, a parachute automatically opened and he floated to the desert in six more minutes.

It was another part in his continuing effort to help develop equipment to bring men back alive from emergencies on the edge of space.

"I didn't have time to worry—" the well-knit, 135-pounder said. "I had so many things to do. This is a research job."

The air force captain said he kept track of the time and altitude "with a physiological reactions" on which he did not elaborate.

He said his pressure suit, equipped with an oxygen system, kept him comfortable "going up and coming down."

The jump was Kittinger's 41st since 1956.

The air force said this was not only the highest parachute jump on record but was the highest man had ever risked on a balloon gondola. The sides of the gondola are stacked with four tons of lead, and it was about 4½ feet in diameter. There was a gap in the wall for Kittinger to take that first big step.

Balloon ascents, as well as parachute jumps, are old stuff to Kittinger. His first jump was at training for the air force's first operation Man High ascent. That was in a sealed metal gondola in 1957. He rose to 96,000 feet to test some about equipment to carry man into space.

Californian Family of Six All Ill With Mysterious Arsenic Poisoning

COVINA, Calif. (AP)—The mysterious arsenic poisoning of a family of six has investigators baffled.

Five of the six have become ill in the last few months. The sixth, Ben Holt, has more arsenic than anyone in the family.

But, ask puzzled health and police officials, where is the poison coming from?

Mrs. Nancy Holt, 27, started suffering stomach cramps, leg pains, and a high temperature — the symptoms of arsenic poisoning — last May, five months after they moved into a new home. Several weeks in a hospital she came home ever.

Now she's ailing again.

One by one the children have come down with the same thing. They are Ben, 10; Mary Darlene, 7; Cynthia, 5, and Constance, 4.

Holt, 31, is a baker. Officers said his uniform was found to contain 30 milligrams of arsenic, compared with 300 milligrams in his wife's body.

"It's awfully strange," Holt said, "especially when we can't get the health department or the sheriff's office to really check. If I was responsible for anybody, they would be out here with both feet.

The county health department and sheriff announced a full-scale investigation after the family plight was made public Friday.

The health department declared the family's pots and pans without success.

Authorities recalled the arsenic poisoning of Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce in July three years ago. The arsenic was traced to paint peeling off the bedroom ceiling.

A physician said Mrs. Holt and the children are not to pay immediate danger of dying from arsenic poisoning.

Sheriff's officers said they have no reason to suspect foul play, but are not ruling out the possibility. Holt said he knows of no enemies.

"I believe it's in the house somewhere, maybe in the paint," he said.

Why don't they move?

"I can't afford to," he said.

Ottawa, Quebec Reach Agreement On College Grants

1 Per Cent Corporation Tax Seen Key to Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — A way has been found to break the deadlock between the federal government and Quebec over university grants, informed sources said tonight.

But it may be some time before the formula is written into law and into the federal-provincial tax rental agreements.

The informants said Premier Antonio Barrette of Quebec and Finance Minister Fleming have agreed in principle that the Quebec government pay the grant from an additional one-per-cent provincial tax on corporation income. The corporations would get a corresponding abatement in the federal tax paid their federal corporation income tax.

TIME ELEMENT UNKNOWN

It was not clear when this arrangement would go into effect.

Mr. Fleming has said the current tax rental agreements with the other provinces will continue to run until March 31, 1962. Under these the provinces receive 9 per cent of personal income tax collections, nine per cent of corporation income taxes and 50 per cent of succession duties.

In the light of an agreement between Ottawa and Quebec involving a federal abatement on corporation taxes, the provinces could be expected to demand a concurrent boost in the nine per cent of federal tax collections to come to 10 per cent.

Mr. Fleming said the Quebec deal was favorable. Premier Frost of Ontario said he is in very definite step in the right direction" and is in line with Ontario's recommendations on the subject.

Quebec universities have refused the federal grants since 1953 because the provincial government objected to them on the ground they invaded the provincial jurisdiction over education.

Mr. Frost took a similar view Friday night in commenting on reports of the new plan.

INFRINGEMENT CLAIMED

The Ontario premier said he and they had done much good, he said, "nevertheless in their administration there has undoubtedly been an infringement upon provincial responsibility."

The premier said an additional $20,000,000 in university grants in Ontario would exceed the $1.50 per capita payment on which the federal government has been based and the excess would have to be made up from some other federal payment to the province.

The federal grants are paid through the National Conference of Canadian Universities, which now holds the view that Quebec universities $17,500,000 in grants since 1951 and since that time $20,000 will be added to this by the end of the current fiscal year.

Finishing touches to the new plan were understood to have been completed at a federal conference in Quebec between Mr. Fleming and Mr. Sauve.

Armchair Critics Of CBC Start Work Next Week

OTTAWA (CP) — Next week the CBC will start putting its armchair critics to work, but that isn't saying how many will be on the job.

The publicly-owned corporation wrote a month ago to more than 2,500 people, asking them to join a public-opinion project to "provide us with listener and viewer reaction to all aspects of programming."

Their names had been sought earlier in letters to mayors and other community leaders across Canada, about 30 per cent of whom obliged. The CBC said at the time it was pleased with this response, since survey veterans had predicted only 10 per cent.

KATE AITKEN STARTED IT

The original idea belonged to Mrs. Kate Aitken of Toronto, a member of the CBC board of directors. She wanted to get a comment on CBC radio and TV programs than now is available from the letters that arrive.

In the follow-up letters to these people last month, the CBC said they could indicate their willingness to participate by returning a small questionnaire card.

Information sought on the card included the age group — under —16 to 19, 20 to 35, 35 to 50, and over 50 — as well as sex, occupation and if married the number of children who are teenaged and younger.

Each person was asked for his program preferences from the list general, list: News and talks, variety and light music, children's and schools, religious, sports, serious music, drama, farm, panel and "other."

How many cards were returned?

"We've got enough for the thing to start," a CBC official said. He declined to state the number of people involved or their names — but said many names — from the mayors — and more names will be added to the list into CBC head office here.

The corporation has established a program category to each person returning a card. Each is given a form on which he is to write his marks on that category of programs — or others, he wishes — as seen or heard over two one-week periods starting next week and ending in late January.

Other than providing if programming slips, the CBC does not guide the volunteer critics on what aspects they should look for, watch or listen for, and makes clear that they also are not present on any program outside their designated category.

It will be some time next spring before results of the poll are tabulated and interpreted by the CBC's audience research director. The pollsters will submit their report to the corporation management, along with recommendations.

To those participating the CBC sent a questionnaire in addition to CBC Times—a weekly publication listing radio and TV program times.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: A weak system moving across Michigan shows signs of intensification and was expected to yield one or two inches of wet snow as it moved through Southern Ontario today. In extreme southern sections of the province most of the precipitation will be in the form of very light rain or drizzle. Another weather disturbance that moved inland from the Pacific Friday night is forecast to move rapidly eastward. Accordingly, snow is forecast to spread across Northern Ontario Sunday. Possibly colder in southern localities by evening.

THREE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH AT KINGSTON

Parents in Hospital Suffering Shock

KINGSTON (CP) — A man watching from the street Friday night saw two children running frantically back and forth in their smoke-filled home a few seconds before they and their sister were burned to death.

Dead are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker—Billie Mae, 5, Joanne, 2 and Carolyn, four months old.

Ron Watts, called from a nearby restaurant, said he tried to force open a locked door and window, but the rush of flame and smoke drove him back.

Police officer John Pomeroy tried to force open a picture window in the single-storey frame house but that too only made the flames leap higher.

PARENTS IN HOSPITAL

The parents are in hospital, the mother suffering from shock and the father with superficial face burns.

Mr. Baker is under police guard.

A nearby resident, John Pilsner, was on his way to a store when he saw Mrs. Baker in the street screaming that her children were in the house. He broke in the door.

Firemen said they could not be sure how the blaze started in the frame and tin one-storey building which contained the children.

The Baker family moved to Kingston late this summer and were not well known by neighbors.

Death Sentence Is Commuted to Life in Prison

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet has commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence against Joseph Tahara, 54 - year - old Hungarian immigrant convicted in an Ontario retrial last September of the first degree murder of his 19-year-old son.

Tahara had been scheduled to be hanged next Tuesday. He will serve life term in Kingston Penitentiary.

He first was convicted last March 1958, of Joseph Junior, who came to Canada with Tahara and his wife in 1956. Tahara and the woman with whom he had been living.

The body of the boy was found in the Takaco home at Fairground, 19 miles northeast of St. Thomas, where his father had been working as travelling suntor beats. The child had been beaten and his throat cut.

After an appeal to the Ontario Appeal Court, a new trial was ordered and Tahara again was convicted—without a jury recommendation for mercy — last September. The court did not appeal either this conviction or the sentence.

The commutation was the 37th to be granted since the Progressive Conservative government took office in June, 1957. There have been seven executions in that time.

30,000 Ontario Civil Servants Get Retroactive Pay Increases

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost Friday announced pay increases for Ontario's 30,000 salaried civil servants.

Increases will range between $120 and $360 a year and are retroactive to Oct. 1. They will cost the government an annual $4,300,000.

Some 14,000 casual workers in the civil service are not included in the pay raises.

Mr. Frost said the government is also studying the basic salary classifications for 10,000 civil servants in the lower and professional groups. These include doctors working in provincial hospitals, government chauffeurs and carpenters. New salary schedules for these will be announced for this group "within a very short time."

Civil servants getting increases will receive their extra money in their pay cheques and Dec. 15 member in a special cheque before Christmas, Provincial Treasurer Allan Grossman said.

"The effect of the increase is to make the present salary ceiling of the civil service," Mr. Frost said, explaining that one-third of the civil servants had already been at their maximum salaries.

Premier Frost indicated that the government is still not ready to give the civil service full bargaining benefits enjoyed by organized labor.

"We have already recognized the (Civil Service Association of Ontario) as an official association," he said, "We were not bound to, but we have. They have been given an ear in all of the joint advisory councils—and that's where the consultation does and should take place."

Mr. Allan said "completely new grievance procedures" have been worked out with the association.

Harold Bowen, executive secretary of the Civil Service Association, said the increases are welcome but not enough.

Association President W. C. Harper said the increases are "particularly good" for before Christmas, but the organization would continue to press for additional pay increases.

"The only thing wrong is that these raises do not refer to the casual employees who are also desperately in need of more money."

MUNICIPALITIES TO GET HEARING AT PARLEY TABLE

Crew of British Ore Carrier Balks at Tow Across Ocean

HALIFAX (CP)—The captain of the crippled ore carrier Westriver today faces a 3,000-mile tow across the Atlantic with more than half his crew planning to stay here.

Twenty-two crew members of the 18,000-ton vessel disabled Wednesday night they would quit the ship because she is "unseaworthy."

The British vessel, disabled when its boilers broke for the last month, is to be towed to a British shipyard for repair. Only the captain and seven men will sail with it to make the trip. The Westriver's full crew consists of 37 officers and men.

Neil Smith of Isle of Bute, Scotland, a spokesman for the crew, said "We don't want to risk an Atlantic crossing in that derelict."

The crew, all of the United Kingdom, expressed doubt the vessel could complete the crossing.

TOWED THROUGH SEAWAY

The Westriver was towed for about two weeks ago after being towed through the St. Lawrence Seaway from the port of Fort William on Lake Superior, about 12 hours out of Halifax when the tow line parted in gram for Halifax.

Capt. Chris Thurlow said Friday night he has offered bonuses to the men to make the crossing. However, there was no sign any of would be paid. They refused to sail further over unseaworthiness.

An Immigration spokesman here said there was no immediate suit with the department before Immigration Minister E. Davis Fulton. If the men left the ship without the department's permission, deportation they would be detained and deported.

The vessel is expected to start the long trip behind a tug Sunday or Monday.

Tug boat officials said the journey would take about 10 days, but enough fuel and provisions had been put aboard for 60 days.

BAGS ARE PACKED

Crew have our bags packed," said Smith, "and we'll leave the ship the moment she's ready to sail."

He said he fears the ship's boilers will break down, leaving the craft without any lights or heat. He added he worked on the boilers for three weeks. Likewise they were not adequate either.

Capt. Thurlow said the ship had been cleared for sailing by port authorities, the British Shipping Federation, and the National Union of Seamen, which represented the crew.

A. T. O'Leary and Co. Ltd., Halifax ship brokers, which chartered the ship, said the dispute is "a matter between the master and his men."

Renewed Steel Strike Likely

WASHINGTON AP) — The Steelworkers have advised the government Friday it had better get stockpiling under way for defense purposes because a renewed steel strike is likely Jan. 26.

Arthur J. Goldberg, the union's general counsel, wrote Commerce Secretary Frederick H. Mueller that present government steel acquisition policies seemed to be gambling on a labor settlement before the present 80 - day Taft-Hartley injunction runs out.

Windsor Castle Shows His Class In Jumping

TORONTO CP) — The 21st Harvest Winter show closes tonight with a clash of color and mounted brass and at least five formal presentations.

The season's investment in Windsor Castle by Newmarket breeder Bob Ballard started to pay off Friday night as the eight-year-old gelding won the Federated Equestrian international jumping stakes.

Mr. Ballard purchased the Canadian-bred horse at last week's sale. Owner Bruce Shaw from Si Jayne of Chicago. Windsor Castle, though secret, was in the top half 560 pounds.

FAULTLESS TRIP

After a disappointing performance earlier in the week, Windsor Castle showed his class Friday night in the $1,000 event when his 13-jump course in 37.7 seconds was faultless.

Another Ballard horse, Gift of Gold, was third. Second was the mount, owned by Mrs. Harry Gibson of Hamilton, whose clear trip was covered by a one-quarter time fault.

The $1,500 Crump roadster pair class was won by W. H. Lindsay, Campbellford.

McIntyre Ranching Company, Lethbridge, Alta., won the Canadian championship for market steers, showing cross-breds.

The Hereford championship was a shorthorn entered by R. Bell, Lloydminster, Sask.

The Hereford top winner was Bell Vet of Lloydminster. Reigndean Angus class fell to John Hepburn of Campbellville.

The Shorthorn champion, Campbellville, owns the grand champion red bull, Bapton Echo Minstrel 2nd. Leonard W. Coulson of Milton had the champion female and reserve female classes. In steer carcasses competition, J. McKinnon & Sons, Edmonton, won the named champion.

BREEDER DOES WELL

Alberta's total awards at the show rose to 450 when the prize-winning breeder and exhibitor ribbons for Herefords went to Charles J. Kallal of Torfield.

J. H. Atkinson of Nanticoke, Ont., had the champion Canadian male and senior champion female entries of dual-purpose shorthorns. He also won the premier exhibitor award.

Allan Wallace and Son, Courtland, had the named premier breeder.

The supreme champion plate was won by Roy Fry and Sons of Dorset Law, with his entry Red Raccoman.

S. G. Bennet of Georgetown, had special titles in the shorthorns class.

MIKOYAN SAYS Russia to Send Rocket to Sun

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Russia's Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan says the Soviet Union is preparing to increase its space missile range to the moon and Mars by launching a rocket "to visit the sun."

Mikoyan, the highest Soviet official ever to appear in a Latin American country, said the news was given in his honor by city officials Friday night that Russia has current plans for "more and more scientific and in economic areas."

"We are not going to have a monopoly on occupying first place in science," Mikoyan declared. "Is it in the world?" he demanded in a that drew frequent applause and cheers from the crowd.

Mikoyan, here for a 10-day visit, declared he is ever-ready to push for more trade with Mexico, implied that Latin American countries are prepared to launch a missile to the sun.

Montreal Man And 2 Children Found Strangled

Choked With Stockings, Police Question Wife

MONTREAL (CP)—A man and his two daughters, both under five, were found strangled today in a suburban home. The wife and mother of the victims was taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Names of the victims were not immediately disclosed by police.

They said first indication of the tragedy came when a woman telephoned about 9 a.m. and said that her husband and two children were dead.

Police rushed to the address on east-end Pontiac Street and found the bodies in a bedroom. First reports from police said nylon stockings were found around the necks of the victims. It was estimated they had been dead about an hour.

MONKEY NEWS

Frustrated on four earlier attempts, the air force officials said they will keep trying until they get this mission. Once a capsule is made, the next logical step would be to send a monkey up in a satellite, eject it and bring it back alive.

The all intended to pave the way for a man's round trip late orbit. The capsule is similar to that which would probably be used in a human flight.

The satellite is orbiting the poles at distances ranging from 100 to 1,000 miles from the earth. It was blasted aloft by a three-stage intermediate-range ballistic missile shortly before midnight Friday. Only the 17-foot second stage, weighing 1,700 pounds, went into orbit.

Five of seven previous Discoverers have orbited. Capsules were ejected from Discoverers II, V and VI. Number III failed to get timing device On V and VI the capsule's radio beacon failed. Discoverer IV was a total failure which prevented ejection.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The navy fired an advanced test version of the Polaris ballistic missile Friday and reported it was "highly successful."

The missile, of the type scheduled to be carried by atomic-powered submarines next year, flew more than 900 miles.

Apples Remain In Good Supply On Market Here

Apples were still in plentiful supply at the local farmers' market on the market square this morning, Saturday, as usual.

Possibly due to the cool and cloudy weather prevailing, customers were slow in "in limited supply."

Apples were selling at 50c to 85c a basket depending on variety, and from $1.50 to $2.50 a bushel. McIntosh were selling for 50c and 75c a basket; Spies, 60c; Talman Sweets, 60c and 75c; and Spys and Delicious, 85c. By the bushel Macs were selling for $2.50; Spys, $3; and Delicious $3 and $3.50.

Cider was selling from 10c a small bottle, to $1 a gallon.

Potatoes, Cabbage and Sabbage, were in good supply, and were selling for 40c and 50c a basket, and $2.50 a bushel.

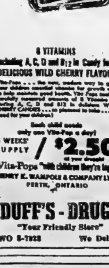
Cooking onions were selling for 60c a basket, and Spanish Onions were on sale at 80c a basket, three pails for 50c a basket and $1.50 a bushel. Fiemish Beauty pears, in limited supply, were selling for 35c a berry box and $1 a basket. Other produce was as follows: cabbages and turnips, 10c and 15c each; beets and carrots, 25c a half peck; parsnips, 35c a half peck; butternut and table queen squash, 10c and 25c.

Fresh dressed capons and fowl were on sale at 60c a pound and inside market, at 40c a pound for capons and 35c a pound for fowl.

Eggs, per dozen, sold at the following prices: large, 45c; medium, 40c, and small, 35c.

Probably the most appealing items on the market this morning were three cute little ducks, and ten fox terrier puppies begging for a good home. The pups, all mairs, were selling for $15 apiece.

Pretty pansies, in white, yellow and pale mauve color, were selling for 75c a bunch, while other cut flowers were priced at 50c a bunch.



The usual assortment of home baking and other articles were on sale at the inside market.

Council Appoints Local Firm As City Auditor, Fills Position Of Treasurer, Not of Solicitor

Acting quickly on the wording of Mayor Harold R. Hyde, who declared earlier this week that "after check" would result in city hall taking on new city auditor and city treasurer were not appointed individually, the Belleville city council at a special meeting Friday afternoon moved to fill both positions, one of them temporarily.

The auditing firm of George A. Welch and Company of Oshawa, with offices at Belleville, was named as city auditor, while John Canning, accountant with the same firm was named acting treasurer.

Mayor Gerald Hyde proposed amendments to the two appointing by-laws, calling for Fred Page Higgins and Co., Toronto, to be named as city auditors and George Canning, accountant with the same firm to be named as acting treasurer.

Thirteen men were nominated to run for the five position of controller, while there are two for the office of mayor and three for the one position on public utilities. Nominees have until nine o'clock this evening to qualify while the election will be November 30th.

Nominated for council were the five current members, Herbert Howard, Gerald Ellis, Jack Charlton, Jack Spence and Maurice Detlor, together with Albert Hawkins, Albert Marks, A. H. Stubbs, Ronald Donald Dawson and Fred Ley, Ed. Roach and Allen Aylesworth.

Nominated for the office of reeve was incumbent Harry Allford and Edward Cumby. A new controller to the Deseronto municipal field.

For public utilities commission incumbent Frank Topping, Donald Dawson and Fred Stevenson were nominated.

Mayor Acclaimed At Deseronto, 13 for Council

Although acclamations have been accorded for the position of Mayor and schools board in the town of Deseronto, election appears assured for seven, town council and public utilities commission.

At nomination meeting Friday night acclamation was accorded Mayor Harry F. Wannamaker, who has headed town council since mid-1958, and school board members—were Alex B. Harvey, Estelle Jackson and Myrtle Harris.

Lyle Vencliel, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vancliel of Ameliasburg, has won Prince Edward County 4-H Club championship. He defeated 120 club members to become top junior dairy showman and reserve champion livestock showman. (Hodgson, Picton.)

Lloyd Spencer, 16, of Redmersville, Ontario, is Ontario junior livestock showman of the Edward County 4-H Club. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald K. Spencer, he competed against more than 100 4-H Club members in the Picton district to win the award. (Hodgson, Picton).

Communist China Seen as Apt Student of Old Kremlin School

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Communist China is showing more and more signs of being an apt student of the old Kremlin school of international diplomacy.

This is the school that, until Soviet Premier Khrushchev introduced his latest peace campaign, specialized in keeping the world fear burning throughout the world.

To do this, one emergency after another was sparked following the end of World War Two in Europe, in the Middle East, in the Far East. Then back to trouble in Europe.

As soon as the ashes of one crisis cooled another was being fanned.

PEKING AGGRESSIVE

But now that Khrushchev's peace drive has calmed moments, Red China has specialized—lag, although not necessarily backing down on, many of the issues that have caused it to throw the gauntlet in the West's face.

There has been no soft-pedalling by Peking's Communists' China has been coming through loudly and clearly—and aggressively—since the invitation sense.

In the last two years, Red China has been at the root of three major international crises: Quemoy and Matsu, the Laos civil war and Indonesian border disputes. Now a church one may be in the making in troubled Indonesia.

Peking's accusation turning on Indonesia that the chief culprit, dor, issued last May, that Chinese-born residents, who control the island republic's rural economy, sell out and move to designated cities by Jan. 1.

Now, seven months after the order was issued, Indonesia has termed it unfriendly and accused Indonesia of pushing an "anti-Chinese movement." It could seriously harm friendly relations between the two countries unless withdrawn, the Red Chinese Embassy said.

UPSET ECONOMY

The Indonesian foreign office said the move was necessary because Chinese merchants could upset the national economy by their control over goods and prices.

Indonesia is not ready to sacrifice the economic welfare of 98,000,000 Indonesians to protect a "small group" of Chinese traders, Foreign Minister Subandrio said.

He also said that pressing security problems made the action essential. He declined to elaborate on this point, but an informed Indonesian source said the government feared that Peking had been planning to work through Chinese traders to sabotage the republic's economy.

Destruction of Indonesia's already shaky economy would leave the country ripe for revolt or external take-over. Economic dissatisfaction was a major factor in causing a dissident group to set up a revolutionary government in West Sumatra and the Celebes early in 1958.

Although the Indonesian government succeeded in crushing that uprising within a few months discontent still is strong throughout the islands.

There is no way of telling at the moment whether Red China's actually hopes to be able to take over the island republic—or even though must be attractive with its wealth of untapped natural resources and its strategic position.

But the Chinese move is certain to bring still more fear and tension to countries living under Red China's shadow.

Clarke R. Brown, Formerly of Tweed, Dies

Clarke Robert Brown, formerly of Tweed, and prominent in civic, political and social life of that community for many years, before moving to this city four years ago, died suddenly at his home, 235 Bleecker Ave., Belleville, early Friday morning. He had been an invalid for many years from arthritis, and apparently died from a heart attack.

Mr. Brown was born in Rawdon township, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Brown and in his early life took up farming which he followed for some years. During World War One broke out, Mr. Brown immediately joined the overseas forces as a signaller with, the 45th Batt'y, 7th Brigade and served with distinction in France. Upon discharge he returned to Tweed and immediately entered into the life of the community.

Before his illness he was a baseball and hockey star in the old Tweed days and had a great love for the two pastimes and gave a great deal of ability in promoting these two sports as an executive member. He was also keenly interested in the Fair Board at Tweed and for many years was secretary. Politically he was identified with the Conservative party and acted as secretary of the local association for some years.

His public service was in the veterans' organizations and as a member of the Tweed Lodge he took an active interest in A.F. and A.M. and was past president of the Veterans' Association at Tweed and since coming to Belleville was an active member of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, although not able to attend the meetings.

Personally he was a member of Tweed Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 229 and had been for that lodge. He was also a member of the Tweed Curling Association of this district. In his church life he was a member of St. John's United Church of Tweed and since coming to the city was a member with Bridge St. United Church.

He was a man of a kindly nature, a firm friend and endured his disability with a smile. His cheerfulness always had a wide circle of friends, who will sincerely regret his sudden death.

Surviving are his wife, the former Ann Rath; one brother, Harry Brown of Toronto, two sisters, Mrs. Jessie Wannamaker and Miss Violet Bown, both of Tweed.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon with interment in Tweed Funeral Home, with interment in Victoria cemetery at Tweed.

Cheese Price Falls Sharply

Cheese prices took a sudden drop on the Kingston Cheese Exchange this week with the boards selling ranging from 32 1-2 and 37 3-16 cents for top grade colored.

In all there were 14,471 cheese offered on the exchange, including 5,284 colored, 5,287 white, and 2,740 colored. First grade white cheese ranged in price from 33 to 37 1-4 cents with a average of 36 1-4 cents. All Stanford this week no cheese was sold as buyers bid only 35 cents.

Next meeting of the Kingston exchange will be on December 4th.

IN MEMORIAM

REEVES. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1958.

A wonderful mother, woman and friend.

One who was better, God never sent us down.

One in a million, that mother will always be.

Sadly missed by daughter Hazel.

Honour thy liberal, ever sainted,
Loved by your friends unfeigned, unfeigned.
A wonderful mother, God rest mother dear.

Sadly remembered by daughter Grace, Speedy, Buddy, Gordon and Jean.

REEVES. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1958.

The deaths of sweet mothers are not few,
The sorrows of such are all alike;
But yours was more than common woe,
You had a husband's death to see.
God only knows the love we bore,
The grief we hide can ne'er be told;
You left us all a legacy of love,
A memory dear we hold.
Lonely indeed for her daughter Ruth.

REEVES. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1958.

To do not need a special day
To think of you in a time of year,
For the days I need to find
Are all old memories, mine to give,
I'll give it, you, and more,
For I'll remember you, dear,
Come smiling through the years.
Sadly missed by her daughter Evelyn remembered by Gordon and Jean.

REEVES. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Agnes Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1958.

There is no parting from those we love,
No farewell word we say,
For today in memory's garden,
We walk and talk each day.
Each dawning day's a thought of her,
And in the sunset, too,
And in the hours I pray,
I'm sure to meet with you;
Sadly remembered by daughter Helen, Carl and Bob.

BAILEY. — In loving memory of our dear mother, Florence Bailey, who passed away November 21st, 1958.

Your years have passed, since that sad day,
When our dear grandmother was called away.
God took her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
Sadly remembered by grandchildren Marvin and Ron Hill, Donald and Ronald.

Business Women Told of Efforts To Aid Refugees

TRENTON — The November meeting of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club was held Wednesday night in the Gilbert Hotel, with a large number of members present.

Miss Hazel Farley spoke to the group on the subject of the World Refugee Year." Miss Farley recalled that at the end of World War II, men of the race world had vowed that never again would the horrifying conditions which existed in concentration camps during the war be allowed on the face of the globe. That has actually happened is that these conditions have been duplicated in the treatment of thousands of refugees, who have no desire to return to their homes behind the Iron Curtain, but for whom no other homes have been provided except the over-crowded, ill-kept refugee camps. It is estimated that some 40 million refugees live in squalid, deplorable conditions in European camps. Other millions are in similar plight in Asia. These people have been forgotten and left to rot.

Countries, such as Canada, Holland, Denmark and France, have taken the "cream of the crop," but the handicapped, or persons suffering from illness, have been denied admission to enter these countries.

Since the inception of the World Refugee Year, many countries have reconsidered their stand in relation to these unfortunate human beings.

Chris Chataway, the British athlete, was the instigator and the first drive to aid the refugees. The United Nations passed a resolution that 1959-60 would be set aside to focus world attention on their plight.

QUOTES DIEFENBAKER

The speaker quoted from a speech made by Prime Minister John Diefenbaker on June 28th, "This problem cannot be left to be solved by governments alone, it calls for the sympathy and understanding and active assistance of people in those countries where such experiences are not known."

Canada has contracted to take 100 refugees suffering from tuberculosis, Miss Farley said, stating that our sanitoriums have ample room and facilities to help them regain their health.

Miss Farley concluded by urging the club members to make their influence to provide homes for some of these people. She said that we, in a land of plenty, should not pass by like the Pharisees of old, and ignore these suffering millions.

Following Miss Farley's address, Mrs. Fay Jeffrey gave a report on the recent North Bay conference, which had been attended by a number of members from Trenton.

President Jenny Wills announced that she had placed a wreath on the cenotaph on Remembrance Day for the Trenton club.

Mrs. Mary Thompson sang the beautiful "Lest We Forget."

Draws were won by Miss Bessie McGibbon, Mrs. Clarke, a guest from Cobourg, and Mrs. Nina Read.

Kiwanis Caucus Plans Are Made

TRENTON — The regular weekly dinner meeting of the Trenton Kiwanis Club was held Thursday night in the Gilbert Hotel. The president, vice-president and two other officers of the West Trenton club were in attendance.

Among the topics discussed at the dinner was the forthcoming Lieutenant - Governor's Caucus, which will be held at the Dutch Mill Inn next Wednesday, November 25th. Present at the caucus, which will be an all-day session, will be presidents and presidents-elect of clubs in points in District 11A, including Belleville, Kingston, Port Hope, Madoc and other centres.

Elected Hour is the time for all

Following the dinner meet, the members were taken on a conducted tour of the Dehl Gelatin plant, where Manager Ben Krouse explained the manufacture of the plant's products.

TO VISIT TRENTON

TRENTON — Mr. H. W. Moyer, Legion Service Bureau Officer from Ottawa, will be at the Legion Branch No. 110 on Monday, November 23rd, 1959, from 5.00 p.m. until completion of interviews, to give skilled advice on veterans' benefits. Anyone with questions on war disability, pension, war veterans' allowances (burnt out pension), treatment or hospital care is urged to call or write Branch 110's Service Bureau representative, Mr. Jim Patterson, who will arrange an appointment.

Report Is Made By Parks Board To Town Council

TRENTON — Miss Marion Baker, secretary of the Parks Board, has compiled a report of the board's activities and expenditures for the past year. This report has been forwarded to Trenton council.

The most ambitious project undertaken by the board last year was the installation of the underground sprinkler system, controlled by an automatic timing device, in Fraser Park, the Library grounds and Bayshore Extension. Water for this system is supplied by the Public Utilities Commission, but water could be drawn from the bay in the event of a shortage of town water."

The board has been responsible for the construction of a 100-foot cement retaining wall on Gilmour Hill. The entire area was seeded, and flower beds have been relocated. The East Trenton Girl Guides planted through vandalism, a supply of cement-end blocks were purchased and will be located in the parks as the spring.

Other projects accomplished by the board were the construction of concrete steps in front of the Municipal Building, with permission granted for the planting and placement of the flagpole at the Gilmour Hill park and the installation of a new water system in Champlain Park, High Park, the library and Hanna Park and Gilmour Hill Park.

General maintenance has been undertaken, hired by him carried out by Bart Boers and under the terms of an agreement. The board expressed complete satisfaction with Mr. Boer's work in the 1959 season.

During the tourist season, the board employed George Jones as attendant in Hanna Park, where he is now in the needs of trailer owners there.

The board is in the process of formulating plans for the Winter Works Program, although it is not expected to be extensive this year.

The Allison Park area will be developed immediately, preparatory to spring seeding. Landscaping of the Bayshore Extension has been planned for the spring accounts of the board will be submitted for audit at the end of the fiscal year.

Trenton Youth Escapes With Shaking Up

An 18-year-old Trenton youth, Gerald Albert Defoney, escaped with a shaking up early this morning when his car rolled into the ditch on No. 33 highway near Glen Miller when he was blinded by the lights of an approaching auto.

Police said the youth was northbound when he lost control after being blinded by the approaching lights. Damage to the car was estimated at approximately $400.

Earlier on the 4th of Thurlow west of Canniffon John B. Willoughby, Trenton, was involved in a minor car accident. Damage was estimated at less than $100.

Orono Man Killed

NEWCASTLE (CP)—An Orono man was killed when his auto crashed into a CPR passenger train at a level crossing near here today.

Part of one CPR car was derailed, holding up both eastbound and westbound traffic, but the railway said the track should be cleared "within minutes."

There was no flashing wig-wag signals at the crossing, about 15 miles east of Oshawa.

Name of the victim was not disclosed.

FOUND SLAIN IN CHURCH — The body of 11-year-old Lynn Lefurgey (inset) of Calgary is carried from First Church of the Nazarene shortly after it was found. Police say the pretty schoolgirl, daughter of Mrs. Muriel Lefurgey, was raped and then killed. The body was found in the men's washroom of the mid-town church. A teen-age boy seen hanging around the church about 12 hours before the body was found is being sought by police. The Lefurgey family came to Calgary from Saskatoon several years ago. (CP Photo).

Scouting activities

By CHRIS F. LEGGAT

CANNIFTON—CORBYVILLE

A well-filled church welcomed the Scouts with Scoutmaster Sam Kerr and the newly formed Cub Pack under the leadership of Mrs. Eddy Middleton, it was a proud moment for those who had worked so long to raise the pack. There are over fifteen Cubs at this early date.

The Padre, Rev. J. McCartney, challenged the boys to be "prepared" at all times. He mentioned outstanding examples of law the disciples were prepared to carry out the Commandments and wishes of Our Lord. St. Paul devoted his life and suffered imprisonment for the teaching of the gospel. Mr. McCartney told the Cubs they should be prepared to accept responsibilities and if they obeyed the Scout law and did as their leader instructed them they would be better citizens and a credit to their Pack and Troop. While the Padre addressed the boys his sermon was applicable to the whole congregation. There is no doubt we all left with a deep sense of appreciation and admiration for the new minister. A musical item address delivered in simple terms.

We noticed Mrs. Furmidge and the auxiliary and many others have pledged assistance to the Cubs and Scouts.

QUEEN'S SCOUTS

Regional Commissioner A. S. Lewis presided at the Queen's Scouts Recognition ceremony which was held at Cobourg.

Scoutmaster John Babiak proudly presented Queen's Scouts Barry Simpson and Bob Wesse of the 6th Tabernacle group to the Honorable J. Keiller Mackay, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, who presented the Queen's Scouts certificates to the Scouts.

Belleville District Council was represented by District Commissioner Phil Allcorn, president F. Lancaster and secretary J. Hodgson.

DISTRICT STAFF

Boy Scouts Commissioner Phil Allcorn announces Staff appointments as follow: Mr. William Sweet is assistant commissioner of Cubs for the central and west district and Mr. Robert Williamson is assistant commissioner for Scouts of the same two districts which are east of the Moira. Mr. Lefurgey, was raped and then killed. The body was found in the men's washroom of the mid-town church. A teen-age boy seen hanging around the church about 12 hours before the body was found is being sought by police. The Lefurgey family came to Calgary from Saskatoon several years ago. (CP Photo).

Lions to Hold Christmas Party For the Needy

The regular meeting of the Lions Club of Belleville was held at the Sheiks Club, Thursday evening, with President Bill Lowers in the chair. Lion Fred Colden introduced the guests, Fred Catton, Bill Smith, Ben Corne, and Gene Drummond and Tom Forin from the Trenton Club.

The president thanked Lion Al Rydman and Arl Bryant for the excellent job done in making up a newspaper for the club, in handy pocket size. Lion Rogers Ness was also thanked for his efforts in running a very successful "Ladies Nite" dance on November 5th at the Club Canara.

"A motion was passed to forego the normal Christmas party for the children of Lions Club members and instead to hold one for needy children. It was also passed that a Christmas raffle would be held for baskets and turkeys, the draw to be made on December 20th.

Twenty members of the club were presented with 100 percent attendance pins for the 1958 - 59 season by Lion Drew Dixon. In addition, those members having one or more years perfect attendance were awarded with the appropriate chevron. One year chevron — Lions Gerry Brennan, Bob Knox and John Henderson. Two year chevron — Lion Bob Cox. Three year chevron — Lions Al Bryant, Bill Corson. Four year chevron — Lions Jack Dyble, Don Raymond, Al Rydman, Jim Seeking, Ed Grimson and Bill King. Five year chevron — Lions Tom Colden, Pinder, John Brenner, Bob Scott and George Stratton. Six year chevron — Lion Ivy Collins, Harvey Frid and Harry Gibson.

Zone chairman Jack Dyble announced that the Campbellford club would visit Belleville at the meeting of January 20th and urged all members to be out.

Juniors Suffer First Loss, Bow to Peterborough 5-0

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — Ron Hooton's high powered Lakes Division racked up their third victory in as many starts at Memorial Gardens Friday night, as they defeated Belleville Lumbert Rollies 5-0 in an unexciting clash of Junior B hockey struggle.

Victory enabled the red, white and blue Lions to perch alone atop the Eastern Ontario League, having downed Kingston, Picton and the Quinteners, in that order, scoring a total of 21 goals in the process. Belleville follows with a record of two wins and a loss.

Peterborough held a 2-0 lead after a fast first period, and extended their margin with a brace of markers in the middle frame, despite determined but disorganized efforts by Rollies' youthful goalie to halt the power of Canucks attack. Staunch defence work by Jerry Kish, Jim Vilneff, Bob Jamieson and Bryan Watson, plus feverish back-checking of the forward brigade, held off every rival thrust, and was climaxed tally by Grant Heffernan near the three minute mark in the third, wrapped up the hectic battle and gave the Horton lads a well-earned triumph.

Referees Ned Vitarelli and Jamie Williams ruled fairly but erratically, and meted out a total of 15 penalties, all but one for minor offences. Of these, eight were allotted Canucks, one a misconduct to Jerry Kish, and Sutton, who also drew two minors. Canucks failed to cash in on Vilneff in the second, cane with Gary Reid in the hoosegow, but otherwise the rugged lads were clean on their tallies.

Belleville showed a fast, rugged team, but failure to co-ordinate against some fast and back checking spelled doom for a plucky squad, led by youthful veteran Red Gravelle.

Ron Jewell, speedy veteran Lions ace, opened the scoring for the Peterborough men after 16 minutes of gruelling play, and in the third frame, when he smashed the biscuit home on a furious charge unassisted at 16.33, Gord Parker had no chance. Bill Wands made it two a minute later when he combined with brother Bryan in a picture play-set rebounded from the doorsteps.

Grant Heffernan, Keith Wright and Vilneff combined beautifully early in the second, Vilneff swishing a long, low drive to the lower left corner through a screen at 12.30 of st 2-0.

The teams battled tooth and nail, with no quarter asked, nor given, till finally, near period's end, the fiery Jewell again hit the mesh on a play set up by Sutton and Larry Kish.

Wide open action featured the finale with one minutes' alone by Heffernan at 13.45, ably set up by Pete Morris and Keith Wright. That was it. Indeed, every Belleville player worked hard and the big team showed to have great potential. It was an off-night.

Belleville Lions: Parker; Mann, Kennedy, Geyer, Elliott, Kerr(sub), Alternates, Marvell; Reid, Ethier, Plane, Hunter, D. Hull, R. Hall, Wake, Forsythe, Dingdal.

Peterborough—Goal Bamhill; Vilneff, Kish, Jewell, G. Heffernan, W. Watson; alternates, Hill, S. Watson, Jamieson, Barrons, Morris, Muirhead, Sutton, Wright.

Referees — N. Vitarelli and L. Williams.

First Period

Peterborough—Jewell .. 16.33

Penalties — Reid, Mann, Kennedy, Alternates, Marvell; (R. Watson) 17.27

Penalties—Sutton, Kennedy, Ethier.

Second Period

Peterborough—Vilneff (Heffernan, Wright) 3.23

Peterborough—Jewell (Sutton, Kish) 18.30

Penalties — Reid, Mofcbead, Wake, Jamieson, Kennedy

Third Period

Peterborough—Heffernan (Morris, Wright) 12.48

Penalties — Sutton, Barrons, R. Watson, Marvey, R. Hull, Bahlan (misconduct), Kennedy.

FIRE QUICKLY QUENCHED

QUEBEC (CP)—Fire, probably due to spontaneous combustion broke out in a bundle of tied newspapers in the basement of a wing of the main Legislature Building Friday night but was quickly brought under control.

Minor Hockey Notes

Black Hawks took the measure of the Bruins 5-3 this evening in the five-game prep of the Intermediate Group A Minor Hockey Association.

In other scores, Maple Leafs whipped Canadiens 6-2, Rangers 4-0, Braves defeated Canucks 3-1 and Galahs stamped Bruins 4-1.

Stephen was sparkling Hawks ace, with two goals, with Don Muldoon getting the remaining pair. Wicks also had an assist with Stephen. Jim Morris, and Gerry Lucas getting one and two.

Greg Moore combined with David Emerson for two of Maple Leafs goals in their 4-0 blanket of Red Wings. Doug Gibson, Ted Hemlington got the other two.

Braves slapped both 3-1 Jim McDougall's two goals a piece by Ron Brooks. Jim Brooks had an assist. Jon Hall scored for Leafs.

Paul Ford and Jim Pearson netted Rangers' narrow victory over Canadiens with Jim Hagerty scoring for the losers assisted by David Chesbro.

Goals were divided in Galahs 4-1 win over the Broncos. Hollis Hall, Harold Lawrence, John Cole and Brian Fullerton were the Galahs' marksmen, Stapleton and Brian Beecher drew assists, John Scott scored for Broncos' lone tally.

Old Lessons From a New Germany

The publication of a book, "The Fearmakers" was issued in London, England, recently. This work sets to show an "alarming rebirth of Nazism" in Germany and is written by an unknown German. It is interesting to note the reaction of the Germans to the event. We quote from the London Times: "We fear that it (the book) will increase mistrust towards the Federal Republic . . . it can only be hoped that in the ensuing discussions those elements do justice to our people will be victorious.

"We are not being arrogant. We do not shrug the warnings of the American Jewish Congress, which has just pointed out certain anti-semitic trends in the Federal Republic. We are well aware that there is still much for us to do before we have completely lived down our democratic house. We are, however, making every sincere effort to master this difficult inheritance and forgetfulness. The weight of the past is too heavy on our shoulders for us to ignore the past. Just yesterday, in Bergen-Belsen, 1,500 ex-German trade unionists assembled for a ceremony in commemoration of those who died in the concentration camp there. These young people's demonstration against racial hatred and against the destruction of human rights is a protest made on behalf of the German people. We are determined to fight for those who are not teachable and we shall never relent in the fight."

The above attitude is both interesting and revealing in view of the thinking of those Germans who are presently governing their own affairs. It is apparent that they are extremely interested in promulgating a favorable way-of-life as known in this country by name. They have made, and are making, an honest effort to disturb the ill effects of the Third Reich and to make amends to those who were wronged by a dictator's edicts.

One of the actions which the Federal Republic has taken is to build new houses of worship for the Jewish communities, as these become re-established throughout Western Germany. This action, however, is not considered to be the cure-all and end-all for former crimes against this race.

From The Allgemeine Wochenzeitung Der Juden In Deutschland we quote:

"The fact that there are again many synagogues and many German cities is no reason, however, to forget the catastrophe which ended in 1945. It is no reason for indulgent people of all denominations to forget that the night of November 9th and 10th, 1938, it was made for something satanic to occur—a murderous deed that paved the way for mass killings of human beings who believed in one God.

"Today we are free to hatred. We regard the events of that night as we regard everything else the National-Socialists did in bringing shame and disgrace upon the German people, we view them in their proper perspective. . . . We also know, however, that the entire German people must never forget that night or the years that followed. For should this memory vanish from our memory, we would not be able to prevent new calamity from overtaking mankind."

From the above two articles we feel that the West Germans have realized the value of a democratic government and way of life and that they intend to allow themselves to forget the price they had to pay to realize it. We cannot help but feel that those who are old in the ways of a democratic existence might well pay heed to the Germans' experiences and teachings and learn afresh the vital importance of guarding our way of life.

We should not allow our democratic ideals to be compromised by threats or actions of any dictator or totalitarian state. We should be "determined to fight those who are not teachable" and should "never relent in this fight."

Neither should we allow the memories to fade, distant though some of them may be, of the sacrifices which our society and its members have made in the past to create or maintain life under our democratic principles. These memories are important and the time of them and the particular part which each has contributed to the furtherance of our way of life should be impressed upon our new citizens and our children, indeed on everyone who is not aware of them, so that these memories will not be forgotten. If the lesson of these memories should be ignored or forgotten we might not "be able to prevent new calamity from overtaking mankind."

There are many old lessons which the democratic nations can learn once more from the new Germany. We thank them for this.

THE FEW

By EDGAR A. GUEST

The easy roads are crowded
And the level roads are jammed;
The pleasant little rivers
With the drifting folks are crammed.
But off yonder where it's rocky,
Where you get a better view,
You will find the ranks are thinning
And the travellers are few.

Where the going's smooth and pleasant
You will always find the throng;
For the many, more's the pity,
Seem to like to drift along.
But the steps that call for courage
And the task that's hard to do,
In the end result in glory
Are the never-wavering few.

Canada's Amazing Western Frontier

by Harry M. Moore

SEEING THE COUNTRY
(Article 9)

Two days and three nights (from a comfortable tourist cabin at Wonowon) provided an excellent base from which to see the country, to meet some of its notables.

The first real morning was Monday, Dorothy, who had learned to drive a car when the highway was under construction seventeen years before, decided that we must first get a bird's eye view of the country. So we took a side road to a broad clearance on a hilltop, and there were the twin towers of the British Columbia Forestry Service, the small log cabin of the observer, and the observer was nearing his 74th birthday and the end of many years service.

There were two towers, one of best high, the other 110 feet, and yet this septuagenarian new to that shorter tower. At least once a day, the taller lower on occasion. And he has been there during the past eleven years.

Inside his tidy cabin was a loaded rifle which he says has never been fired. There was his bed, table and running through the well-filled pages is to see the names and addresses of men and women from all parts of North America. However, at Jimmy Lodge visitors do not leave their names in that book. Fact is, Jimmy Lodge is the wildest place this side of his children with many things, but writing is not one of them.

This reference is of course to the lodge, moose, bears of different varieties, wolves, coyotes and grizzly, elk, caribou, cougars and of course many of the lesser animals. The wonder is if these animals are not conscious that they have in Jimmy Lodge the best friend, the friend who protects them from their worst enemy, man. He has successfully dropped around on occasion just to show appreciation.

COLORFUL LIFE

Like many British Columbians, Jimmy Marsh has had a most colorful life. Born in Wisconsin he reached B.C. in the early days of the century and has had his way construction. That work completed he set about to see what lay beyond the great divide. One thirty days' journey came to a river running north and it is north they sailed. In a few days a small sawmill and employment for a few days during which they set to, to build a boat, to take advantage of the river's fast current. As Jimmy tells it, they were possibly the "most goshawfulest" boat that ever was launched, but it didn't leak.

The river carried them further and further northward and then they reached a small settlement, found employment in the fields and decided to remain and in the words by writer. By spring their company had dwindled, but Jimmy's companion had to go it alone, he also decided to remain, so to southern B.C. where he soon found employment with the government as a forest ranger and in time he became a fire ranger and eventually was made he was moved from one range to another, finally to Wonowon. His family he got himself a home in Vancouver from which they would go to and then to see more of the world.

Before starting Jimmy Martell was called upon to fight during his eleven years at Wonowon he fought recall but one fire, a fire which swept most of Wonowon some years ago. He went to see that the drilling rigs going up in the Blueberry River were not a menace to the forests carrying men and seismograph and geiger counters. Fortunately for them, or maybe that small craft brought in fishermen or hunters were out there for grayling, the most prized fish of the northland, or moose or bear or elk, for that part of B.C. is in truth one of the best game and pelt fish areas left in America.

FIRST COUNTRY

Returning to Wonowon, but not to stop there, and it was north northwest he. Pretty soon finger-boards and new words on both sides of the highway gave the names of the many companies operating in the area.

Soon the country became more hilly and if anything more open and yet as we knew, not the means for several miles, not the sign of even a cabin-dweller. Nothing but low hills and deep hollows, sparsely covered here and there by trees, the usually spruce and away off in the distances the gleaming of Mount Finlay (5,300 feet) of this Peak Mountain chain. At mileage 136 is the Black Spruce Lodge, then at mileage 147 Pink Mountain Lodge and then at mileage further along The Beaton River Lodge which is operated from a post office to a genera store to a modern garage, and an excellent place to dine and sleep. Indeed boy or self saw furs there or a lynx skin, the hunt or fish. The place derives its name from Frank Pyzer, formerly a former Hudson's Bay employer.

The Beatton River, which is no more than a large distance river, north of Napanee, or the Moira River, north of Melrose, comes down from the hills to the north, crosses the highway on its way to the Peace River through many miles further south.

However, what the river lacks in size it makes up for it by the swiftness of its current so a good place to catch grayling. It might be well to explain that Beatton River is the name of a family and therefore related to the trout, as the Dolly Varden length seldom exceeds eighteen inches, the silver trout the Kamloops silver, but the mouth and teeth are small. What the grayling lacks in size it makes up for in speed is he who can land one. The bait most used is the artificial fly no bigger than the end of one's finger.

The plan was to go on to Prutch, mileage 200, where from a higher elevation more of the northwestern country might be seen, but best to turn there that Sikanni Chief River should do. Overlapping the deep valley through which the river of the same name runs north, it is higher than it in the long ago the Sikanni Indians were led into a massacre by the Beaver Indians, the Beaver Indians. The bridge across the river at this point is one of the best in the highway from end to end. Here also will be found the turning of a good car to Prutch after Mr. Smith who can peddle 19 pastes for big game hunters every year.

Inky Stencil Praised as Art

Brantford Expositor

Here we go again, and here we are again (unofficial) at an exhibition in Lincoln, England, looked over one of the entries and pronounced it quite worthy for its "nice texture and artistic shading."

We'd like to have seen the design of his face when he was told that the work of "art" modest and meaningful.

We suspect that, having got this crazy liger by the tail, they're afraid to let go. To admit that, and some other artists (to say nothing of worthy ladies' auxiliaries of art galleries) have fallen for a colossal cultural boax would require colossal effort, wouldn't it!

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FACE FRONT!

There is but little inspiration that comes to us from out the past. True, we learn from it. But mostly from experience. It is from out of the untold future that we get most of what we are, or hope to become. So keep looking ahead.

Face Front!

If you start working with the past, but future results are, and sometimes takes all the bravest man or woman can muster to catch up with what has moved on. The past it sleeps. The future! It's awake.

Face Front!

Don't waste dead past busy its dead." You pass to live and living things. Lock arms with them. Face your course evenly, with your head high, fighting for the right to live. Learn to Live!

Face Front!

Neither fear nor failure to tempt your heart away from what lies beyond the past.

Face Front!

Know that through the body system of human progress runs a vein of indestructible energy that, no matter what the trials of nations, there is always something better to be evolved.

Just now it seems difficult to understand how this may be true in the face of much world discussion and "end" wars. Nevertheless, it is. The watchword is this:

Face Front!

Edward Everett Hale once gave to the world this motto: "Look up, not down. Look ahead, not back. Face front!

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 21st, 1910.

Santa Claus will receive a right royal welcome in Belleville on Saturday, December 8th, judging from the response of the business men and citizens by the appeal for financial backing this morning. When Santa's volunteer assistants finish their visits today it is confidently expected that the total amount will permit a full realisation of the plans for the largest and most colorful parade in this city for many a year. Rumor has it that Santa Claus plans to bring with him a person who will be of interest to all, who must have a great deal to do behind the scenes in Merry Christmas land — Mrs. Santa Claus. It is alleged that all of those little women who gave their fairies who will be seen in the royal entourage of the jolly old fellow.

Proceeds from the Poppy Day held under the auspices of the Army and Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch No. 301, grossed $315 according to figures released by officials in charge. Officials of the veterans' organization voiced their appreciation of the generous response of the public to the appeal. Launched through the medium of the red symbol of those men who gave their lives in the last Great War.

A figurative curfew will ring out each evening day" for children and young folks up to sixteen years of age in Picton, according to regulations issued the other day to the by the Council. The instructions were the aftermath of a letter received by Council from the Picton Home and School Council, requesting that certain sections of the Children Protection Act, be enforced.

A proposal to reduce the age limit to 19 years would make a hit in this city.

PORT CREDIT, ONT.

According to legend, the Mississaugi Indians named the River Credit because of its trading purposes. Apparently credit was given to the Indians by the early people and they caused the river to be named. Later a grant of land and the settlement was called Port of Credit. This naming received the sanction of the Canadian corporation in 1911 the place was officially named Port Credit.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A lowerman is one of those chaps, usually youngish rather than elderly, who are employed by forestry departments all over the country to watch for signs of some remote region of the wilderness and spend all spring, summer and autumn perched high above the treetops in a spindly tower, watching with powerful binoculars for the first wisp of smoke that will tell of a forest fire beginning. Through the bush, strung on trees, run telephone wires that connect them to a base. And when a fire is detected by one, the base calls two or three others of these towermen to take bearings on the smoke with their compass protractors. And in a matter of minutes, the exact location of the fire is pin-pointed, and the information is given to millions of dollars of our public property.

Many of these towermen bring their wives and children to live with them in the little cabins at the foot of the towers. But many are bachelors, like Mr. Simeon Stykites, who are of the temperament to enjoy his surroundings, brake, broken only by the visits of passing campers and tourists, and the telephone calls to their base, and the occasional arrival of an aircraft flying about their domain.

"What's the chief difference between your life," I asked a young towerman, "and life in town?"

"Well, sir," he said, "you should see us there, all summer, half way to heaven, praying every Thursday for rain on every summer weekend. You pray for rain, with all that hay full of fallseeds lighting picnic fires and throwing lighted cigarette butts."

In fact summer, remember, the towermen woe.

Letters To the Editor

Concerted Effort By Citizens Needed

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I would be very pleased if you would publish this letter in your columns, entitled, "Building a Better Belleville."

Election time draws near; let us not forget the past events very seriously. At the moment of writing, our civic city saw about at the fork in the road. Where are we heading? What direction are we heading? Is the new industry to be built in our municipality out of the quagmire in which we seem to be sunk through lack of positive action on the part of those in authority? Is the health of the individuals as a whole?

Public apathy has been very prevalent (until recently). Some of its insidious disease will no longer continue to thrive. Much criticism and resentment has been apparent, but now, if ever, is the time to arouse ourselves to do something constructive for our community. A concerted effort by the electorate and administrative persons of office, such as business, welfare, education etc. must be considered, and acted upon if we wish to improve conditions.

Let us no longer be handicapped by the lack of co-operation, but consider the question of holding an Old Boys' Re-Union next summer, was poorly attended and no action was taken. Another meeting will be called shortly.

Mr. William Burley, Cedar Street reported to the police that a valuable brown pointer dog had been stolen from his premises yesterday.

The prospects are bright for a first class junior O.H.A. team in Belleville this winter. At a meeting held recently the following officers were elected: Honorary president — Thomas Ritchie; president — J. W. Johnson, M.P.P.; first vice-president — F. R. A proposal to reduce the age limit to 19 years would make a hit in this city.

Meditate well before placing your vote. Then don't look back, take a keen interest, exercise your rights by holding discussions in your nearest representative. By so doing you make your city council member alert and anxious to do his or her best.

Yours truly,
Vera Y. Risto.

Retarded Children's Appeal Is Explained

Editor,
Belleville Intelligencer.

The genuine aim and friends of the Belleville and Trenton district would, under whose auspices and supervision the new school for the Quinte district Retarded Children is to be established, would like to make it clear to all concerned that their Retarded Children's Week and the house-to-house campaign to follow are in their responsibility; second, we have no connection with the privately-operated Orchards' home at Plainfield whose appeals are from all across Ontario.

We, the Quinte Association for Retarded Children, will send out no letter of appeal and all money collected at the doors of this district whose parents are members of the Belleville and Trenton groups.

A Lift for Living

Looking Back To Simpler Life

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

As we approach our national season of Thanksgiving our minds go on a pilgrimage. We turn from the noisy surroundings of the present to the rustic scenes of the Pilgrim Fathers. Our spirits are inclined to leave the paved streets for the quiet countryside. Our thoughts go back from the things man has made to the works of God. Our human natures hear the call of nature and our voices raise the song of "harvest home."

Living in a great city, amid towering structures, I would join with you in a journey back to the basic simplicities of life, back to faithful old Mother Earth that feeds her children with the fruits of her soil. Let us look back together at the fertile fields stretching from the hills of Vermont to the plains of Texas, at the animals nourishing their young at homes echoing with children and barns filled with food, at birds which sow not, nor reap, nor gather into barns and yet somehow are fed by their heavenly Father. These are the roads our minds travel toward Thanksgiving Day.

CLOSER TO EARTH, GOD

Nevertheless, we must be realistic. When we try to get back to the simplicities of the soil so many factors intervene. In our modern machine age we do not seem to deal so directly with the God of the harvests as did the Pilgrim Fathers. Living close to the soil they were conscious of the divine partnership. They reaped what they sowed and they ate what they raised. When God's providence was bountiful, they were prosperous. But with us it is not so simple. So many human elements come between us and the fruits of our labors. We sell our crops, but their value depends on distant markets and trade agreements between nations. Our fathers in a simpler day lived by the labor of their hands and the sweat of their brows, but our living is determined by the labor of hands in far-off factories and the sweat of brows we have not seen. Our agricultural ancestors worked with nature; we work more and more with human nature. And in these human factors there is so much uncertainty that many question whether it is still true that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Our attention pills to mind a puzzling passage of Scripture which almost all of us can quote but few seem to believe: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days." Think of what probably lay behind that old saying of Ecclesiastes. Picture the Nile River at flood, inundating the fields of an Egyptian farmer. It is time to sow his seed, but over the land lie the muddy waters of the swollen stream. Shall he wait until the waters recede? He may delay till the time of sowing is passed. Finally, rather than wait too long, he rows out in his flat-bottomed boat and casts the seed upon the waters. Some of it is carried away by the swirling currents, but the rest is deposited by the falling waters in the fertile silt left by the flood. Despite some loss the ancient farmer by thus found it paid to cast his bread upon the waters.

RETURN TO PLAGUE US

The truth this implies is that the great counteracts of creation can and must be trusted. We certainly can see it on the unpleasant side. We turn out false or at least thoughtless words, and while they may disappear for a time they so often come back to plague us. We sow seeds of things and think they are forgotten but the results are brought back by our children, and so our "chickens come home to roost." Deception and lies can be used to make quick gains popular for a time but the public does get wise.

And on the other hand, "truth crushed to earth will rise again." A kind deed forgotten by the doer bears fruit, maybe not this season but in God's due time. This world is not a factory where we get our wages each week. God's business is too vast for our human bookkeeping, but we can trust Browning's faith: "I go to prove my soul! I see my way as birds their trackless way! I shall arrive!" He guides me and may disappear for a time they so the bird. In His good time.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

TOPSTUFFY

Using a method of progression unique in Birdland, authatches seen at their constant work can easily be identified. They are among our most useful birds, more efficient than any poison for ridding our trees of borer eggs, pupae, and hibernating adult insects. Their inspiring manner of investigation has the advantage of showing these corners in bark crevices unseen by woodpeckery and brown creepers that always look into cracks from a right side up position. Indeed, nuthatches care not at what angle they climb, although particularly suited for descending trunks head first — a wonderful accomplishment. Their large, strong feet cling to the bark, the long, sharp claw of the unusually solid hind toe insuring a firm hold.

While woodpeckers climb trunks in short jerks, nuthatches ascending a ladder, and brown creepers wind gaily and spirally upwards, corkscrew fashion, the nuthatches move more like flies. They glide prop themselves up on their sharp-pointed tails, and are used almost like a third leg; but nuthatches never use them as support. When one tree has been thoroughly examined, with undulating flight they move to another, alighting like a well-aimed arrow.

Two species of nuthatches nest in Canada, but the small red-breasted does not often favor us with its presence in the settled section. The white-breasted, liking best but to follow long nests in southern Canada and then remaining with us throughout the year — that is, wherever large trees are to be found, whether in forests, orchards, parks or cities. Being what is known as "partly migratory" some do cross our border into the U.S. when cold weather comes.

Like Canada geese, screech owls, and a few other kinds of birds, nuthatches and chickadees are thought to remain paired for life. Although they have a winter as well as a breeding territory, they are very friendly with chickadees, blue jays, and brown creepers, travelling about with them in winter. They are quite talkative, and their far-carrying "yank yank" call is possibly helpful in keeping this mixed flock together.

If you live in a locality suitable for nuthatches because of some big trees, try attracting them by tying suet to a branch or even to a board on your window ledge.

THE NEW AND DANGEROUS HERESIES OF "LIFE AND DEATH"

The Committee on Christian Faith, of the United Church of Canada has recently published a book entitled "Life and Death". The committee has admitted that the doctrines in it contain "many new and even dangerous to some people. We admit that they seem so to us.

Since the book has been presented "for study", we feel obliged to give it a sincere analysis in comparison with the teachings of the Bible, as has been understood by Protestants since Luther, Calvin and Wesley. Each Sunday Evening at 7.30 p.m. therefore, at the Parkdale Community Centre, Rev. Robert Sayles, the pastor of the Parkdale United Church, will be speaking on subjects suggested by the book "Life and Death". Everyone is welcome to attend. Those who cannot, who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity to study this book. The dates for the various subjects will be as follows

Nov. 22—Heresy No. 1. Man is without a soul.
Nov. 29—Heresy No. 2. Baptism is not necessary.
Dec. 6—Heresy No. 3. Salvation is not personal.
Dec. 13—Heresy No. 4. The Bible is unreliable.
Dec. 27—Heresy No. 5. The physical body is not raised in the resurrection.
Jan. 3—Heresy No. 6. There is spiritual growth after death.
Jan. 10—Heresy No. 7. Everyone will eventually be saved.
Jan. 17—Heresy No. 8. Hell is not eternal punishment.
Jan. 24—Heresy No. 9. The Judgment Day is nothing to fear.
Jan. 31—Heresy No. 10. Christ's return may not be personal.

(Photo by William E. Riley, Belleville.)

ADAMS — EINSEDLER

Baskets of white and yellow stands "mums flanked by tall white standards of ferns formed the setting for the pretty double-ring wedding on October 24th, in Bridge St. United Church, when the Rev. Robert Sherwin, assisted by Mr. L. Neddow, of Ameliasburg, united in marriage La Verne Marlene Einsiedler only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Einsiedler, of Saskatoon, Sask., and Earle Howard Adams, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Adams of Belleville in a doubling ceremony.

The wedding music was provided by Mr. S. Alec Gordon, church organist, who accompanied the soloist Mrs. Ralph Plumpton, Corbyville, as she sang immediately before the ceremony, "The Wedding Prayer" and during the signing of the register, "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, Mr. J. Einsiedler, wore an exquisite waltz-length bridal gown of imported Chantilly lace, featuring lace panels in the front and back, and the sides inset with alencon with scalloped Chantilly lace and pleated Swiss tulle, scalloped square neckline and long sleeves ending in points over the wrists. The shoulder length rhinestone studded Swiss tulle veil fell from a seeded pearl tiara. A single strand of tiny pearls and sterlings, the gift of her bridegroom, completed her costume.

She carried a cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses and stephanotis, ending with white streamers knotted with tiny red rosebuds.

Miss Mary Butler, of Windsor, attended the bride and was attired in an off-the-shoulder French transparent velvet gown in pink with touches of white at the neckline, matching red feathered hat and brocaded silver and white shoes. She carried a cascade of white carnations.

Mr. Baden Adams, of Massassaga attended his brother as groomsman and Mr. Lyle Adams and Mr. Carl Boyle, of Massassaga, were the ushers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlors, where the bride's table was daintily appointed with white damask, a three-tiered wedding cake, adorned with tiny pink rosebuds, topped with a tiny bride and groom, and under an arch of pink rosebuds and clouded about the base with tulle and pink and pink rose buds. Tall pink tapers in silver candelabra completed the table. The small tables were centred with pink roses.

For travelling on a brief honeymoon, the bride donned a black and white check suit, black accessories, and a corsage of deep rose carnations and topped with a short mauve mink jacket.

Guests were present from Saskatoon, Sask., Bruce, Sask., Elliss Lake, Windsor, Wellington, Massassaga, Deseronto, Picton and Belleville.

Telegrams were received by the young couple from Bruno, Sask., and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Einsiedler, Saskatoon.

Upon their return the bridegroom left for his new posting at the RCAF Station in Goose Bay, Labrador. The bride returned to her duties as RCAF Station, in Rockcliffe, Ontario.

A miscellaneous shower was held in honor of the bride and bridegroom by the Massassaga community at the home of the bridegroom.

The bride was presented with a silver and crystal T.V. snack set by her section, and the bridegroom with an electric tea kettle by the MT section of the RCAF Station at Rockcliffe, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Garth Stuart are pictured following their recent marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Trent Road, Belleville. The bride is the former Miss Sandra Darlene Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wright. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. Donald Stuart, of Scarborough, and the late Mrs. Stuart.

A Stronghold Safe and Sure

By ALMA MASON

(4th in Series)

A famous clergyman spoke lovingly and proudly of his mother as he said: "She was true in thought and deed."

Today while turning the pages of a worn scrapbook I came across a lovely tribute which a village newspaper had paid an elderly lady at the time of her passing on into broader fields of endeavor. It added that, "To know her was to love her. Her warm personality which cast an inspirational glow on all those fortunate enough to be in her company, could have only been attained by her closeness to her God."

What finer tribute could be administered of any of us at the end of this life's earthly day? Can those of us who are active as club women; devout as church members; tireless as toilers in the cause of social service, lay claim to being successful wives and mothers? Are we close to God? Do we pass on our Christian faith to our children? Does the wise passage from Proverbs refer to us, "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her."

Today we are appalled at the alarming increase of separations and divorces. We wonder at the thought of the widespread devastation of homes and families. The inevitable aftermath is more and more young people turned out into the storms of disbelief and uncertainty and bitterness.

Jesus said that if we harm a child we will pay a terrible price. We will not, as a payment for such injury or neglect, it would be better to have a millstone hung about one's neck and be drowned in the depths of the sea. Parents, with little or no apparent misgivings or regret, daily cast children to the wolves of materialism and indifference. Thinking only of themselves and their inability to make what they think is a success of marriage, they pay scant attention to the spiritual side of life In their harbor of home, that suffers shipwreck before it is even properly launched.

If a parent is inevitably wicked or lazy or mentally retarded, it is a tragedy to see an innocent a growing child to the destructive influence that particular parent will wield over his or her impressionable child. Only the child successfully survive the ordeal of managing with only one parent, providing that parent is dependable and wise and the like of Job. He rode on a good ship with one sail than with no sail at all.

Ninety years ago in Niagara Falls, Ontario, a young and ambitious woman of good family married the son of an Irish nobleman. She soon discovered she had married an incurable wastrel.

With the passing of time she realized her five children were suffering from the bad influences emanating from their father. She made a sad but wise decision. She left her husband and without visible means of support, took the slack reins of family management into her own hands.

She, who had always known luxury and comfort, scrubbed and washed and ironed for the folk of the town. At night she cooked and sewed for her little brood; knit all their socks and sweaters; made all their clothing and cleaned her own home.

She earned the devotion and respect of her children and her neighbors and friends as well. She sent forth into the world five splendid men and women, fully equipped to meet life honestly and bravely. They all depended on God for guidance. They revered and achieved a good home and a respectable place in community life.

That was thirty years ago. No juvenile delinquency has left an angry stain on any of the ancestors of that courageous, sensible woman.

Let us search for the patient Godly courage possessed by our grandparents. We cannot afford to let children suffer from the crippling it first in our own hands and knowing its savor.

It has always rested particularly in the hands and hearts of mothers to safeguard youth. If we are neglecting the task God has set us, in the home, rest assured we will pay dearly for our trust. True happiness comes only through the blessings accorded us by good children.

We and we alone can control and direct what we think is "delinquency" for—let us face it—it originates in the home. There are three words that can transform a house in to a home, a place to live in a castle and a fortress. They are "togetherness", "love" and "God."

What will you be, dear child of mine?
Where will you seek help?
Will mire and quicksand claim your feet
Or broad roads safe and high?

What shall I give you, child of mine?
To guide and keep you true?
Wisdom and love and hearth of home
Are all I have for you.

Wisdom is gold and silver love
Will guide you day by day,
And diamonds of the hearth of home
Will always with you stay.

My faith in God I lend you, dear
To keep you staunch and pure;
I bless you with my humble prayer,
A stronghold safe and sure.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

It has been announced that a survey will be made in our province of old buildings of good design and construction worthy of saving for past eras in our country's history. This will probably be the work of the architectural conservancy branch of the Ontario Historical Society and should be given more impetus to the work of preservation and restoration.

Many buildings are disappearing from the fact that many important old buildings have been bought and demolished before conservation action could be got under way. In many parts of our province, the interest in this phase of Canada's history is different as to be almost nonexistent. It is heartening to know that interest is quickening. Our feeling for this sort of thing has been very much the historical zeal of the many old communities in the United States.

The Maritimes are already leading with this movement. We understand that the New Brunswick Historical Society is now in the throes of preserving the Merritt house in Saint John. This is the oldest dwelling in the city, construction having been started on the building in 1810. It was occupied by one of the Loyalist settlers of the city. The house must be of unusually high standards, and was recognized as one of the finest residences in the province. It is a excellent example of Georgian architecture, and virtually no alterations have been made to the building since it was erected.

In Halifax a similar project is under way to restore Georgebrook house which is regarded as the best private home of its period remaining in the city. Preservation and restoration is being undertaken by the Historic Trust of Nova Scotia, the first such organization to be formed in Canada and modelled after the National Trust of England. We also that the schools are no longer the principal medium of education. In their places have appeared radio and television with a constant stream of undemanding entertainment. It was with a sense of alarm that she read that the social activity in which Canadians now spend more time than sleeping is in watching televisions and listening to radio. Dr. Whitton finished with the remark "Canadian society must decide what it expects from its teachers. We need many intelligent well-trained members to the reader. But to some extent the society is in part — and gives more money for — mediocrity and more professional independence."

May we follow Dr. Whitton's general line of thought with a reference to Young Canada Book Week, which ended today. A disturbing article in Saturday Night gives us these facts: "According to the United Nations Yearbook, there is only one newspaper reader for every 18,375 people. This puts Canada, as a literate nation, far behind Austria — very far behind France, the United Kingdom, New Zealand, The Netherlands, Sweden and Norway. It puts us behind even Australia, Italy, Russia, Spain and Portugal. The only civilized nation which fewer book stores in relation to population is the United States."

Startling, too, is the statement of Dr. Dunlop, Ontario Minister of Education that "Young people coming out of school can seldom read well or write well." Instead of adding more non-academic subjects to the curriculum, let us give more time and attention to our basic forms of communication, speaking and writing and reading.

Popular Package Tours Save You the Trouble of Planning

Few innovations in travel have so captured the fancy of the public as the package tour. Grasped almost exclusively to the lure of travel, it has solved for these growing multitudes the most weighty of their problems — the planning of details.

Briefly, the package tour provides for prepayment of a set price to take care of transportation, accommodations, meals and — depending on the package — an assortment of other expenses which may or may not include sightseeing, car rental, tips and other costs.

These deals are the babies of the travel agency business, but no agency, even the biggest, knows how many are available. They come pre-planned for large groups, and are made to individuals and even built to order for the most specialized interests imaginable. Canada abounds in package tour of South America).

Four trips are created every year and old ones discarded, sometimes on the basis of new travel cultural interests such as a religious event. Not only do agencies, small and large, operate their own trips, but so do business and social clubs, railroad and steamship lines, and other segments of the travel industry.

Despite all the variety and complexity, certain questions about all tours. Some of the most frequently asked are:

HERE ARE SOME ANSWERS

1. Are package tours bargains?

Not usually. There are exceptions, such as all-day trips where meals at your seat may be thrown in for the price of a meal a day for only $3 or $4.

But generally you pay for the individual costs of your ticket, hotel room, meals and whatever else is included and find they are each being charged for at the going rate.

As a matter of fact, there are hidden costs in a sense. A travel operator, knowing he must usually pay an agent 10 per cent, will add that scale in the price of that. Neither hotels nor agents will admit it, but a guest booked directly in a highly competitive area may sometimes get no better deal.

An agent may also pay the charges for such items as tips, transportation, chartered buses and sightseeing, for which you get services, particularly if these bookings are not commissionable. It is nothing to be ashamed of or wrong with any of this. They are accepted principles of the business, and the traveller gets his money's worth from the selection, efficiency and advice.

Actually, it is best to beware of bargain tours. They are apt to be slippers in them such as only one room in a hotel available at the quoted minimum package rate, or rooms without bath, or second class accommodations. Your agent is likely to be inflated by the "and up" factors.

2. Must you book through an agent to buy a package deal?

No. Many packages are available to the general public through hotels and carriers.

3. What are the greatest advantages of package tours?

In addition to the convenience of having everything laid out and paid out in advance, tour operators frequently have hard-to-get hotel rooms, airline reservations, theatre and festival tickets and the like blocked off for them.

SAVES YOUR WORK

Buying a package also saves you endless checking and booking with carriers and hotels, wondering who to tip how much and when, and what to do with yourself when you get where you're going.

Many headaches are disposed of. Your baggage will be whisked from the customs counter to your hotel without your having to see after it. Someone will meet your group at the dock and hand-guide you through the maze of foreign language details required to get you on your way. You'll never have to waste time making arrangements for sightseeing and transportation or waiting to register in a hotel. And you'll know what it's all going to cost because it's already paid for.

4. What are the greatest disadvantages?

Primarily those that result from depriving you of your independence. In large groups you may be herded around on a tight schedule, piled into buses when you might have preferred to hire a taxi or try the subway, and fed in restaurants other than those your friends, who have been there before, told you not to miss. And, there will be little chance for improvising.

Many travellers get a thrill from packages as they go along, wandering around on their own and meeting people. But unless you're a shy gal test, confused and miserable unless you know what's going to happen next. The planned tour is for them.

5. A final question about all packages. Know exactly what is included and the cost of each item. Be sure the package meets your standards and encompasses what you want to do. Only by such analysis can you ensure that you're getting your money's worth and buying the kind of trip you want to make.

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

"He charges you a nickle to shine one shoe and makes the oldest kind of leather look like new."—from a popular song, Chattanooga Shoe Shine Boy.

What would your answer be to what is civilization's greatest blessing?

"Steel" would have been the immediate reply to an earl of ours, that weekend she spent in Brussels, while a Red Cross nurse with the Canadian Forces during World War I. She explained:

"A few of us went to Brussels on a short furlough from nursing soldiers in the south of France. The pride and joy of the journey were my high topped button shoes, as hard to come by in a war torn world. Staying at one of the best hotels, I had no qualms about leaving them outside my door the last thing at night, to be brightly polished for the morning, as was the custom there.

"Lo, they were stolen. I never saw them again.

"What a predicament to be in. No shoes, impossible to buy any, for the shops were closed. I sat down and wept. My compassion, however, evoked ready, produced five pairs of woollen socks and a pair of thick rubber overshoes. Thus shod, we proceeded to see the sights of Brussels . . . which is our model. Me!"

"Canadian hotels, however, operate quite differently," says Mr. Gulespel Scotti, who has been in Italy over fifty years ago and for over half that time has operated a shoe shine stand in Belleville. "I learned the shoe shine business at a concession at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, where the guests call you 'service' whenever they wish for several pairs of shoes to be cleaned. In order that the work be evenly distributed, shoe shine boys answered the calls in person, in turn. The fee for several pairs of shoes was forty cents, which was usually turned over with a two dollar bill along with a brisk, "Keep the change."

"In those days," Mr. Scotti recalls, "a shoe shine's salary was seven dollars a week that swelled to a lucrative total on seventy dollars from tips. My boss, also from Italy, helped me along a lot. He gave me many hints. He was a wizard with polish and I was glad to learn from a customer's old shoes, be they white, brown or red, the polish made from a secret formula, that was black. It would never rub off. The shoes would look like new. The secret formula he passed on to me, before he left for which I use, and shall never reveal to anyone."

"Do you have a certain method for polishing shoes?"

"Ah, yes. Always, I use a thin covering of wax polish, before I apply a stainless, colored polish, be it black, or tan. This I spread on traces of stain on the washable soft rag buffer stripe (which come in 10c, 25,50 per dozen) which I use over and over." Mr. Scotti also uses dozens of shoe brushes, each worth around five dollars, but last a life time. "One I've used for over twenty years."

Mr. Scotti claims it takes much less than ten minutes to do a good shoe shine job. He operates on the stand which is comprised of a long yellow leather bench, firmly placed on a white marble slab in which is embedded, with customer-comfort in mind, a row of graduated brass foot-rests. "These are at least thirty five years old, for they were here when I took over around 25 years ago, after working eight years at Mr. Pappas." Under the bench are shelves for the tins of polish easy to reach for, and "I use I'd say about 35 dozen of them a year." The average stand today brings in around a sum slightly under $2,000 a year. There is not the same money in tips as there used to be.

But there are some customers who are very faithful. "I've one, who for twenty-five years had come in every day; at same time, I can count on him." Mr. Scotti sums up his work: it is rewarding. A good shoe shine makes customer a good turn.

Not to change the subject, but wedding bells will be ringing very soon for a young man; a Mounti, in the Canadian Mounted Police Force. He must first complete service and get 500 in the bank, according to its rules and regulations, before the bells can ring. This Mounti asked to serve out part of his time in the North West Territories, where saving money is a must. Then in a few weeks' time the marriage will take place, and part of his wedding trip will include Belleville for an excellent reason. His parents live here and are none other than Mr. and Mrs. Gulespil Scotti.

Bellevignette: We are indebted for today's quotation to CJBQ Radio, which was recently had the Bing Crosby Record of Chattanooga Shoe Shine Boy, but played it over the phone for us, until we were able to obtain the forgotten words. Many thanks.

Stories of Famous Hymns

By HORACE B. POWELL

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?

Who is on the Lord's side?
Who will serve the King?
Who will be His helpers,
Other lives to bring?
Who will face the world's side?
Who will face the foe?
Who is on the Lord's side?
Who for Him will go?

Not for weight of glory,
Not for crown and palm,
Enter we the army,
Raise the warrior psalm;
But for love that claimeth
Lives for whom He died:
He whom Jesus naineth
Must be on His side.

Fierce may be the conflict,
Strong may be the foe,
But the King's own army
None can overthrow.
Round His standard ranging,
Victory is secure;
For His truth unchanging
Makes the triumph sure.

Chorus:

By Thy call of mercy,
By Thy grace divine,
We are on the Lord's side.
Saviour, we are Thine.

"Wherever she went, she tried to make sure that there was some one to whom she met who did not know and love Jesus".

There is a tribute that ought to gladden any Christian; it is the picture that one writer has given of Frances Ridley Havergal, whose hymns have added immeasurably to the spiritual wealth and store of humanity, and who has been acclaimed by many as the world's greatest woman hymnist.

Frances Havergal found her greatest happiness, always, in winning men and women to Christ. Her hymns — and many of our best religious lyrics have come from her pen — reflect her zeal for soul-winning. Most of her verses were written quickly, under inspiration. Often she would pause in her daily tasks, take out pencil and paper, and jot down ideas in such perfect form that they needed no later polishing.

"Who Is On The Lord's Side?" is a popular Sunday School hymn. Some of her other songs are just "Take my life and let it be", "Hearted, Whole-Hearted" is another favorite in church schools and young people's religious meetings. One of her most beautiful poems is a prayer which was fulfilled in her own splendid, consecrated life:

Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee;
Take my moments and my days;
Let them flow in ceaseless praise:

Take my hands and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love:
Take my feet and let them be
Swift and beautiful for Thee".

Danger Lurks When Muffler Is Defective

By EUGENE MILMOE

Last winter, three men were overcome by fumes while sitting in a parked car with the engine running and all windows closed. On the road, a family was wiped out when the driver was suddenly jailed and the car ran out of control. In both cases a leaky muffler was blamed.

A defective muffler (or exhaust pipe) allows deadly carbon monoxide to escape. With car windows closed, a slight leak can be fatal to all occupants within minutes. And danger comes without warning, because this gas is odorless and invisible.

It's difficult to understand why there are so many cars on the road with bad exhaust parts and no connection. Even if the danger element were not present, it's poor judgement for a clogged or leaky muffler can hurt your engine by increasing back pressure. This causes overheating, loss of power and wasteful gas consumption.

Sold Formula To Lay Ghosts, Lands in Court

CAPETOWN (AP) — Hans Bernard Grossman, 57, last week sold his mystical and complicated formula for laying ghosts to a 23-year-old policeman Kleynhans for £6.

So Grossman found himself in magistrate's court charged under the Suppression of Witchcraft and Fortune Telling Practices Act, and was fined £30.

The magistrate suspended half the fine on condition that Grossman not do that kind of thing again.

Kleynhans said he asked Grossman for something to stop a ghost haunting his house. "This ghost," said Kleynhans "slammed doors and held my wife so tightly she could hardly breathe." Grossman sold him bottles of liquid, pills, incense herbs and lucky beans—and detailed instructions on how to use them.

Kleynhans said he sold the potions because Kleynhans was "obsessed with ghosts and I wanted to calm his nerves."

Suggest Annual Summit Parley Of NATO Heads

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—A political committee of North Atlantic legislators proposed Friday that a full Western summit conference of all 15 NATO leaders be held once every year.

The committee also adopted a Canadian resolution expressing hope that East-West negotiations eventually may lead to a lifting of the Communist yoke from captive countries in Eastern Europe.

The committee's resolution were recommended to the full body of the North Atlantic parliamentarian conference at the wind-up of week-long deliberations. Fast passage was anticipated.

Walter Dinsdale, Canadian committee member, urged closer and more intimate consultation among NATO powers. The MP for Brandon-Souris said NATO powers must co-ordinate their policies along political as well as economic lines.

FURTHER COMMENTS

On other world issues, the political committee made these comments:

1. Any proposals which would interfere with West Berlin's freedom and its links with West Germany should be rejected.

2. It is hoped progress towards disarmament and a solution to German problems would be followed by mutual East-West confidence which would allow captive states in eastern Europe freedom to determine their destiny.

3. It also is hoped once East-West problems in Europe are resolved, "a system of collective security will be established for the whole of Europe in which both the United States and Canada would participate."

4. Dangers of a European split caused by conflict between the six-country European Common Market and the other seven trading countries—with France and West Germany on one side and Britain on the other—should not be under-estimated. There should be no delusion that Europe could stand alone.

READY FOR TRIP — The Canada Council encourages trips by big-city symphony orchestras to smaller centres which do not often hear good music. The Vancouver Symphony Orchestra visits half a dozen communities in the interior of British Columbia each year giving 10 to 15 concerts. Last year, the orchestra travelled by bus, train, plane and car to remote points. Snow and a landslide presented transportation problems. Here Llewellynne Adams, harpist with the Vancouver orchestra, tells an airport worker how to load her harp at the start of last year's northern B.C. tour. (CP Photo).

Symphony Orchestras Trying To Bring Live Music to More People, Still Balance Budgets

By MEL SUFRIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's symphony orchestras have a chronic problem. They're trying to bring live music to broader audiences and still balance their budgets.

This year orchestras in 14 cities will struggle with record deficits. But, continuing a pattern developed in the last few years, some will boost extra income by selling long distances, often under difficult conditions, to persons in communities which until recently probably never had the opportunity of hearing live performances of the classics.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that none of the symphony orchestras performing before live audiences can make ends meet from box-office receipts alone. All must depend on other fund - raising means, ranging from gala charity mage sales, fashion shows and dances to donations from music-lovers and grants from various levels of government.

DEFICITS EXPECTED

"No orchestra worth its salt is ever in the black," said Kent Hurley, general manager of the Winnipeg Symphony. "If it is, it's falling down. It should be increasing and improving."

Basil Pitcher, recently appointed manager of the Ottawa Philharmonic, said only 25 per cent of the orchestra's funds come from ticket sales. "I don't think any orchestra in Canada can work without grants of fund-raising support."

Mrs. Sally Phillips, publicist for the Vancouver Symphony Society, said: "Every major orchestra on the continent has an operating deficit. We spend every cent we can on raising the standard and scope of the orchestra. We want to bring fine music to as many people as we can."

Even the Toronto Symphony, described by manager John W. Hixon as a "high-earning orchestra" playing to concerts between October and April, faces a record deficit of $175,000 from its $280,000 budget.

WOMEN HELP

Ticket sales for its weekly subscription concerts and broadcast fees, including those for its Sunday afternoon "pop" concerts for which admission cannot be charged, bring the Toronto symphony about $125,000. The women's committees expect $30,000 from its big annual rummage sale, and this helps reduce the deficit, with grants and personal contributions.

Mr. Hixon gave some clues to the rising deficits. While the basic salary of most members of the Toronto orchestra is $100 a week, some outstanding musicians get as much as $200 to $300.

It wants more of these top performers and that means more money for salaries.

The Montreal Symphony is in a similar position. It gives 32 concerts a year, 12 of them broadcast by the CBC and 16 staged on Saturdays for school children. Estimated expenditures for this season are $367,000 and its income is expected to be $181,000.

GRANTS ARE HELP

The Canada Council has recognized the problems of this year it is giving $206,000 to 10 orchestras. Toronto and Montreal will get $30,000 each; Ottawa $24,700; Vancouver $23,000; Halifax $22,500; Winnipeg $19,700; Calgary $15,000; Edmonton $14,900; Quebec $14,000 and Victoria $12,300. Other orchestras in Kitchener-Waterloo, Windsor and London, Ont., and Saint John, N.B., as well as the Montreal Women's Symphony, get nothing.

Dr. A.W. Trueman, director of the Canada Council, says: "There are no present intentions of cutting anyone out (of the grants) but at the same time we cannot maintain everyone for ever."

The Canada Council now is staged in a two-part study of 10 orchestras plus the Montreal women's group. The first part, already completed, was to determine financial problems. Results are in the hands of Kenneth Carter, Toronto chartered accountant.

The second part will be a three-month tour of Canada by Sir Bernard Heinze, noted 65 - year-old conductor, who will investigate artistic problems.

From the surveys the council hopes to plot a course for future aid to orchestras.

ENCOURAGE TRAVEL

The council has sought to encourage trips out of town by orchestras and its policy appears to be to favor groups that travel.

Probably the most ambitious travellers are the Vancouver, Halifax and Edmonton orchestras.

In addition to 12 regular winter subscription concerts and 30 performances for school children the Vancouver Symphony makes an annual tour of five or more interior British Columbia communities where it gives 10 to 15 concerts.

A trip to Prince Rupert earlier this year, though not typical, was more than the usual hazards. The orchestra flew to Terrace, slept until 4 a.m. and boarded a train for Prince Rupert. A landslide halted the train and the afternoon children's performance had to be cancelled. The evening program, scheduled for 8 p.m., didn't begin until two hours later in the school hall.

The musicians raced from the train and played in travelling clothes with no supper. They left next day to continue their tour to Dawson Creek, Fort St. John, Prince George and Quesnel.

The Halifax symphony toured Newfoundland the last two years and tackled difficult transportation problems but Newfoundlanders responded so well the orchestra is planning to go again this season.

FARTHEST NORTH

The Edmonton Symphony flew to Yellowknife, N.W.T., in April and performed twice in the school auditorium, believed to be the most northerly appearance by a symphony orchestra. Its last tour the trip was $2,500. Undaunted, it plans to go to Whitehorse in the Yukon and Grand Prairie in northern Alberta this year. It also hopes to arrange an unusual appearance playing between races at the Edmonton Exhibition.

After Montreal and Toronto, the Vancouver Symphony usually incurs the largest deficit, $107,455 last year out of a $198,622 budget. Winnipeg had to make up $60,000 of the $142,000 it spent, and expects to be out $80,000 this year. Ottawa's deficit was $68,320 in a $177,000 budget. Victoria's deficit was $13,000, Edmonton's $19,300 and Calgary's $23,681.

The Winnipeg situation shows how costs have risen. Three years ago its annual spending was about $60,000. Now it is twice that. Commanding no plans to perform at such places as Kenora, Ont., and the Lakehead, manager Hurley said "it costs well over $1,950 a day to tour" and audiences in those centres aren't large enough to cover costs of moving the orchestra.

Ottawa is an example of the efforts of symphonies to take music to people who aren't ordinarily not bother with classical music. Among its performances are free lunch-hour concerts on Parliament Hill.

Some orchestras, such as the Victoria Symphony, have been able to perform — almost — with fair success. All its summer shows are outside. But L'Orchestre Symphonique de Quebec tried an outdoor concert in 1957 and lost $5,000 when it rained. It hasn't tried anything like that since.

NOTED CONDUCTORS

The hiring of the best available conductors has played a part in raising the artistic standards of Canadian orchestral groups.

When Sir Ernest MacMillan retired in 1956, the Toronto Symphony got Walter Susskind after a three - year engagement with the Australian Broadcasting Commission as conductor of the Victoria Symphony in Melbourne. The 46-year-old Susskind, Prague-now a British subject, earlier had followed such speakers as Serge Koussevitsky, John Barbirolli and George Szell in conducting the Scottish Orchestra.

Another conductor with an international reputation is Igor Markevitch, 47, born in Kiev, who leads the Montreal Symphony. Last year he was guest conductor at 12 European music festivals. He has been with the Montreal orchestra four years, alternating with L'Orchestre Symphonique Lamoureux de Paris.

Irwin H. Hoffman, born in New York in 1924, leads the Vancouver Symphony, and is also permanent conductor of the St. Louis Little Symphony summer series.

Most noted Canadian-born conductor is Wilfred Pelletier, a native of Montreal who conducted at the Metropolitan Opera for 33 years. He is in charge of Montreal's symphony.

Newman - born Thomas Mayer arrived in Ottawa in 1957 following a tour with the Halifax Symphony, and the capital's orchestra has thrived under his leadership. He previously conducted opera and symphony in South America.

NEW LEADER

The Victoria Symphony is directed by Hans Sommer, 48-year-old University of Toronto graduate hired in 1948 on the recommendation of Sir Ernest MacMillan whose attention he attracted while conducting the Toronto university orchestra.

After Mayer's departure, Hall has got another Canadian, Jamie Mueller, a conductor for 12 years with the Met and who has formed a number of orchestras in Vienna before joining the orchestra for the current season.

Another Austrian is Henry Pfunkner, conductor of the Calgary Philharmonic since 1953 and formerly a violinist with the Concertgebouw orchestra of Amsterdam, the Vienna Symphony and the Dutch Philharmonic.

Although Matti Holl, 43-year-old Windsor conductor, is native of Finland he has lived in Canada since he was seven. A pupil of the great Leopold Auer, he founded the Windsor Symphony in 1946 and started an orchestra in Wallaceburg, Ont., in 1955.

STUDIES MUSIC PROBLEMS — Sir Bernard Heinze, the noted Australian conductor, has been appointed by the Canada Council to make a three-month tour of Canada studying the artistic problems facing the country's symphony orchestras. The result of his study will have a bearing on how the Canada Council aids such orchestras which are having a hard time financially. In this photo, Sir Bernard, in shirt-sleeves, discusses music with artists in the CBC concert studios at Toronto. With him are Cornelius Yesselstyn and Hyman Goodman. (CP Photo).

Winnipeg's orchestra is led by Toronto-born Victor Feldbrill, 35, who started conducting in high school and was assistant conductor of the Toronto Symphony before his Winnipeg appointment in 1958.

Just John this year hired Janis Kalmins, a former member of the Helsinki Symphony; the Regina conductor is John Thornicroft, a native of that city; Edmonton has Lee Hepner, 38, from Bushy, Alta., and London has Martin Boundy, 48-year-old native of England.

COURTING DISASTER?

TORONTO (CP) — Democracy is courting disaster by continuing to diffuse its strength in the face of world scientific, technological and cultural competition, Dr. Claude Bissell, president of the University of Toronto, warned Thursday. He urged greater efforts by democratic countries in science and technology and particularly in ensuring "the health of our culture so as to make the . . . way of life in which we believe an exportable commodity."

THE OLD PHILOSOPHER'S COLUMN

FOR FOR CHILDREN AND GROWN-UPS

ACCIDENTALLY GUMS

Before blotting-paper was discovered, people dried writing by shaking the sand over it. Sand-shakers are provided in the Ottawa House of Commons even yet — though few Members use them. Blotting-paper was discovered by chance. An employee of a paper mill spotted a batch of paper when he forgot to add the sizing. That unsightly mess was rubbed, but the manager, instead of throwing it away, kept it. Later, he tried to write on it. To his surprise, the ink sucked into the queer paper shaped, but he had the sense to realize that here was a paper which absorbed ink. He made more of the "queer" paper, which all sold rapidly and led to the start of sand-shakers.

Soft, spongy paper is used as packing material by Fox Cartage and Storage Limited, but not by accident. In fact, it is used to prevent accidents or breakage to your chinaware and other household goods on moving day. Each parcel is packed with their wonderful "Kleen-Pack" system, which safeguards all your furniture and valuables, yet causes no mess or litter, as newspapers or shavings do.

Ask Fox Cartage to give you a "Kleen-Pack" estimate if you have to move, or to put your household goods in storage in one of the modern "Fox" warehouses. Their service is the finest to be had, yet you'll be pleasantly surprised when you learn how very reasonable their charges are.

"You'll find Fox Cartage and Storage at: 95 Dundas St. E., Trenton, KE 2-2000, 278 Bridge St. E., North Bay, 472-3440; 710 Rideau St., Ottawa, CE 2-4491; 1 Front St., Belleville, WO 8-2524; and in Picton KE 2-1200.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

It should be over by the time this edition is tossed on your portices.

Jungle Jim Trimble's Mountain Cats may have retired to their wooded lairs amidst the tears of the kitchen expert-brother, or they may be calling for "raw meat" about the main street of the Ambitious City.

Or down Ottawa way the Peace Tower may be rockin' and rollin' in the throbs of the bongo drums of the vivacious Riders who next week will be taught the mysteries of how to defuse Rosters dressed in football garb.

In Hogtown maestros of bottles, bistros, tavern, motel, hostel and inn are anticipating the profits on pepper while the hired help is removing everything that cannot be nailed in preparation for the Grey Cup high jinks, fore and aft.

It is estimated that here, while and folding, running into six figures will find its way into the beauty mazy of the Queen City cash registers.

It won't all be profit. You have to extract breakage, damage, cheatings, theft, unpaid-for meals, missing linens, furniture, and perhaps some of the hired help.

We recall registering at a well-known Toronto hostelry the week following the Grey Cup revolution a few years ago. The room had been newly decorated. The talkative bellhop informed us it was one of 73 that had to be face-lifted after the fans of the victorious team had had their post-victory fling.

"There you," he said, "didn't forget a thing. They even stood on the bed, so what was left of it and threw drinks at the ceiling and walls."

"Oh?" we asked.

"It wouldn't have been so bad," he said, "but they forgot to hang on to the glasses."

Last week was the first half of the biggest "football fish-throwing fortnight" sports editors of the province have ever endured. Not a single bed, or what was left of it and threw drinks at the ceiling and walls."

Hamilton writers went all out on the deal, feeding wire services with everything from advertising soup to nuts. Ottawa scribes were not far behind.

This, probably because the big area surrounding Hamilton was blacked out as television for the first half.

But it probably won't begin to touch the flow of publicity that will pour out of the desk mills next week, when the Grey Cup fever reaches the peak.

Incidentally, Ron Stewart running back a practice punt fifty yards to Jim Trimble's butter being hospitalized with an ingrown toe-nail will flood sports desks.

Experts and non-experts, armchair quarterbacks, heroes of by-gone Grey Cup finals, coaches, managers and even some of the players of the respective teams will find their way into print.

And probably Red Strange, coach of the Blistered Thumb, Arizona High football squad will column his opinion of Canadian football in one of the metropolitan dailies.

All this, and radio and television, too, for what reason?

Certainly not to promote the sale of tickets for the big classic. You cannot get one of these if you offered to toss in your soul with the scalper price.

It could be the powers-that-be are working on the premise that if you can't see it, you can't hear it. And as far as Canadian football cities are concerned the Grey Cup pre-game and post-game celebrations already constitute "the greatest show on earth."

And that background music you hear is the tinkling thrones of the heart-sity mercantile and hotel cash registers.

Canadiens Make Rare Sortie Into Leaf Territory

Are Unbeaten in 13 Games But Leafs Have Record Too; Yet to Be Defeated at Home

By ALEXANDER FARRELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal's high-flying Canadiens, making very likely their biggest sortie into hostile territory, take dead aim on Toronto Maple Leafs tonight. They are seeking to extend a 13-game unbeaten streak.

The Leafs, defending a record of their own that stretches back into last season, plan to return the favor. They have played 13 consecutive regular schedule games in friendly Maple Leaf Gardens without meeting defeat. Canadiens lodged the NHL's only five points over Detroit's surprising Red Wings have not been beaten since Oct. 17, when they were dumped 4-3 by New Toronto (Montreal). Since then they have won 10 and tied three.

They have equalled their best unbeaten streak of last season, and are piling shooting digs on two of the all-time records: a formidable 23 games posted by Montreal during their march to their last NHL title in the 1943-44 season.

NO HOME LOSSES

Toronto is the only club still undefeated at home this season, having collected five wins and four ties in nine starts.

But the Leafs will have a long way to go if they hope to set a new standard of excellence at home. Canadiens have played 29 consecutive games in Montreal without losing. That streak began March 13, 1943, covered the entire 1942-43 season and ended Nov. 14, 1944.

Detroit will be out to strengthen its lead in the scoring race. It is the only other NHL game slated tonight. The Wings tackle the stumbling Bruins who have given up 24 goals in their last four games, in Boston.

Sunday night home games will give Chicago and New York a chance to get started on the long road back to playoff consideration. The Rangers, seven points behind fourth - place Boston, will entertain Detroit while the cellar-dwelling Black Hawks take on Montreal.

Toronto visits at Boston in the other Sunday night game.

Towel Wins Split Verdict Over Matthews

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Towel, one come back kid, became the latest to become a has-been in the lightweight cheesy from Johannesburg made a bid Friday night to wring a split 10-round decision over Philadelphia's Len Matthews.

It wasn't Towel's victory that inspired the enthusiasm. In fact there were many who thought Matthews deserved an edge. It was Willie's skill in avoiding a knockout after being knocked down twice in the eighth. Under New York rules, it is an automatic TKO when a fighter is down three times in one round.

Two Willy took eight counts. Then with a full minute to go Matthews shot the works. He hurt his man, but he couldn't drop him.

"I knew what I was doing all the time," said Willie later, "I knew about the three knockdown rule. When I got up the second time I said to myself, 'he's not going to get me. I'm going to run'."

Both referee Harry Ebbets (5-4-1) and judge Artie Aldis (6-3-1) voted for Towel. A.L. Judge Ray Kozak had it 5-3 in rounds but voted for Matthews, 136 1-3, on points.

St. F.X. Meets Guelph Aggies In Grid Final

HALIFAX (CP) — Two unbeaten teams met here today in the biggest football attraction ever staged in the Maritimes.

Sub-freezing weather and possible snow failed to stop the first All-Canada Bowl game which pitted Eastern St. Francis Xavier University of Antigonish, N.S., against its Canadian Inter-Provincial Agricultural College Redmen of Guelph.

Pre-game ticket sales indicated an overflow crowd at Wanderers Grounds here.

Both St. F.X. — Nova Scotia Football League champions — and the Redmen—winners of the Ontario Intercollegiate Football Conference — held their final workouts in frigid weather Friday. St. F.X. must early to make the 160-mile trip from Antigonish to attend a provincial government reception here for the teams.

At stake was the Robert L. Stanfield Trophy, donated by the premier of Nova Scotia for annual competition between the winners of the two leagues.

In the Dominion intermediate final last year St. F.X. lost to Fort William Redskins.

Chicubs Make Early Deal

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cubs traded pitcher Dave Hillman and infielder Jim Marshall to Boston Red Sox today for first baseman Dick Gernert. It was one of the first deals under the major leagues' new 21-day inter-league trading period which began today.

Hillman, 33, last season had a 8-11 record in 39 appearances, posting a 3.44 E.R.A. Marshall, 31, hit .233 and 11 home runs in 108 games, batting in 40 runs. Gernert, 31, hit .283 and 11 homers in 116 games, driving in 43 runs.

Charley Grimm, Cub manager, said Gernert was sought for his right-handed power hitting.

Cris D'Amato Surrenders to State Officials

NEW YORK (AP)—Troubled Cus D'Amato surrendered Friday to state authorities and immediately charged with violating the general business law for failing to respond to a subpoena. A warrant had been issued for the arrest.

The crew-cut, 51-year-old manager of former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson was released in $2,500 bail for trial in special sessions court Dec. 14.

Shortly after this action, the state athletic commission announced it would render a decision Monday on its inquiry as to alleged irregularities in the promotion of the Patterson - Ingemar Johansson heavyweight title fight at Yankee Stadium last June 20.

The commission has made five charges against D'Amato, and three against Bill Rosenbach, promoter of the fight. The commission had suspended both and revoked the license of Rosenbach Enterprises, Inc., the firm which handled the contest.

PATRICK BETTER

VICTORIA (CP)—Lester Patrick's 75-year-old Silver Fox of hockey, has won his bout with pneumonia.

He was discharged from hospital Friday after a three-week stay. Mrs. Patrick put him straight to bed.

She told a reporter: "The doctor says he'll have to be careful for a while but he's fine and will be able to get up for a time each day."

Bombers' Coach Bud Grant Said to Rank With the Best

By AL VICKERY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — Formula for relaxing before an important football game: watch another football contest.

That's what coach Bud Grant was doing today on one week before his Winnipeg Blue Bombers defend their Grey Cup championship.

Grant left for Minneapolis Friday to watch the University of Wisconsin play the University of Minnesota in a Big Ten football game. He apparently wanted to take a close look at Wisconsin quarterback Dan Lanphear, reportedly on Bombers' negotiation list.

Grant let line coach Johnny Michaels in charge of team workouts while he travelled to Minnesota, where he starred for years before turning professional with Philadelphia Eagles of the National League.

Grant sent backfield coach Joe Kalmir and injured quarterback Jim Van Pelt to Hamilton to scout today's Big Four final between the Tiger Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders.

Being able to relax seems to be Grant's forte. He likes his players to do the same. Several times during the regular-schedule Grant made hunting trips. He went hunting Sunday after Bombers won the western title before relaxing before an important football game. He watch another football contest.

This ability to forget about football probably has much to do with Grant's success — three consecutive western championships in his first three years coaching.

After a successful pro playing career with the Eagles and Winnipeg, Harry Peter Grant was named Winnipeg's head coach in January 1957. His elevation from the playing ranks was considered daring.

Many of the grandstand quarterbacks are wondering if the quiet-mannered, 31-year-old Grant shouldn't rank with the best. Some figure he already has made the grade.

Champs Reach Singles in Badminton Fray

TORONTO (CP) — Defending champions Jim Carnwarth, first-ranked Canadian badminton star, and Lucy Shedd, ranked first in Ontario, reached the singles finals of the Boulevard Club's open badminton championships Friday night. Both are from Toronto.

In first-round play in ladies singles, D. Saunders shot by O'Mara, both of Merrition, lost to Toronto players. Gravenhurst's N. Wilson was eliminated in the second round.

Three Niagara Falls players and competitors from Oshawa, and Orilla were eliminated in the men's singles first round.

They were J. McKernan, Jerry Lawrence and Fred Carbiell of the Falls. G. Long of Oshawa and J. Tremblay of Orilla.

Stratford's Ray Cornish got by the first and second rounds but was defeated in the semi-finals.

Dorohoy Reaches 800-Goal Mark

Eddie Dorohoy, veteran of 11 Western Hockey League seasons, reached the 800-point mark with a goal and two assists during Vancouver Canucks' 5-3 victory over Spokane Comets Friday night.

The win put Canucks seven points ahead of second-place Seattle Totems while Victoria strengthened their hold on third place with a 3-2 overtime tie at Edmonton. The tie gave Edmonton Flyers sole possession of fifth place.

Other Vancouver marksmen were Danny Belisle, with two, and Bob Kidell and Bruce Carmichael. Max Mcaklok the last-place Comets with two goals and an assist. Spokane's other goal came from Al Johnson.

Wolves, Royals Play 4-4 Tie

By CANADIAN PRESS

Maybe it was because there was only one game, but it was still an unusual night in the Eastern Professional Hockey League: The standings remained unchanged.

A crowd of nearly 5,000-second largest of the season watched Sudbury Wolves and Montreal Royals slug it out to a 4-4 tie at Sudbury.

The result left Sudbury in first place, three points ahead of Hull-Ottawa, and the Royals remained in third by another point.

Trois-Rivieres Lions, now threatening the leaders after a slow start, are in fourth spot two points back of the Royals. Sault Ste. Marie's another point back in fifth and Kingston is a poor last.

COACH DROPPED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter (Boom Boom) Beck, former major league hurler, was dropped Friday as pitching coach for Washington Senators. The club made him a scout.

Chatham Defeats Macs 6-2 In First of Weekend Trio; Play in Kitchener Tonight

By GARRY ALEXANDER

CHATHAM — Chatham and Gagnon went off together for Maroons pulled into a first place tie with the Mic Wallby Dunlops after last night's handicap of the hapless Belleville McFarlands a 6-2 decision over the great goaltending of Casey Manigo. Manigo joined the McFarlands shortly before game time here last night and according to coach Joe Hildebrand, will be with the club until January barring an injury to Kitchener Bost-Hurley. Manigo played well enough in the Mac cage as the Maroons doubled the visitors 46-22. The Macs were without defencemen Lionel Rokley and John Chasmar, unable to make the trip. They are expected to join the club in time for tonight's game in Kitchener.

The Maroons big line of Ted Power, Jim Dobbyn and Gary Sharpe led the winners in the scoring department, helping to account for four goals and two assists making it 4-1 after forty minutes of play.

Connelly scored two goals and had two assists while Power had one goal and two assists. Sharpe potted one goal, Billy Forbes had one and Gary Gagnon one for Chatham. Ron Gagnon scored Belleville's lone goal.

Albani pulled a tremendous play on Hildebrand when Brad Dorn put him in alone on the first play of the game and throughout the period both he and Manigo came up with some necessary saves to keep the score at 1-0 for the Macs.

Chatham opened up the scoring it wide open. Skov of the Maroons broke off for the first time 32 but the Macs failed to take advantage of the extra man.

Skov had just returned to the ice when the Maroons opened the scoring. Ted Power deflected Tennant's pass in Manigo's direction. The goaltender was thumbed again at the 12:12 stripping and once again the club was shorthanded. After its return, Gary Sharpe taking Bob Duffy's pass, fired a rising shot behind the Mac defence to open the 2-0 lead.

Close plays at both ends had the fans cheering and at 19.51 Chatham notched the Belleville with Simkie and Crawford in the penalty box for the treatment on a gouging play at the other end.

Chatham outshot Hildebrand's crew 14-8 on the period.

Manigo kept the McFarlands in contention over the remainder of the game with an outstanding display of goaltending. It made three impossible saves in the Macs-Maroons 2-goal combination in less than a minute and a half after the start of the second period

Rail Shooting Not Easy But Fun

The Little Sora rail providing a great deal of pleasure for certain discriminating gunners of the eastern seaboard each September. While the Sora or Carolina rail nests and rears its young in the fresh-water marshes anywhere from Nova Scotia to British Columbia and southern California, the little bird seems to be most numerous in the low lands of the eastern Atlantic States.

We hunt them each year in the marshes of the Patuxent River of Maryland. There the wild oats grow in profusion and the rail gather in the fresh. Cold Front does not last too long, what with shifting blackbirds, marsh wrens, bobolinks (reed birds) and, of course, various types of sparrows, the rail has plenty of competition, with the result that the wild oats are gone before the first of October.

Rail are reluctant to take wing. They prefer to run through the marsh, hiding under the grass tufts, the time to hunt them is at high tide when they must fly or swim as you approach. And if they prefer to fly and make themselves available for the gun.

The Maryland rail boats are designed for the job. Sixteen to 18 feet long with a short, 3 three-foot beam, and a 13-inch freeboard. They are relatively pointed prows — this to permit easy passage through the marshes and oat stalks. At the rear is the pusher's platform on which your guide or "pusher" can sit and stand, depending on whether he is using the paddle or the push pole. The boat, naturally, is flat-bottomed to insure shallow draft and easy passage over the marsh.

The push pole is usually about 18 feet long, at the heavy end of which is the three-toed "foot" which allows a firm grip on the vegetation of the marsh. A yellow pine sapling usually is the choice for the home-made push pole, it being strong, fairly light and rot-resistant.

SHOOTING POSITIONS

Shooting position varies with the rail gunner. Some place a couple of cushions on the boat's seat and shoot from a sitting position. Others strap draftsman's stools to the boat seat and shoot from a half-sitting, half-standing position. I, in common with the majority, prefer to stand.

The Sora rail is a little bird, about the size of a robin. He has good flying, equipment, his wings being almost as large as those of a jacksnipe. Mostly, he is fairly lame and not easily alarmed. I have seen rail flush right out from under the prow of the boat. Once in the air, his flight unusually unhurried. He looks like an easy target. Don't be fooled by appearances. The Sora rail can give your most varied shooting during the course of one high tide than any other bird, with the possible exception of the crow.

When a rail takes wing, as a rule he flushes fairly close to the boat. To shoot him immediately would be to pulverize him as food with him for table use. Thus, you must wait until he is in safe shooting range. So you keep your gun trained on him until he is about 30 or 25 yards away. Then, just as you press the trigger, the little devil points his wings skyward and drops out of sight, seeking to live and fly again.

All right, you mark him down and go in to flush him again. No dubiously takeoff this time! Instead, he flushes with a whirr of wings and twists up and away through the wildest stalks with the speed and agility of a woodcock or a ruffed grouse. No doubt about it, a scared rail can be a very difficult target.

How then, to complicate this by adding the insecure and unstable footing of a rail boat and the fact that the swing of your gun often is blocked by the tall marsh vegetation; you wind up with some very sporty and difficult shooting at a small target which, in Shakespeare's Cleopatra, is possessed of infinite variety."

JOB FOR SPECIALIST

Finding a rail after you have knocked him down among the wild oats, rushes, butter-weeds, lily pads and cattails stocks is a job for a specialist. The way these punchers can find dead and crippled rail is, has been, and always will be a complete mystery to me. A single bird I can find if I keep my eyes fixed firmly on the reed or plant beside which he fell. But let me take my eyes from that spot for a brief instant and that little rail is lost, so far as I am concerned.

Yet these punchers, colored boys mostly, can find birds in the most astonishing manner. For example — Sora rail are gregarious little fellows, and where you find one you will generally find more. Johnson and I hit one of three "pockets" one day. The birds did not flush all at once. They came up singly and in pairs, giving me a chance to lead between flushes. When the tumult of battle had cleared away, there were seven dead rail scattered here and there about the marsh.

Pair threw a boat paddle to mark one spot, then a "pusher" to mark another, and set off to find the more distant birds. Not more than 11 minutes had he had found all seven birds and we were on our way once more.

KEY TO rail shooting is not easy and it is a lot of fun. Moreover, it comes in season somewhat in advance of the upland-game season. If you haven't done any rail shooting, my advice is to try it and see if you don't find it to be an enjoyable sport.

AT THE BELLE — The love scenes between Cary Grant and Eva Marie Saint in Alfred Hitchcock's MGM thriller, "North By Northwest", are as sizzling as any ever to burn up celluloid. Here's a sample! James Mason co-stars in the spine-tingling drama mixing romance and espionage. "North By Northwest" on the big screen and technicolor, is holding over at the Belle Theatre, Wednesday is the last day.

AT THE McCARTHY—Kathleen Crowley, waitress wife of bestselk actor, is menaced by Don Sullivan, typical beatnik, who has just figured in a million dollar holdup in scene from Allied Artists' "The Rebel Set", which comes to the Odeon McCarthy Theatre, Monday and Tuesday. 2nd. action-packed hit is "Crime and Punishment U.S.A.", featuring George Hamilton and Mary Murphy.

AT THE PARK — Shown above are Sandra Dee and Lana Turner in a scene from the feature "Imitation of Life", which is in color and opens Monday at the Park Theatre. Co-starred are John Gavin, Susan Kohner and Dan O'Herlihy. Comedy is added to the program with Ian Carmichael in "Happy In The Bride."

Actors Spieling Commercials Lose Dignity and Standing

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD AP)—TV actors are losing dignity and standing.

Nearly every actor you talk to is strong for pay - TV. Most of them figure that it will be a boon to the acting crowd, bringing renewed prosperity. But Dana Andrews has another reason for his advocacy of subscription TV.

"It will free actors from the necessity of pitching the product," says he. Andrews argues that sponsors force performers to spiel the commercials with results, loss of dignity and standing.

"I don't know how forced the actors are (money is an undeniable persuader). But it is painful to see stars you have admired acting as pitchmen. The nadir was reached on a Saturday Party show. Gloria Swanson did a commercial for a lady's electric shaver.

The commercial itself was in questionable taste, especially when delivered by one of the great stars of screen history. Then she introduced another great star, Ramon Novarro, and used the back of his arm to demonstrate the shaver! It had to be seen to be believed.

Almost as jarring is the practice of having stars like Ann Sothern and Jack Webb step out of character at the end of the show to render the plug.

Groucho Marx is passing up dozens of offers to appear as guest star on other TV shows this season. His reasoning: "A guest is an actor who does four minutes on his own and then is thumbed aside while the star does 56 minutes. I feel like a nonentity on those shows—an appendix."

Groucho will stick to his own show, though he may bust out and do a special of his own, perhaps in a dramatic role. . . .

Ed Wynn gets a two - week vacation from playing Fatty Arbuckle's fairy godfather in Cinderella to go East for Miracle on 34th Street. He'll do the show five, playing the role that got the late Edmund Gwenn an oscar.

One type of television interference which cannot be controlled is caused by airplanes. This annoyance is produced by a second signal being reflected from the plane and appearing as a "ghost" image. Since the reflector is moving, this "ghost" flutters across the screen.

A TV set that is in top operating condition is less susceptible to outside interference than one which needs adjustment or overhaul. You can keep interference to a minimum on your set by having it checked regularly by CIRCLE TV SERVICE, 264 Coleman St. Experienced technicians and modern equipment are your assurance of the best possible service. Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Sunday, November 22

General tendencies: This Sunday is one of those days when it is necessary to really live the Golden Rule and to be gentle and to everyone with whom you come in contact. However, it is a powerful day if your energies are channeled in wise direction. Otherwise, accidents, arguments, all kinds of problems follow indirection.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Guard your words and actions in connection with the person most dear to you or there could be a very unfortunate misunderstood. Have fun inexpensively. Ride your most interesting hobby wisely, without risk. Be kind to others.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — The best way to overcome any tense situation at home is by attending the services you love. Strength and solace can be gained there. Be kind and courteous with all and you will find that harmony and peace suddenly occur.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Be certain you drive with care now or there could be a serious accident. An ounce of care is worth a pound of cure. Later, steer clear of arguments with kinfolk, next-door neighbors, friends and particularly mate or partners.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — You are torn between wanting to increase income and being extravagant where pleasure is concerned. Remember that this is Sunday, and greater wealth comes first from being more conservative. P. M. take care of health. Do not tax your heart.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Here is one of those days when you are tempted to act quite erratically, and it could be just from a sense of fun. Don't make any definite decisions on important issues. F. M. forego social follies or you become overheated. Relax instead.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — Why get yourself all worked up over some situation over which you have no control? Sit down and concentrate on how to get on with assistance from good friends instead. Be courteous and patient, full of the Christian spirit.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) — Don't neglect to go to church again today. This helps you keep away from those persons who could steer you in the wrong direction. Live the Golden Rule and really live.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) — You erroneously believe that you can get what you want by blatantly ignoring all rules and regulations of conduct. But now is the time to be the soul of decorum and perseverance. This will bring the benefits soon.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — You will become even more reticent now if you simply feel over the inevitable. Instead, spend a good part of the day attending services and then spending the greatest philosophers you can give above all limitations.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Be careful you do not follow the erroneous intuitions or you will get into real Dutch now. Live the Golden Rule implicitly instead and you come out on top whatever matters you happen to be in the right. Grow.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Associates could have you dashing off to follow the will-o'-the-wisp today, if you permit. And you could be placed in a position where unscrupulous persons could make you lose your faith. Hold tight to what you know to be unfailing.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Be careful you do not act or speak hastily to fellow workers or those who are vital to you, as there could result severe arrangements. Put abode in charming order and improve others instead. Be kind and thoughtful of others.

If your child is born today ... The interesting little child born today should be wearing boxing gloves, so pugnacious is the nature here. Therefore, you must early reach the power of the kind ward that dissolves wrath. Getting into sports early is the easiest way to cope with problem. An excellent chart for the government official, the police-men or policewomen or any profession where an arbitrator is needed.

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Monday, November 23

General tendencies: Be sure to carefully double - check whatever you say or do early so that you do not get involved in any sort of problem affecting your conditions or business interests. After noon and until late tonight is when there are ways to gain your long-range objectives appears. Listen to what your intuitions have to suggest then.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — During A. M. a letter or wire from out-of-town may bring about some rather confusing conditions at home or business. After lunch until late tonight all is not smooth; but you are to accomplish a great deal in whatever is currently important.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Be sure you are not envious of others today, or take any risks in A. M. Later, you can be at your very best and be off to entertain good home. Try to combine business with pleasure and make this a day of accomplishment as well.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Be careful that the influence of a sharp-tongued partner does not cause you to start a fracas at home. This would be almost disastrous. P. M. you will get news about loved ones that will be very gratifying. Show real devotion.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Endeavoring to labor at very great speed could only cause damage and errors. Work relaxed and methodically instead. Later, get reports out, go into bookkeeping records or shop. P. M. is then ideal for a good time with friends.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Rather than be off to expensive fun or using up all your meager savings to please others, stick to job and be very efficient. There is a possibility that you will get a promotion or at least get the attention of higher-ups.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Do not spoil your A. M. by worrying over some family affair. Get much accomplished that is necessary right now. Then you can go out for a really good time. Be happy-go-lucky. P. M. work on any creative hobby. Make it pay in dollars and cents.

Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) — Private worry could make your work suffer today, if you allow it. Think positively, dress nicely and then off to appointments, visits, etc. P. M. be kind to kin. Show devotion.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) — Don't go off on a tangent and endeavor to get what does not rightfully belong to you, or you lose the backing of a good friend, present security. P. M. be with those you love for a happy hour or creative interests.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Take no chances where credit or dealings in business is concerned in A. M. Also, do civic work that raises your standing in community. P. M. attend to business deals that help give you a greater abundance.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Handle all small but important duties in A. M. before you endeavor to go into new deals or meet new people. The afternoon is then ideal for starting an upswing in all of your affairs. Be alert and adroit. Expand.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — You are fortunate today in having a good friend straighten out a higher-up who is not working toward your interests, as you had expected. Later you can prove that you are an upstanding citizen and have good credit.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Better secure connections with associate who is a hindrance. Then be careful in dealings with influential person who is in a position to help you. Show that you are clever and cement better relations. P. M. have fun with pals.

If your child is born today ... The interesting child born today is the type who learns rather slowly, but once a fact enters into the subconscious, it is never forgotten. Give us fine an education as you can, for the latter years of this life are successful, profound and most worthwhile. Excellent chart for banking, government posts in foreign countries, big real estate operator and lawyer who deals with trusts.

FINE FRUIT

SHINGAY, England (CP) — A pear weighing two pounds four ounces was among those grown by a farmer in this Cambridge-shire district.

"We're still pretty busy but . . .

From now on throughout the winter we'll be glad to take orders for your jobs of renovation, redecoration, maintenance, repair and cleanup.

Plan now to have these jobs done during the cold weather lull when men and materials are more readily available. It will pay you."

THE GOLDEN YEARS

A Travelling Man All His Life, He Settled Down at Retirement

By THOMAS COLLINS

Here is a "commercial tramp" who has found his Golden Years in a town called Longmont, Colo.

The phrase is his. He was a travelling man. His name is Dempster.

"Fifty years ago," he says, "my father used to talk to me about what one should do with his life, and how to get the most out of it. He said I should obey all laws, be a good neighbor, and pay my debts promptly — but never forget that these were not enough.

"He said a man should give back to his community as much as he had received. . .

For 32 years Mr. Dempster travelled for two large automobile manufacturers, and in that period lived in 13 different cities across the country.

"I was constantly travelling, trying to make a decent living and build up a little nest egg for the later years. I managed to do that, but after 32 years I had not been a part of any community. I did not belong to a church, a service club or a lodge. I was literally a commercial tramp. . .

RETIRES WITH REGRETS

He and his wife began worrying about their retirement. Their family was grown and gone, and they could make a free choice. They were familiar with all parts of the country, and could select with some sense. "We considered Florida, California, Oregon, Washington, Maine and New England," he says. Then they picked Colorado. They agreed they wanted no part of a large city, but a town of 10,000 to 15,000. Longmont filled their bill.

"On January 1, 1958, we retired, and moved that same day . . . with mixed emotions but looking forward to a new life."

The Dempsters had enough income not to worry about food and shelter. Arriving in their chosen town, they bought a small, modest home and almost immediately joined a church. Then Mr. Dempster reinstated his membership in the American Legion long since dropped), and joined a service club.

"I went to the Chamber of Commerce and said I wanted a job without pay. Boy, did I get one fast! . . .

And from that day Mr. Dempster has been paying back to that community what he took from others over his 32-year career. "I have worked longer hours than I ever thought I could, to have done things I never thought I could do. And every minute of it has been fun. . . These are truly the Golden Years."

Whether you are a man or woman facing retirement, you may find the answer to your own future by mulling over what the Dempsters have done.

HAD A METHOD

First, they had a mission — theirs was to give back to society something of themselves.

Second, they had the courage to act, to make up their minds. At age 65 it is easier to crouch and take no chances.

Third, they weren't hungry for more money. Having lived over much of the country, and on the high level most travelling people know, they must have come to the understanding — as other wise people have done — that once you have enough for your needs, money is no longer magic after 65. You need something with more substance.

Should you follow the course that has brought happiness to the Dempsters you may find, as they did, that some people will at first misunderstand your motives. After all, you look a bit odd these days offering your services and asking nothing in return. But persist, and people will get the idea.

You're not going to find a good retirement by being preoccupied with money. You've got a 50-50 chance if you become preoccupied with things. Pick people and you're in.

Albury

ALBURY — A number attended the community shower for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bleasby, (nee Carole Borden), at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bowler, on Wednesday evening. They were presented with a lovely chair. A delicious lunch was served.

Mr. and Mr... Harold Bowler spent the weekend in Toronto.

Several attended Quinte Chapter O.E.S. on Thursday, it being installation of officers with an impressive ceremony.

Mrs. Dog Dempsey is spending a few days with Mrs. Laird Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wrong left on Sunday on a trip to visit friends in Toronto and Oshawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Williamson accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Benford Peck to Toronto on Monday and spent a couple of days with her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. C. Adams.

Mrs. Benford Peck attended the 4-H leaders' get-acquainted gathering with leaders from the district and she showing of pictures by Miss McCrecher, on Tuesday, in Westminster Hotel, with the luncheon at the Town and Country. Everyone had enjoyed attending the Winter Fair on Monday. This was sponsored by the Department of Agriculture.

FAITHFUL VISITOR

WETMOUTH, England (CP)— Fred Lizzay, 81, spent his 75th successive summer vacation at this Dorset seaside resort. "I'm not getting to know the place," he joked. "Why should I go anywhere else?"

6th SIDNEY

Brookdale F.F. Discusses Supply-Demand

6TH SIDNEY—Ten members of Brookdale Farm Forum met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Frost on Monday evening. They came to the conclusion that supply and demand set the price for commodities. When goods are plentiful the prices are lower than when the goods are in scarce quantity.

In many cases knowledge of the surplus is not known processors and producers alike may manipulate these commodities to make them appear scarce, then produce them later for the market. This tends to even up the market, but the storage is sometimes costly.

At the present time, there is not a fair market for pork, poultry and eggs. In order to produce these products the outlay is greater than the receipts. Over-production by large concerns must accept the blame for this, and They are the ones to correct it.

Rossmore

ROSSMORE — Congratulation to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mitchell on the arrival of their baby daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Ross attended the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, and visited friends in that city for a few days.

Mrs. Stan White, Mrs. Dorothy Sager also spent a day at the Royal Winter Fair.

Mr. Art Delisa returned home from hunting, reporting deer plentiful.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reddick entertained the neighbors at their home one evening, recently, to a euchre party. A pleasant time was reported and prizes awarded according to score.

Mrs. Hillman, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Empey attended the tea and bazaar on Wednesday afternoon, held in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Belleville.

The pot-luck supper and bazaar held in Rossmore church, recently, was well attended and was both financially and socially successful.

Because your child is normal

GIVE THANKS BY GIVING

Christmas is the most enchanting time of the year . . . especially for children. If you have a normal child you know to what heights happiness can be reached. But in sharp contrast to this are the thousands of heartbroken parents of mentally retarded children. Now, for the first time there is a glimmer of hope for these less fortunate mothers and fathers.

U.S. Demand For Hungary Debate Receives Backing

Green Says Youths Held Until 18 for Execution

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United Nations steering committee overrode Soviet objections today and recommended full General Assembly debate on Communist Hungary.

The move, led by the United States, was approved by a vote of 15 to 3 in the 21-nation committee. The one-sided vote indicated certain ratification by the assembly itself.

The three negative votes were cast by the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Romania. Bulgaria and Morocco abstained. The president of the General Assembly, Victor Andrade Belaunde of Peru, did not vote. Canada is not a member of the committee.

Sir Leslie Munro of New Zealand, special UN representative on Hungary, announced he was submitting his report immediately to Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold. The report was expected to form the main basis for the forthcoming debate.

The steering committee decided to take the case directly to the assembly without the usual discussion in the political committee.

Munro was appointed last year by the UN assembly to study the authority of previous UN resolutions condemning withdrawal of Russian forces from Hungary and for the creation of independence and human rights in that country.

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge asked Saturday for a debate on the issue by the U.S. government.

Australian Affairs Minister Howard Green had indicated earlier at a press conference that Canada would like the Hungarian issue debated, and he mentioned in particular, Canadian concern about reports that youths are being held for execution in Hungarian prisons until they reach the age of 18.

CONDEMNED

They would thus pay the penalty, according to the reports which have yet to be confirmed in an official way, for their part in the Hungarian uprising which was quelled by tanks and troops from Soviet Russia.

Unofficial sources in New York said the Hungarian press has condemned to death the first executions of anti-Communists, and executions are therefore difficult to check.

In another development, it was reported today that Laos is planning to withdraw her complaint to the UN against North Vietnam in charges that the North Vietnamese are the Communist Laotian rebels.

Airline Crash Takes Lives of 24 Persons

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Twenty-four persons died Saturday night in the crash of an Afghanistan airliner as it approached Beirut airport. Three passengers survived.

Two Americans were listed among the dead.

Side of Head Chewed Away by Rats While 20 Others Sleep in 4 Rooms

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Three months old Gladys Snow was attacked by rats at the general hospital here — the victim of rat bites.

The child was found Sunday morning by her truck - driver father, Se Snow, lying in a pool of blood, unconscious in her crib by the kitchen door. Police officials said the left side of the child's head appeared to have been chewed away.

A CJON radio crew visited the Snows' home Sunday. They said 11 children of the family slept each night on the kitchen table made into a bed. The reporters also said there were two families numbering 21 persons, 17 of them children, living in four rooms. One of the suspected rats had found their old to the Canadian sharing a bed with their parents. The mother is expecting another child. There was a new born baby set in one of the rooms and car in the back yard.

The father told reporters he had noticed a hole in the floor before he went to bed Saturday night and had pushed one leg of the baby's crib into it "so the rats wouldn't be able to get through."

Sunday night city building inspector Andrew Cahill said the fringe area where the child lived is a place where only the fittest survive.

"These people are squatters living on Crown land in substandard dwellings and nobody has any jurisdiction over them," Cahill said. Mayor Mews was not available for comment.

U OF T FACULTY CAMPAIGNS FOR NUCLEAR BAN

Asks Signatures For Petition to Govt.

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto faculty committee has called for cessation of the testing and production of all nuclear weapons.

In a letter sent to staff members today, the committee asked for signatures on a petition to the federal government.

The letter said world leaders must break with traditional diplomacy to effect an end to the testing and production of nuclear weapons which would destroy the present basis of civilization.

The committee, comprising 16 professors from seven departments and one graduate student, said it will deliver the signed petitions to Prime Minister Diefenbaker at Ottawa.

Student support of the petition will be solicited at an open meeting at the university Wednesday.

PRESIDENT SIGNS

The disarmament committee is sponsored by faculty members, including Claude T. Bissell, president of the university; Frank R. J. A. Jeanneret, university chancellor; W. L. Mackenzie, principal of University College; Rev. M. Kelly, president of St. Michael's College, and Dr. W. T. Frye, principal of Victoria College.

J. Tuzo Wilson, professor of geophysics and president of the Royal Canadian Geographical in 1956, said he has already signed the petition.

Professor Wilson, now president of the Canadian National Federation of Geophysicists, said Wednesday's meeting should be only the first step in a "long campaign" to nuclear weapons really effective.

The petition says that a nuclear war would cause unprecedented suffering and destroy the present basis of civilization. The major powers are now involved in the armaments race, despite the general tendency of such competitions to provoke, rather than to prevent, conflict.

The petition says Canada should press for an immediate and permanent end to the testing and production of nuclear weapons and that such weapons should be in countries that do not have them.

To Propose Meet Between April 25 And End Of May

Western Powers Agree On Date for Conference

PARIS (Reuters) — The Western powers have agreed to propose to Russia to hold an East-West summit conference between April 25 and the end of May, it was learned today.

Quarters close to the French government said the United States, Britain and France agreed on this after consultations with the West German government.

In Bonn, a West German government spokesman said today the West would propose a summit date in April or early May.

The Paris evening newspaper Le Monde says the date mentioned in diplomatic exchanges between Western capitals is April 25. Monday's foreign affairs Andre Fontaine, said April 25 is "apparently suitable" to Russia.

The final Western plans for the summit talks will be determined at a meeting of the Western heads of government in Paris Dec. 19.

In London, an authoritative informant said there is not yet been any firm agreement among the Western powers on a date for the summit meeting.

Explosion Takes Lives of Three Small Children

MONTREAL (CP) — A fire believed started by an oil stove explosion took the lives of three children Saturday in Montreal's east end.

Dead are: Real Ferland, 5, his brother, Daniel, 3½, and a sister, Lise 1½.

Firemen said the flames spread so rapidly the children were trapped in the flat on the ground floor of the apartment building.

Their parents, Raymond Ferland, 26, and his 25-year-old wife, suffered minor burns in fighting the blaze. Nine families in adjoining flats escaped safely.

Mr. Ferland, a guard at Bordeaux jail, said he was awakened from an afternoon nap by the cries of his children. He said his wife was separated from them by flames.

Flooding Rivers, Mountain Slides Hit Washington

SEATTLE (AP)—Massive rainscaused slides blocked major rail and highway routes across Washington's Cascade Mountains today and trapped 90 passengers for 10 hours in a stalled train until they got out on foot on a one-way road.

A woman was killed in a mountain pass highway accident.

Flooding rivers forced evacuation of scores of farm families in northwest Washington valleys.

Three railroads diverted traffic over a combined route south of the trouble zone.

The Milwaukee road's nine-car Olympian Hiawatha passenger train was caught between slides Sunday afternoon near Hyak, 40 miles east of Seattle. Buses from Ellensburg, Wash., east of the Cascades reached the stalled train early today and took the passengers to Spokane for transfer to a waiting train for Chicago.

The buses got through on Highway 10, restricted to one-way traffic near the slide area where the train was caught.

HAILS TRADE

The Milwaukee, Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads all hailed slides on regular routes across the Cascades. They cutbacked in direct traffic on a southern route by way of Pasco and Vancouver, Wash.

Highway traffic piled up on both sides of the cascades as the major cross-state passes — Snoqualmie, Stevens, White and Everett — all were closed by slides.

Several days of heavy rain followed by a warm chinook wind in the mountains caused the flooding. Water from melting snow poured down streams, ditches and ravines in the Cascades.

The highways department reported that the small town of Packwood, south of Mount Rainier, was being evacuated because of flooding of the Cowlitz River.

Civil defence headquarters at Seattle said the town of Port Angeles, on the Soequamlie River 25 miles east of here, also was being evacuated.

The Snohomish Valley was being flooded by waters from the Snohomish and Sillaguamish rivers. Civil defence officials requested coast guard aid and called for civilian powered boats to evacuate people in the area.

Lights could be seen blinking throughout the region as farmers signalled to rescue crews for help.

Rivers, already over their tops, were still on the rise and the rich farming area seemed itself for more.

WORSE TO COME

Civil Defence Director Harold Peterson, called the situation "extremely critical," and added, "there's every reason to think tomorrow will be worse and the next day will be worse than that."

Many secondary roads were closed and some bridges were in danger of being washed out. The Snoqualmie Pass was closed to above flood stage late Sunday night.

The unseasonably warm winds melted mountain snow and brought huge downpours of rain. The swollen rivers and the rain loosened mud and slides in the mountain passes.

Today's Chuckle

A young mother, when peace descended on the household after a particularly noisy afternoon, pointed to the children in front of the TV and quipped: "All's western on the quiet front."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis:

Milder air is bringing scattered showers with mid-36 degree temperatures to southern areas and a mixture of wet snow and rain to Northern Ontario. Tonight showers should be ending south of the lower lakes with temperatures dropping to the mid-30s. However little change is expected over central and northern areas.

NATIONAL PARKS ATTRACT 378,052 MORE THIS YEAR

Greatest Increases At Pelee and Banff

OTTAWA (CP) — The beauties of Canada's national parks attracted 378,052 more visitors during the 1959 tourist season than last year, the national parks branch reports.

The greatest increases in attendance were recorded in Point Pelee, Banff, Alta., and Riding Mountain, Man., parks, the branch said in a report prepared for the three-day federal - provincial tourist conference opening here today.

Overall attendance at all 19 national parks from April 1 to Sept. 30 totaled 1,061,329 compared with 3,683,458 in the corresponding period last year.

Attendance at Point Pelee was 642,012, up 164,277 from 1958.

At St. Lawrence Islands, attendance was 52,343, down 715 from last year, while at Georgian Bay Islands, the total was 17,444, up 3,073 from 1958.

In addition, the country's 11 national historic parks and sites were visited by 328,746, up 66,923 from last year.

National parks superintendents put forward suggestions to promote travel in national parks.

They urge a wider educational program, including assisting school children to visit the parks and more advanced publicity by leaflet form at the beginning of the tourist season.

The superintendents say additional trailer park development is needed in some parks as well as additional campground development. Also, additional tourist accommodation also is required, they say.

Cuban Labor Congress Pulls Out of Inter-American Group

HAVANA (AP)—Cuba's organized labor broke away from the anti-Communist Inter - American Regional Organization of Workers and set out today to organize a new "revolutionary confederation of Latin-American workers."

Delegates to the national Cuban Labor Congress Sunday night approved a resolution declaring that a regional agency was under control of "American imperialism, which has consistently supported all dictators."

The Inter - American regional organization was formed nearly a decade ago. It is a branch of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, the free world's rival to the Communist-led World Federation of Trade Unions.

The congress appealed to other Latin-American labor groups to join it in forming the new "revolutionary confederation."

The delegates also proposed a boycott of other resolutions being put into effect by the United States. These included a denunciation of U.S. "monopolists and the state department . . . for opposing just efforts of the Latin-American people to achieve their rights."

Another assailed Latin - American dictatorships "who are supported by the United States."

The delegates endorsed Fidel Castro's protest against the alleged arming of planes on U. S. territory for attacks on Cuba.

The convention bogged down during the night on choosing an executive committee for the Cuban Confederation of Labor. Communists fought against odds for a voice in the policy - making council. A rightist and Red labor of about 150 out of the 3,000 delegates stalled the election while they made desperate attempts to muster support against a slate that excluded Communists.

The rift affected Castro, who walked into the unruly weekend session and declared the convention hall looked "like a lunatic asylum."

Castro appeared to side with the slate put forward by the conservative labor leaders, who symbolize a working committee, made up entirely of members of the 26th of July and Communist guiding Communists.

The Reds seized on his call for a united front, however, with cries of "unite, unity!" in clamoring for representation on the 36-member executive council.

Cash Income of Farmers Will Be Slightly Lower Next Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian agriculture next year likely will be pinched by a continued rise in operating costs and a levelling off or slight decline in cash income.

That forecast is made in a report by the agriculture department, which also indicates that this year the net income of Canadian farmers will be little changed from 1958.

Cash income of Canadian farmers this year "will be about the same or slightly lower than in 1958," the report said.

If wheat exports are maintained, farmers' grain marketings will be maintained at near-record levels, "but marketings and average prices for hogs, dairy and cattle are expected to be lower."

Further, a trend to higher prices of non-farm goods and services used in farm production "is expected to continue."

The report — a 110-page study of each sector of the farm industry — was issued in conjunction with the annual federal - provincial agricultural conference.

Agriculture Minister Harkness and the 10 provincial agriculture ministers meet here today with their deputy ministers to review the farm situation.

Dealing with this year, the report says 1959 farm production may increase by five per cent over 1958 levels, subject to what happens to snowfall in the prairie grain crops.

But a larger volume of farm marketings was offset to some extent by lower prices.

That would leave farm cash income this year "somewhat lower" than last year's $2,785,900,000.

But the report says a three-per-cent rise in prices of what farmers buy next year is expected to leave his net income close to last year's level. Farm cash income was $1,377,600,000.

Most of this year's grain income came from the sale of flaxseed, tobacco, barley, livestock, poultry and other farm products, and larger Canadian wheat exports.

Near - record hog production was a feature of the dismal picture this year and a reduced 1960 production of 7,000,000 to 7,500,000 hogs is predicted, a decrease of 15 to 20 per cent.

Barley sales, marketings and exports, dictated by United States influence, may prevail, U.S. hog prices have been among the best for years.

The 1959 production of milk is expected to total 18,000,000,000 pounds, same as last year. A slight decline is forecast for next year, combined with increased dairy produce sales.

No change in butter prices is foreseen until April 30 next year, when government action will set the pattern. Continued record prices for cheese are envisaged.

Little change is foreseen in egg prices or feather chicken output.

Ghana Prepares To Greet Prince

ACCRA, Ghana (Reuters) — Ghana's capital is decked in bunting and arches swelled this West African capital today for a traditional welcome ceremony to welcome the husband of Queen Elizabeth.

The biggest show will be in Independence celebrations of 1957, when Ghana became the first independent Commonwealth state after having been the British colony of the Gold Coast since the arrival of Prince Philip on a visit he is making to places of interest.

Flags flew from homes and stores, colored lights were festooned along the main streets and huge signs proclaimed "Welcome".

The prince was flying in from the small Sahara Desert town of El Golea. He stayed there Sunday night.

Long-Distance Walks Zaniest Craze to Hit Britain in Years

LONDON AP) — A Russian-born woman doctor trudged into London from Birmingham Sunday night with her feet wrapped in rags and claimed a world long-distance walking record.

Barbara Moore, 36, the wife of English sculptor Harry Moore, said she covered the 119 miles in 27 hours and 30 minutes to break a record for the distance which already had been broken twice earlier in the day.

Miss Moore earned her footsies, Pangio, on the long lonesome journey. She said she wore 10 pairs.

"I'm sure I would have done it in the 24 hours I planned if I had been wearing proper running shoes," she said. "As it was, I had to wrap my feet in sacking and bandages to protect them."

She said all the nourishment she took during the journey was a tin of orange juice and a can of mixed vegetable juice.

The time claimed by Dr. Moore was 2½ hours less than the mark of 30 hours flat set only a few hours earlier by a young airman who marched 110 miles from Norwich to London.

Dr. Moore's march capped a weekend which brought out at least 20 people to attempt long distance walks in Britain's latest zaniest craze.

Tired feet plodding along the hard tarmac roads of England signalled a painful renaissance in the order of human antics in which fingers sitting and gold fish swallowing belong.

Saturday night and Sunday, 15 Britons marched to break a record for the shortest distance between the two capitals of Scotland and the steep valley roads of Wales, all on foot and pulling unbeatable times for 110 miles — an arbitrary figure to a man whose origin has never become clear.

Two men failed to tell time in spectacular manner found other excuses: Two London students ran a 110 mile relay from Edinburgh to Oxford Saturday—a distance they were unable to cover for challengers. The manure they laid repetitiously along the line Sir Winston Churchill planked in the university recently.

And in Bury St. Edmunds, sedate East Anglian town, 83 men and their girl friends claimed a world record by packing themselves into 84 square feet of space. The event took place in a pub called The Nutshell, the smallest pub in Britain.

Amato's Licence As Manager, Second Revoked

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York state athletic commission today revoked Carmine Amato's licences as a manager and second and suspended promoter Bill Rosensohn's matchmaking license for three years. D'Amato is the manager of former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson.

Previously the commission revoked the licence of Roensohn for five years, which holds the contract for the return bout between world heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson of Sweden and Floyd Patterson of New York.

The commission announced its decision after conducting a three-month inquiry into irregularities in the promotion of the first Patterson-Johansson fight in New York.

D'Amato, 53 - year - old New Yorker, was found guilty on four of the five charges placed against him by the commission.

Counsel for Rosensohn Enterprises, headed by New York lawyer Vincent J. Vecchione, said Rosensohn had applied for a licence as commissioner of jurisdiction and take the case to the New York state Supreme Court.

The action against D'Amato may rule out the Johansson-Patterson return bout.

POLIO UNDER CONTROL?

MOSCOW AP) — Dr. M. G. Candau, Brazilian director-general of the United Nations World Health Organization, predicts that polio will be under control in the Americas "in a few years" experiments are confirmed." He told a Russian newspaper today that the spread use of live anti-polio vaccine in the Soviet Union proves promising.

Two Married Couples Killed At Alliston

ALLISTON (CP) — Two married couples were killed Sunday when a car went out of control and hit a tree on a country road just south of this town 22 miles northwest of Barrie.

Dead are Russell McMaster, 33, his wife, Mathilda, 28, Roy Leslie, 30, and his wife, Audrey, 35. Both couples are from Alliston.

Lloyd Gerard, 19, also of Alliston, suffered concussion and shock and was admitted to hospital here.

The car was returning from nearby Tottenham where the couples had attended a social evening at the Canadian Legion branch.

Provincial police said the door on the driver's side was embedded in the tree trunk. A passing motorist saw the lights of the car off the road and called police.

The McMasters leave two children, the eldest six.

Leslie worked as a civilian messenger driver at Camp Borden. Gerard is employed as a foreman in Etobicoke Township.

MINISTER RESIGNS

COLOMBO, Ceylon (Reuters)—Prime Minister Stanley de Zoysa resigned Sunday as the political crisis caused by the assassination of Premier Solomon Bandaranaike nearly two months ago continued to buffet Ceylon's government. The opposition parties made de Zoysa the target of bitter criticism following the arrest of his elder brother, Richard, in connection with Bandaranaike's slaying.

Deaf Boy Admits Killing Playmate

OLATHE, Kan. (AP)—Thirteen-year-old George Martens, a deaf boy, used Algo lacquer and his untrained voice Sunday to tell how he killed an eight-year-old playmate.

The playmate, Steven Moscow, pleaded for mercy before he died under a rain of knife blows Saturday afternoon, Martens said.

Coroner John Johnson said the younger boy's skull was fractured and he was stabbed 47 times in the head, neck, back and chest.

Martens told police he lured Steven into a clump of timber on the pretext of showing him the dead rabbit, then killed him to get revenge. Steven, he said, had run into his bicycle repeatedly and damaged it.

SERGEANT'S SON

Steven was the son of Marine Sgt. Lawrence Moscow of Newburgh, N.Y., who is assigned to the Olathe naval air station.

George's father, Henry Martens, is an Olathe building contractor. Olathe is on the south-western fringe of Kansas City's metropolitan area.

Police tracks in the field where Steven's body was found led officers to question young Martens.

Grand Master Of Odd Fellows Visits District

PICTON — "I do not know any organization" which does more for humanity than the Independent Order of Odd Fellows", declared William G. McNeil, Toronto, Grand Master of Grand Lodge, Province of Ontario, speaking of a rally of lodges in Bay of Quinte District No. 47, here Saturday night. The Grand Master went on to tell the 200 present of the many ways in which lodges and their affiliated Rebekah Degree Committees alleviate distress and help those in need.

The Grand Master was introduced by Ralph W. Hubbs of Picton who is Grand Patriarch of Grand Encampment in Ontario. Presiding as chairman was Edward Rolston of Picton who is District Deputy Grand Master of District 47, while proposing the toast to the Visitors was Ross Jeffery, who is District Deputy Grand Master. All three are past Noble Grands of Bay of Quinte lodge here, and it is very unusual that all three Grand Lodge officers come from one lodge in the same year.

DDGM Rolston presided as chairman and a civic welcome was extended by Mayor H. J. McFarland. County Warden Ern Ward, a past Noble Grand, led a sing song with Mrs. Adrian Dulmage at the piano. Other entertainment was by a lively tap dances by Miss Bonnie Hayden with Miss Gail Mitchell-ner at the piano. The Picton lodge boasts the distinction of sponsoring the only lady brass band and eleven members under bandmaster Creighton Lockyer were present and contributed a number of selections.

Toast to the Visitors was proposed by Earl Fox of Stirling, Commander of Parkside Militant of the Department of Ontario, with response by DDGM Rolston. Toast to the ladies was proposed by Robert Rolston, Noble Grand of Bay of Quinte Lodge, a son of the DDGM, and was replied to by Mrs. Clarence Hammond, N.G. of Quinte Rebekah Lodge, which served the beautiful repast.

RESPONDED TO TOAST

Responding to the toast to the visitors were George MacDonald, McDonald, DDGM last year; Mrs. A. Steenburgh of Trenton, District Deputy President, Rebekah Assembly of Ontario, and Noble Grands of district lodges.

In expressing appreciation to the Committee for an inspiring address, DDGM Rolston made the presentation of a pair of cuff links and a tie with the IOOF emblem, as a memento of this occasion.

In his address, the Grand Master touched on the important work being done by the CPF (cancer — polio — tuberculosis) committees, sponsored by the lodges for the public welfare. He gave special mention to the Parham committee, which had been responsible for erecting and furnishing of two homes for families who had suffered from fire. He instanced many cases where aid had been given to relieve those in distress. As well, he commended the committees on the free loan of hospital beds and wheel chairs.

Service to humanity is being rendered by Odd Fellow and Rebekah lodges through Homes for the Aged, Mothers Pilgrimage for young people, educational scholarships, care of widows and orphans and support of community projects. The Grand Master felt there are many who would like to share in this fellowship and work and urged each member to secure one new member during the coming year.

TITO CHIDES CHINA

NIS, Yugoslavia (CP)—President Tito said Sunday he was "deeply disappointed" by Communist China's attitude over its border dispute with India. The Yugoslav leader told a crowd of 100,000 at a superhighway inaugural: "We are convinced that China will know how to correct such a way and to take a road which will bring her friends and not people who hate her."

Space Capsule Hunt Abandoned

VANDENBERG AFB., Calif. (AP) — The United States Air Force Sunday night terminated the search for the missing capsule of the Discoverer XIII satellite. What happened to it is still a mystery.

It separated from the orbiting rocket over Hawaiian waters Thursday and dropped toward the ocean. Air force planes had hoped to snare it as it parachuted down, but the chute may not have opened. The satellite was launched here Friday.

Meanwhile, the U.S. is prepared to celebrate the U.S. Thanksgiving holiday Thursday by attempting to propel a trio of packages into outer space. The first could be a shot at the moon Thursday.

Also on schedule are a mid-December attempt to orbit the big, 100-foot satellite about Christmas-time.

23 Homeless After House Fire On Ridley Street

Twenty-three occupants stood by as Belleville firefighters battled a blaze in a large frame house on the second floor of 225 North Front and Ridley Streets for close to two hours Saturday afternoon. Seven families, three of whom were boarders, and nine children were burned out of the house from a fire caused by an overturned electric heater.

Quick action by the firemen resulted in one baby which had been overlooked in the initial confusion amongst the residents being rescued before harm came to it. The precious child was immediately taken to the Belleville General Hospital for examination and released a few hours later.

The flames did little damage to the exterior of the home but the inside and contents were scorched. A few possessions were salvaged but the firemen but most were lost to the fire. The house, owned by Jim Cole, was insured for $7,000 by Mrs. Bigal, but had no insurance on the contents.

Four fire trucks and crews answered the call, which was turned in at 1:45 p.m., including a truck and crew from No. 1 Fire Hall on East Bonar Street. The fire was well underway at the arrival of the trucks and had a good hold. It was prevented from going through the roof however and spreading to the outside of the building.

The Salvation Army has rendered assistance to the homeless occupants.

Funeral announcement will appear later.

Typical Safety Practices in Industry Topic

A meeting of the Belleville-Trenton Section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association was held at the Club Canara on Thursday evening, with more than 50 employees of 23 district industries being represented by the 25 delegates attending. These 23 industries are participating members with 34,000 Ontario employees companies which comprise the Industrial Accident Prevention Association. This organization was formed in 1920 for the purpose of preventing industrial accidents through the encouragement of safe working conditions in the plants of member firms. Fred Ebbitt, of Stewart-Warner was the chairman of the meeting.

"Typical Safety Practices in Industry" was the theme of a discussion with pertinent questions from the representatives being ably dealt with by a panel consisting of The Northern Electric Company Limited, comprising of R. L. Dunphey, Moderator; E. R. Valcamp "Management's Views on Safety"; W. Cory, "Safety at the Operating Level," L. Dent, "The Employee's Role in Safety"; F. Legge, "What the I.A.P.A. Means to Industry." G. Cooper, Safety Department at Northern arranged and assisted the panel.

A summing up to the discussion it was stated that "Confidence in a Company's interest and ability to insure the physical well being of each of its employees is an essential element in building employee morale" which was defined briefly as the "enthusiasm to work".

$2.30 a Pound Paid for Top Steer in Sale

TORONTO (CP)—Market steer prices ranged from $2.30 a pound down to 30 cents a pound at the Winter Fair's closing auction.

Top price of the sale, which saw nearly 500 animals go on the block, was $2.30 a pound paid by Loblaw's for the 910-pound Hereford grade steer shown by the McIntyre Ranching Company of Lethbridge, Alta.

The grand champion steer in the Queen's Guineas competition, a 852-pound Aberdeen Angus shown by Percy Early, 18-year-old 4-H Club member from Kerwood, Ont., brought $2.20 a pound from Dominion Stores.

Hamilton's Fraser Packers paid 60 cents for the reserve grand champion, a Shorthorn shown by Larry Gardhouse of Milton.

The champion Angus, entered by John Heyworth of Campbellville, brought 45 cents from Canada Packers.

Three Churches Observe Their Anniversaries

TRENTON — Special anniversary services were held in three Trenton churches this weekend.

The 82nd anniversary of the dedication of King Street United Church was observed. Rev. J. T. Irwin, minister at the church, spoke of the past and future of the church at the morning and evening services. The church was dedicated as "The New Canada Methodist Church," on September 5th 1877. Dedication services at that time were conducted by Rev. George Young, president of the Toronto Conference. The church was later known as the Trenton West Methodist Church, the Wesley Methodist Church, the Trenton Methodist Church, and when the union of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches took place, as King Street United Church. In the sanctuary of the church at the time of the dedication, hung a picture painted in church by Jay Raymond of Toronto, in memory of his mother, Mrs. Eliza Raymond, who was a member of the congregation for many years and also for which has been hung at the back of the church.

Trenton's Salvation Army Corps marked its 75th anniversary on Saturday with a congregational tea party and supper in the hall. The dinner was convened by Mrs. Henry Fulford. Head table guests were Colonel and Mrs. Rufus Spooner, Brigadier and Mrs. Gerard Seniour, Belleville, Mayor and Mrs. Ross Burtt, Senator W. J. Roebuck and Mrs. Clarence Saylor, Major and Mrs. Victor Greenwood, of Belleville, and Mrs. and Mrs. Eric Smith. The head table was decorated with a floral arrangement carrying out the army colors of red, blue and gold. This centrepiece was the handiwork of Matt Thompson. Following the dinner, a musical program was presented with Mrs. Gennery as guest soloist.

Colonel Spooner was the speaker at the Sunday services. On Sunday afternoon a special musical program was given with bands and singing groups from Belleville and a musical ensemble from Toronto being present.

Anniversary services were also observed at Trenton United Church. Mr. Jack Shouse, who is in his third year of medicine at Queen's University, spoke at the morning and evening services. Sunday day, assisted by the student minister, Mr. Clare Woodbury.

Two Trenton Artists Exhibit Paintings

TRENTON — On Saturday, Nov. 21, an exhibition of still paintings by two well-known Trenton artists, Mrs. J. L. (Maxine) Garrett and Mrs. Jack (Ormah Bernley) Taylor, was held in the Town Hall. A large number of art devotees attended the exhibition. Crowds were on hand all loud in lively praise for the works displayed.

Mrs. Garrett's fine examples of still life received many favorable comments. Her landscapes, scenes for the most part easily recognized by Trenton art lovers as portraying' country surrounding the town, were notable for an expert blending of coloring.

While one of the characteristics of Mrs. Garrett's landscapes is a muted overall effect, Mrs. Taylor's landscape scenes feature clear-cut sunshine and shadow.

Mrs. Garrett has made several very successful ventures into the field of portraiture, while Mrs. Taylor has concentrated on still life and landscapes.

East Trenton Girl Guides Hold Tea, Sale

TRENTON — The East Trenton Girl Guides held a tea and sale in College Street School on Saturday afternoon. The tea was well attended, and a financial success from all reports. Mrs. Ross Milligan was convenor of the tea room, and she was assisted by Mrs. G. Pare.

Kitchen conveners were Mrs. Omar Smith, Mrs. M. Conway, and Mrs. McKenzie. Replenishing the tea tables were Mrs. T. Bedford, Mrs. G. Pare and Mrs. Williamson. The centre table was decorated with bouquets of fall flowers donated by Trenton florists. Pouring tea were Mrs. A.-Winder, Mrs. M. Conway, Mrs. J. Wright and Mrs. G. Ellsworth.

The home cooking booth was conducted by Mrs. A. Abears, Mrs. M. Kennedy, Mrs. S. Wilson and Mrs. Aitkenhead.

In charge of the fancy work table were Mrs. J. Lovett, Mrs. H. Hollis, Mrs. Fry and Mrs. E. Emery.

The "Grab and Take" table was handled by Mrs. O. Cooney and Mrs. W. Pallidwar.

Novelties and Christmas cards were Mrs. R. King, Mrs. Ramage and Mrs. M. Guides. Mrs. S. Wilson had charge of the bake table, and Mrs. L. Sweigard and Mrs. A. Cole were in charge while Mrs. W. Bilght and Mrs. Hall sold groceries.

Tea was served to the guests in the dining room by Mrs. J. Ritchie led the Brownies in the singing of Christmas carols.

Delightful Tea Sponsored by Guides, Brownies

TRENTON — One of the most delightful events of the season was held by the West Trenton Girl Guides and Brownies in Dufferin Street School, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Howard Asix was the convenor of the tea.

The tearoom and other rooms have been tastefully and prettily were displayed had been tastefully decorated in a Christmas motif. Mrs. Asix and Mrs. Fiff, Mrs. Winder and Mrs. C. Miller.

The centre table was decorated by a charming arrangement of baby yellow mums flanked by yellow candles. At afternoon were Mrs. R. Black, Mrs. Barlow, Mrs. T. W. Spear and Mrs. H. Ferguson.

Replenishing the tea tables were Mrs. Ross Milligan, Mrs. A. Wilson, while Mrs. K. Blachford and Mrs. D. Vandervoort were in charge of the tearoom.

In charge of kitchen arrangements were Mrs. W. McLaren.

Mrs. C. Crews, Mrs. T. Saider and Mrs. T. Coon were at the home baking table and the Cookie Bar, where cakes and sold, cookies were sold by cookies, made by the Guides, Mrs. N. Ramsay and Mrs. S. Bridges.

Mrs. O. W. Larry and Mrs. E. Embleton were the saleslades at the candy table, and Mrs. A. Cole.

Suitable flims were shown to the girls by Mrs. V. Fair and Mrs. Coon. Coon. Mrs. Several overpopulas—fish pond were Mrs. G. Brown, Mrs. W. Shier, Mrs. Jamieson,) Mrs. J. Dobby and Mrs. R. Birkett.

Johnny Ray Being Held on Morals Charge

DETROIT (AP) — Sob-singer Johnnie Ray, 33, was ordered by Saturday to stand trial December 1 on a morals charge of accosting and soliciting a police-man.

Ray was released under $500 bond after he pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in Detroit recorder's criminal court. He had been held overnight in jail.

The singer was held a $25 fine when he pleaded guilty in the same court to a similar charge June 5, 1951. In each instance a policeman accused him of making an indecent proposal.

"I can only say that the whole thing is a complete misunderstanding." Ray told reporters after his plea had been entered by one of his two lawyers. "I have witnesses to testify to the validity of anything I say at my trial."

Continue Hunt For Varnish Amongst Milk

NAPLES (CP)—Police checked dozens of shipments of Canadian milk today in continuing efforts to find a number of poisonous cans of varnish in similar types of cans that may have become mixed up with the shipments.

The Canadian milk, a free shipment under international relief appeals, arrived here last week aboard the freighter San Selvaggio. Unloaded with the milk was a consignment of varnish in white-labelled cans that resembled the milk containers.

New York Boy Survives Trip Through Sewer

NEW YORK (CP) — Police still were searching today for an unidentified "fat boy" who rushed a nine-year-old into a sewer and started him on a nightmare journey under the streets of upper Manhattan.

The younger boy, Antonio Iaiuta, was rescued by police Saturday after he had been pewed from the sewer outlet into the Harlem River hundreds of feet from the street manhole into which he had been pushed. The boy's parents ad calling the police.

Patrolman Neil Bodell, was et upon by a fat teen-aged boy who pushed him into the open manhole. Neither Baiuta nor his friends could say if the man-hole had been uncovered before the boys began playing nearby.

After the boy was pushed through the hole he toppled down a 15-foot shaft, then floated and skittered through 600 feet of sewer.

"I plunged down there," he said later from his hospital bed. "I did not think I would get out alive. It was dark and the water came up to my chest and I thanked much of the way."

Question Seamen About Decision To Leave Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — Immigration officials today planned to question 150 crew members of the action to take against them for walking off the British bulk carrier Wavertree Sunday.

A department spokesman said "we believe it's a case of repatriation rather than deportation."

H. F. Wade said the United Kingdom sailors would be asked to justify why they walked off the Wavertree rather than vessel left under tow for South Shield, England. Only 16 of the 166-man crew members are making the 3,000-mile crossing. The 10,000-ton vessel is being towed to England for engine repairs.

He said there was a possibility of a marine inquiry, but "we don't yet know what an inquiry board will be set up."

The dissident crew members refused to sail because she was "unseworthy."

Neil Beattie, of Dale, Scotland, spokesman for the dissenting seamen, said "we don't want to risk our lives on an ocean crossing in their derelict."

guests were entertained by the Brownies who sang several traditional Christmas carols.

AOTS Rally Planned

DISK JOCKEY FIRED — Disk jockey Thomas (Tom) Clay reads a prepared statement to newsmen in Detroit in which he said he had been fired by radio station WJBK. He admitted the ouster was for taking payola. The 30-year-old shock-haired favorite of teenagers said he accepted no outside payments when he first came here to work. However, he said offers came to him after his ratings became No. 1. He estimated that in the last year and a half he had gained about $4,000 through payola. (AP Wirephoto).

Will Not Publish Unsigned Letters

Recently The Ontario Intelligencer has received a number of letters to the editor which have borne no signatures. Such letters will not be published. Only letters which are signed by the writer are accepted, though a nom de plume will be substituted for the signature when published if the writer so requests.

The Public - - Honest Or Dishonest

"The public is honest. People are revulted by dishonesty, whatever our American manipulators of public quiz programs would have us believe."— Michael Wardell, publisher of the Fredericton, N.B., Daily Gleaner.

"Examples of this breakdown (in moral standards) be seen every day in the letters to the editor columns the newspapers. The recent television quiz scandals brought hundreds of letters not criticizing the ...ating but trying to justify it in the writer's mind." ...apt. G. J. Glavas, head of the Los Angeles police ...partment juvenile bureau.

All right, who is right?

Well, let's begin right, because Brig. Wardell is a ...adian, speaking of Canadians, and Capt. Glavas an ...erican, speaking for Americans? An interesting ...ory, but one which we do not think will hold water. ...re are probably some very real differences between ...e moral standards of the majority of Canadians and ...e moral standards of the majority of Americans, but ...ink either they are as extensive as all that.

Yet, in essence, they may both be right for an ...irely different reason. Capt. Glavas himself pro...ges the needed clue. "There is no such thing as ...t and wrong—instead there is a series of greys. ...ere is a danger in that to steal money from a ...ger corporation, while not completely justified, ...uld not be treated as seriously as to take money ...m the corner beggar." So says the Los Angeles ...eeman. And it is obvious that he does not agree ...th Brig. Wardell's statement that "dishonesty is ...ld not view the situation in exactly the way which ...pt. Glavas deplores? Surely it is a worse crime to ...al a crust of bread from a starving child than to rob ...illionaire of his wallet. (That, we see immediately ...s written, is a revealing sentence, placing the writer ...ely in the category of people whose moral standards ...pt. Glavas deplores).

Yet it is possible to feel this way and to still be ...olted by dishonesty—including not only the dishon...y of the people who manipulate quiz shows but also ...e unexpected dishonesty of those who write ...ters defending such "rigging."

If you want proof that Brig. Wardell is essentially ...ht, take an old wallet and try "forgetting" it, on ...e seat on a bus, at a table in a restaurant, on a ...unter in a store. You will be pleasantly surprised at ...e number of times somebody calls out "Heh, you ...got your wallet." That is, of course, if you don't ...ake it look too bulky by stuffing it with too much old ...per. Old paper? Why of course; it's fine to have ...ith, but there's no sense in carrying it too far.

No Strong Silent Men

We are disillusioned.

In this age of vanishing frontiers and of public ...lations experts, it is difficult to find the modern ...uivalent of the strong, silent men of yesteryear. We ...d fondly imagined that they might yet be discovered ...the virile West. We did not expect to find them ...stride a horse, mind you, or with spurs jingling as ...ot was shifted to a more comfortable position on a ...ness rail. We saw them in a different environment. ...NORAD headquarters at Colorado Springs. Can ...ou not just see them there, today's pioneers, tall and ...raight in uniform, at home among the electronic ...rvelsof the age, vigilantly guarding the safety of a ...ntinent?

Strong men—yes. But silent? Well, in Ottawa ...e other day Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, NORAD com...ander-in-chief, was asked who was minding the store ...ile he and his deputy, Air Marshal Slemon of the ...CAF, were away. Both he and Slemon could be ...eached by telephone at almost any minute, he replied. ...If we're not getting good service, someone is getting ...yped. Our telephone bill is $33,000,000 a year."

That seems like an awful lot of money to keep up ...e the parity line.

THE BORROWED BABY

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I've have a bouncing baby boy;
He came to us today.
He's ours to care for and enjoy;
He's ours to romp in play.
There's sunshine in his every smile,
God bless his curly head;
He's come to stay with us awhile—
His mother's ill in bed.

Oh, what a change this babe has made
With us two grownups here;
The house a warmth has strayed
Where all was chill and drear.
Now laughter seems to fill the place,
Its cordiality is shed
The sunshine of his baby face,
Whose mother's ill in bed.

Since we're no baby at our own
To crown our lasting joy,
We're borrowing now before the throne
Of him, our borrowed boy.
It may be wrong, but sometimes when
In bed he's tucked away,
We look at him a moment then
And dread the parting day.

Unhappy Seek Audiences

Montreal Gazette

The most treacherous thing about unhappiness is that it may become dramatic. And it is hard for anyone to resist the temptation to cast himself in a dramatic role. Happiness, on the other hand, is likely, by its very nature, to be unspectacular. The happy person is most often too busy to be bothered with the impression he is making upon others. Happiness is often secretive, while unhappiness may be looking out for an audience.

Charlie Chaplin knows, as a child grew rather exasperated with his Mirth-and-Bee Hive, remembered the day when his father was taken to prison at the Marshalsea for his debts. That was cause enough for unhappiness, but Dickens' father was the very man to make the most of it. As he was marched through the gloomy portals, he theatrically paused and looked at the sun had set upon him forever.

Even those who have attained high position and great wealth must find that the drama of unhappiness adds something to their satisfaction. Complacent success may be comparatively uninteresting. But to be unhappy in the midst of splendor is to command immediate attention.

Cecil Rhodes was not reluctant to admit his unhappiness. Francis Yeats-Brown, of Warwick, once asked if he had ever been really happy. "I am happy when I am gaining and developing things that can never come to me again," Rhodes replied. "But I expect you mean, have I been happy with things I've got? I've agreed that this was what she had meant. Then she noted that Rhodes had shaken his head emotion head vigorously." And he went on to say: "No I have never known that sort of happiness."

On another occasion he was travelling by train with Brandes and Stead. The subject of happiness had come into the conversation. Rhodes listened, Stead followed it up by asking, "Mr. Rhodes are you a happy man?"

Rhodes replied with a tell-tingly dramatic. "I shall never forget," Stead writes, "the way in which he threw himself back against the cushions of that compartment, and then gripped the arm of the seat, and in this tense attitude replied, very quietly, that extraordinary stare of his that exclaimed, "Happy! I—happy? Good God no!"

Beanwell Booth remarks that so long as the world lasts we never forget "the tragedy — the utter tragedy" of his life story. Yet it may be that this role as the unhappy titan was not entirely unconscious. Those whose unhappiness is genuine are less inclined to speak of it by throwing themselves back against the cushions and contriving their despair quite so effectively.

To men of literary taste, with a gift for words, the temptations of unhappiness may become even more compelling. They may be led to speak of their unhappiness with the most dramatic words.

There is a hint of this in Rudyard Kipling's conversation with Rider Haggard, as recorded by the latter. The attractive topic of unhappiness had come into the conversation.

Kipling said that this world had "every attribute to make it delightful, except marriage, bereavement, almost irresistible temptation, and dreaming." A mixture with which we are clothed in the garments of suffering, etc., ending in the worst fate man can devise, namely, old age."

The dubiousness of this passage lies in the sheer fun. Sorrow, when it is true, is more impressive for saying that little of it.

And happiness, when it comes, makes a person so content with life that he cannot trouble himself to be dramatic. So it was with a certain Mr. Oliver Edwards.

He would never be known today if he did not happen to become Iain Kennedy's wife of Dr. Samuel Johnson. Edwards and Johnson met one day in London, and having met each other since they were at Pembroke College in Oxford 40 years before.

In his conversation, Edwards said: "You are a disappointed man, Dr. Johnson. I have tried too in my time to be a disappointed man, but I don't know how, cheerfulness was always breaking in."

In those words the nonexistence of happiness finds its perfect expression. Life itself was good enough for Oliver Edwards. He has for his cheerful to be dramatic.

It Is Not A Question of Right Answers

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I enjoyed a recent session in the Saturday Review, showing a Boy Scout sitting at the piano. The boy's father is winding and saying is the mother: "He's practicing hard, Beverly, friendly . . . and untalented."

Scarcely a week passes that a letter-writer does not bang on my desk; or sometimes it is a book, published at the author's own expense. Most of these works are on philosophy, or economics, or religion and almost all of them are problems, from a literary point of view.

Most of these aspiring authors are trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly . . . and untalented. Their fine characters and good intentions gleam from every page; and so does their lack of writing ability.

It is the religious manuscripts, especially, that are the most painful to look at. These writers are convinced that they show a real talent for expounding the ins of the Gospels, or the meaning of the parables, or the wars in the Old Testament. They are brimming with evangelical ardor.

Yet I must report that not nothing is harder to write than a book on religion that is not shallow, trite, confused or ponderous. Even writers who are capable of writing a fine book on another topic flounder into the most awful banalities when they plunge into the subject of religion.

In our own time, I can think of only a handful of accomplished authors who have written on this brilliant: his biography of Thomas Aquinas and one of the churchmen have done. Dorothy Sayers wrote a remarkable book on "The Mind of the Maker," C. S. Lewis, in "The Screwtape Letters" and "The Great Divorce," gave us two modern masterpieces.

But these successful authors on religious topics manage to avoid all of the pitfalls in the field: sentimentality, false piety, hysteria, a murky kind of mysticism, and a blind reliance on "faith" rather than on reason.

The amateur writer, ignorant about the subject, and they assume that strong feelings make strong writing, and that love, scholarship — in short, all the marks of a professional writer, on a complex topic.

Ninety-nine out of a hundred religious books on the shelves are useless; and many, of the Norman Vincent Peale popularizing type, are actually dangerous to the long run. The closer a subject is to the heart of man, the more difficult it becomes to communicate its meaning to another. A good character is essential for a Boy Scout, but it is not enough help in playing the piano, or writing a book about it.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 22nd, 1939

From London, Eng., comes this despatch. From his apartment a mere carrot's throw from rationing headquarters of the Ministry of Food, unemployed ex-Lieutenant George Bernard Shaw today penned an anxious letter to the press. He said: "May we ask for an official assurance that when rationing begins, special provision will be made for vegetarians? For some unexplained curious reason, vegetarians are the most ferocious class we have and any underestimate of their numbers would be a reduction in our national fighting spirit. Not all propaganda to their members."

Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad. Who runs the ancient classical aphorism as true today as it was thousands of years ago, and as it will be to the end of time? Hitler Stalin are behaving with all the savagery, brutality and unrecognizable mercilessness of the damned. The cruel mind and the iron will on the poor Poles are doing the same in the scattering of men along shipping routes in violation of international law, while they hesitate on just for reasons best known to the German high command. But on the seas where the Allied blockade reigns supreme, they are hurling their weapons in demonic fury, indicative of their sense of frustration and ultimate defeat. The Nazi must have realized that the British would retaliate by seizure of German exports on the high seas, but in spite of this they went forward, as a conviction or they will face the ability to secure gold and raw materials which they greatly need. Their action surely rises to the weaknesses German characteristics in the last war.

Winterize Habits, Too

Montreal Gazette

The first touch of winter is a reminder to motorists to get their cars into winter condition. This is only a first reminder, like storm windows. Yet it is amazing how many people do nothing about it, despite early warnings, and the first good storm enwraps the city. They are not only in trouble themselves, but are a hindrance or a menace, to everyone about them.

Preparation for winter driving, however, is something more than getting the car ready. It is a mental conditioning. Driving in the Algonquin language, and in initial form was spelled "Geboc," meaning "where the river narrows." Quebec joined Confederation in 1867. The capital city is Quebec.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

CAN AN RH NEGATIVE MOTHER GIVE BIRTH TO A HEALTHY BABY?

"Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible for a mother who has Rh negative blood to give birth to a perfectly healthy baby without the child having its blood changed? Your answer will mean so much to her whatever it is. Mrs. F. M."

It's a good thing you asked that remark about "whatever it is." Let's answer with frankness.

There is a difference between what is "possible," and what is probable. It is possible that she might give birth to a perfectly healthy baby — but the physician should be prepared for a blood exchange.

Rh negative blood is a person whose body is allowed to Rh positive blood may (not will) be disastrous. For example, one transfusion will not cause any trouble. That is the "sensitizing" method. Certain blood bodies form which combat the "wrong" type of blood. The first blood contact with the "wrong type" of blood results in a war between these antibodies and the blood.

Now let us suppose that a sensitized Rh negative mother has an Rh positive baby. The baby, at birth, gets along well, because he uses his mother's blood. But once he has his own the conflict begins. The Rh negative blood must be removed (or almost all of it) and replaced by blood substituted. This is a harrowing process. After it is over, gets along excellently (other matters being equal, of course).

A blood exchange is not simple, and it must be done without delay. You must be ready for it. This takes place a dozen, or perhaps several dozen, times a day in the U.S. with the save babies that otherwise would be lost.

Now, on the other hand, suppose the Rh negative mother has a healthy baby. Then, of course, there is no blood conflict and there is no problem. The trouble is that Rh positives far outnumber Rh negatives, so the law of averages prevents us from once a blood exchange has been necessary. In Canada alone the next birth will require the same measure.

So I say that it is "possible" that there will be no blood exchange necessary for the next baby, but it is probable, likely that one may be needed. If it is needed, it is urgent.

(As an afterthough for other readers: Rh negative, Rh positive blood types, the common "blood type" that should be available for transfusions, has nothing to do with Rh negative and Rh positive. Any of the four common types can be either positive or negative.)

Dear Dr. Molner: Can one have a stroke and not have a blood pressure! — Mrs. C.G."

Yes. Sometimes a blood vessel in the brain bursts suddenly (that's the usual form of stroke) or clog, even though blood pressure is normal. There may, for example, be a weak place in a vessel. I know of a girl of 9 who had a stroke (she's recovering nicely, following some very fine brain surgery, although in such cases as a kid is not possible.)

Dear Dr. Molner: What would cause a 7-year-old child to have a stomach ulcer? Surely that is not common in children of this age. — J.E.H."

No, not common. Very, very rarely a child may have ulcers. But regardless of when ulcers start, avoidance of undue pressure is part of the treatment. A calm normal life is best for most of us. Too much tension is bad. The exact cause of ulcers is not known.

Refugee intellectuals sometimes fall on hard times when they leave their homeland, but the Carnegie Corporation has a system. An organization that has given refuge to help its scholars in the United Kingdom is the British Society for the Protection of Science and Learning. Since that this society is 25 years old it is significant, for it was founded that Hitler's persecution of Jewish and other liberal writers and scientists began. Though dependent on government grants for the bulk of its income, British universities employ who they like, irrespective of race or creed or, and were quick to offer assistance to exiled scholars in the 1930's.

The movement really began with the London School of Economics, whose professors contributed from their own salaries a fund designed to help the displaced scholars in their particular subjects. Other universities quickly followed suit, and offices were provided by the Royal Society. The first year of the new body was Lord Rutherford. Inevitably there was a flavour of relief about these activities, but the British Academy's council — to give it its first name — was more concerned with providing for the future than in distributing than with giving them a form of positive. Any of the four common types can be either positive or negative.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

AUTUMN'S GOLDEN FAREWELL

For hours I have been watching the silent fall of the leaves—Autumn's love token to dying timber. How perfect this demonstration — I look in the face of golden sheets of beauty. What builder or artist could dare to duplicate a leaf, much less a forest or a Maple leaf? Now there is a riot of color in different moods. Each day we have begun anew.

Nature is the great artist. Examine any of these in any of varieties of leaves. Each is a perfect design, and never varies. Each leaf has a personality of its own. Look at any of these designs. They will fill you with wonder and admiration. These leaves are as much as those limited by lovers of nature, have delight in any of them. Study any leaf like you and I. Study anyleaf, then priase it in your heart as it puts on its famous jacket of purple and gold.

Autumns are action times for farmers, birds, and all manner of small animals. Our little friend the squirrel never ceases to store the thousands of birds! It is amazing to see how they know as to know exactly where they migrate to, and they have a return ticket to the warmth of Summer.

How keen is our memory as we prepare for Thanksgiving and Christmas! How thoughtful are many times our thoughts go back to the dear ones who are so many of our loved ones to whom we write. And the lines grow thinner each year.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

An elderly psychologist who went to school with me, and is therefore a friend, has one of these younger fellows who are specializing in the science of profession like kittens in the knitting, has been telling me that the trouble with the young generation is purely physical. They haven't getting enough exercise.

Rock 'n roll, he says, is mere gymnastics reputedly invented by the need of kids to work off their energy. We elders, sitting around the fireplace, think that when were the age of these youngsters, we had to walk to school and schools, in our day, weren't just around every corner. No, sir! They were ten, twenty blocks away. Or in the country, they were three miles away, winter and summer; and not only were they required to walk to and from, lugs up, there weren't any parents around to pick up and drive the horse and cutter and drive them home one way or another!

No? Well, what else can the kids do to work off their energy? Fights on the way home from school?

Winterize

The first touch of winter is a reminder to motorists to get their cars into winter condition. This is only a first reminder, like storm windows. Yet it is amazing how many people do nothing about it, despite early warnings, and the first good storm enwraps the city. They are not only in trouble themselves, but are a hindrance or a menace, to everyone about them.

Preparation for winter driving, however, is something more than getting the car ready. It is a mental conditioning. Driving in snow/ess months any driver adopts his style of driving to the easy conditions. But even a moderate fall of snow or sleet makes some shadby or icy stretches, where skidding is possible and a car is less under control.

At the same time, then, as the car is put in order for winter, the motorist should put his mind in condition for winter, too. For the months ahead will demand of him a degree of confidence in the car, but a mind adapted to very different kinds of pavement.

Strength for The Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A REAL PROBLEM

An educator said to me recently that the boys who give him real trouble are the bright fellows who will not work. He can get along with those who are modestly endowed with brains. There are a few of these who are a joy to the school master. But not many. Bright and sharp in the afternoon, when they are, they become a problem of laziness.

If you and I look back over our experience, we can spot many of the brilliant people of people who had every reason in the world to succeed but who never did succeed. They had brains and opportunity. They had background. But they ended up mediocre in achievement or somewhere just plain failures. There are a lot of reasons for failure but one of the most frequent is due to a lack of brains. More often this is due to a lack of application. If you have a child who finds it hard to meet academic requirements, have patience — and have good cheer. The chances are that eventually he will succeed in life. If you have a bright girl who will not work then you have a real problem on your hands.

Don't ask me what to do — I don't know. I commend you to the grace of God. That is all that to solve a problem of such magnitude. But I can give divine help if we have a bright youngster on our hands who won't work or take life seriously.

46 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Accidents claimed the lives of at least 13 children across Canada during the weekend as a total of 46 persons died violently.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. local times Friday to midnight Sunday showed three young girls burned to death in their Kingston home Friday night and three children burned to death in Montreal Saturday.

Two young boys drowned in Newfoundland and five other youngsters, one a five-month old baby girl, died violently in Ontario.

Highway mishaps took 31 lives, five seven and drownings three.

26 ONTARIO FATALITIES

Ontario headed the weekend death list with 26, including two married couples from Alliston killed early Sunday when their car hit a tree beside a county road three miles south of their homes.

Ontario had 21 traffic deaths, one drowning, one accidental shooting and the Kingston fire.

Quebec was next with nine deaths, three in the fire, three from traffic, a shooting, a fall and a choking death.

The Ontario dead:

Rita Mae, Joanne and Carolyn Baker, ages 5, 2, and six months respectively, Friday night in a fire at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker, Kingston.

James Kennific, 30, of Sudbury, Saturday, in a car accident on Highway 17 three miles west of Sudbury.

Ronald Dawson, 7, Stratford, Saturday when struck by a car in Stratford.

LEVEL CROSSING CRASH

Melville Taylor, 47, Orono, Saturday when his car collided with a train at a level crossing near Newcastle.

Joseph Glen David Cherry, 21, Berkeley, Sunday night when his car rolled on top of him on a concession road near Markdale.

Catharine Jessome, 11, of Hamilton, of Whitby, Saturday night when her parents' car collided with a truck in Whitby. Mrs. Jessome, who was holding the baby, has knee and jaw fractured.

Carl Cox, 25, Toronto, in hospital Sunday of injuries suffered Saturday when his car struck a freight car in suburban Weston.

Jack Little, 16, Port Robinson, Saturday night in Welland when struck by a car.

Randy Palmer, 5, of Kingston, Saturday when he fell through ice on a creek near his home.

BEVERAGE BURN

James C. McDonald, 65, of Highley, Sunday in a two-car collision on Highway 21 nine miles south of Kincardine. Four other persons were taken to hospital in Kincardine and London.

Donnie McGrath, 3, of Baldwin, Sunday when struck by a car outside his father's store. His five-year-old sister, Roseanne, was taken 25 miles to hospital in Toronto where her condition is reported serious.

Donald Eden, 6, of Inverhuil, Sunday two hours after being wounded by a blast from a shotgun in the hands of a younger brother in his home.

Samuel McMaster, 33, his wife Mathilde, 28, Roy Leslie, 33, and his wife, Merle, 35, all of Alliston, early Sunday when their car hit a tree beside a county road three miles south of Alliston.

George Crockett, 26, Peterborough, early Sunday when his car hit a tree in Peterborough.

DOUBLE FATALITY

John Haywood, 37, and William Daiziel, 42, both of Sarnia, Saturday when the car in which they were riding left the road on Highway 40 and smashed into a tree, eight miles south of Sarnia.

Emile Ethier, 43, Kirkland Lake, early Sunday, when hit by a car while crossing a street. He was Teck Township's first traffic fatality in 32 months.

Cecelia Kunkel, 67, Walkerton, struck by a car Sunday night while crossing a street in Walkerton.

Thomas B. Irvine, 76, of Kingston, Saturday night when crossing a Kingston street with his wife. Mrs. Irvine, 73, is in fair condition.

Metro Shostic, 51, Toronto, Sunday night when struck by a car while crossing a downtown street.

Colin Dixon, 22, Toronto, returned to death Sunday when his motorcycle crashed into the back of a station wagon on the Queen Elizabeth Way near Port Credit. Three children in the station wagon were injured, one seriously.

Bancroft Man Killed by Rock Fall in Mine

BANCROFT — A Hungarian immigrant miner was killed Saturday afternoon and his companion hurt in a third level stope at the Canadian Dyno mines, fifteen miles southwest of here.

Paul Nemeth, 30, who came here from Kirkland Lake six months ago, and Marcel Lachaine, 18, had finished scaling loose rock on the footwall in a stope and took a short cut down the manway that was posted out of bounds. They slid down a broken muck pile, Nemeth 60 feet to the bottom and Lachaine half way.

Nemeth died of head injuries before the mine rescue crew could get him to surface. Lachaine is in the Bancroft Red Cross hospital in satisfactory condition with a broken collarbone and three fractured ribs. An inquest will be held.

Reception Held For Grand Master In Madoc Area

Wm. G. McNeil, of Toronto, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario I.O.O.F. paid his official visit to Madoc District No. 43 at Thomasburg on November 20th. A reception and banquet was held in his honor in the Oddfellows' hall. Guests were present from Campbellford, Stirling, Madoc, Springbrook, Tweed and Thomasburg.

Cecil Geen, DDGM of Madoc District No. 43 acted as chairman for the evening. Following a toast to the Queen, DDGM, A. C. Newman, of Campbellford, was asked to say grace. Approximately 150 people enjoyed the banquet which was served by Crescent Rebekah Lodge of Thomasburg.

The chairman extended a welcome to all present, after which the following guests at the head table were introduced: W. G. McNeil Grand Master, Earl Fox DCPM, Stirling; Dorothy Fisher DDP, Tweed; A. C. Newman DDGW, Campbellford; Cecil Neal NG, Springbrook; Donald Thompson VG, Campbellford; Joyce Fisher, NG, Crescent, Thomasburg, Donald Martin NG, Thomasburg, Jack Foster NG, Tweed, Cecil Woods NG, Madoc, Ivan Sine NG, Stirling.

Entertainment was provided by solist Miss Wendy Marren and pianist Mrs. Harry Brown.

The Dr. Beatty shield was presented jointly to Thomasburg and Stirling lodges by E. T. Noyler of Madoc and was accepted by JP-NG's Raymond French of Thomasburg and Charles Burger of Stirling.

Mr. Allen Morton of Belleville was present at the banquet quet. He has been a member of Oddfellows' Lodge since March 1850. Mr. Morton is a former of Thomasburg lodge and is believed to be the oldest member in Madoc District No. 43.

ALL THREE SERVED

Also present were three members of the Martin family. The present N.G., Ross J. Martin, son father, Albert Martin, and his grandfather, Wesley Martin, who have all served as Noble Grands of Thomasburg Lodge.

Ivan Sine, the present N. G. of Stirling is also the third generation of his family to serve as Noble Grand of that lodge.

Dorothy Fisher, D.D.P., of Belleville District No. 42, spoke briefly, bringing greetings on behalf of the President of the Rebekah Assembly.

The toast to Grand Lodge and to the Grand Master was proposed by Earl Fox of Stirling. William G. McNeil, Grand Master, responded with a very interesting and educational address on Oddfellowship.

Thanks to the Grand Master for his address were expressed by Arthur McCarey, Tweed, Hiram Mumby, Springbrook, thanked the ladies for the excellent banquet with Joyce Fisher, Noble Grand of Crescent Rebekah Lodge, responding.

The evening's program was brought to a close with the singing of "O Canada."

Liberal Leader Pearson Gives Hints of Tactics by the Party

NEWCASTLE, N.B. (CP) — A hint of the trend of opposition tactics in the forthcoming session of Parliament was given Saturday when Liberal Leader Pearson attacked Progressive Conservative policies as he began a tour of northern New Brunswick.

Striking out at defence policies, flight money and uneven development of the Canadian economy, he said the government had made few real accomplishments in 2½ years and disputed Prime Minister Diefenbaker's claim that some advances which he said were initiated by the Liberals.

The former external affairs minister and Nobel peace prize winner also touched on the overriding need for peace and the threat of Communist economic attack.

Speaking at an overflow public meeting here Saturday night Mr. Pearson said "all government politics are unimportant face-to-face with the grave need of peace."

All the legislation in existence can contribute nothing if we can not achieve peace."

He termed present defence spending "little more than a terrible waste." Canada had little possibility of defending her soil alone and should pool her resources and stand collectively with allied nations.

Defence policy now seemed to change on basement fallout shelters. "We should do better than resort to hole in our cellars."

Mr. Pearson said a PC-estimated expenditure of $300,000,000 on social services in the last 2½ years included $187,000,000 of social benefits instituted by the former Liberal administration.

"All the present government can do," he said, "is build on the foundation already erected by the Liberals."

Earlier, he told students of Sackville's Mount Allison University he did not believe Russian Premier Khrushchev wanted war with the West because he probably realized this would mean mutual destruction.

Instead, he and his colleagues would strike in "our most vulnerable sector—economics."

New Extension Of A-Test Ban Will Be Brief

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower seems certain to order an extension of the United States ban on nuclear weapons tests—but a few weeks only. Further extensions could follow.

Administration leaders are prepared to go along with the United Nations resolution adopted Saturday opposing any resumption of nuclear tests during negotiations for a permanent, policed test ban.

But the negotiations themselves are expected to come to a climax at Geneva in the first half of 1960, and a breakdown of the conference — now more than a year old—would bring a quick resumption of underground U.S. nuclear test explosions.

Eisenhower already has extended for two months — until Dec. 31—the one-year respite he originally put into effect at the end of October, 1958.

One tactical objective of the U.S. at the present time is to try to maintain pressure on the Soviet government to keep the Geneva negotiations moving along.

McCONE'S VIEW

Latest word on administration thinking came Sunday night from Chairman John A. McCone of the Atomic Energy Commission in a speech to the Associated Press.

Opposing any prolonged extension of the present test ban, he said any such action should be taken on a week-to-week basis.

McCone also told his questioners that he thought a Soviet suggestion for joint U. S.-Russian construction and operation of gigantic atom smasher for nuclear research was "well worth studying."

Ajax Decides To Stay Dry

AJAX (CP) — This town of 7,383 persons decided to stay dry as nearly 75 per cent of the eligible voters went to the polls Saturday and turned down four liquor proposals.

Beverage rooms for men and women, cocktail lounges and licensed dining rooms were all rejected by narrow margins.

With a yes vote of 60 per cent necessary in each case, dining rooms were almost voted in with 59.4 per cent in favor. Cocktail rooms had 57.5 per cent, women's beverage rooms 52.9 and men's beverage rooms 50.5 per cent favorable as 2,700 of 3,009 eligible voters turned out.

Home-School Group Hears Talk on 'Safety'

The regular monthly meeting of Queen Mary - Prince Charles Home and Hoot Association was held in Queen Mary School auditorium with Mrs. C. A. Burley presiding.

Mrs. W. Ironside presided at the piano. It was announced that in December there would be two evenings devoted to "open house," one night at Queen Mary and one night at Prince Charles. This will enable the parents with children at these schools to spend more time in each classroom.

The members of the Association were asked to assist in the forthcoming canvass for Belleville and District. Those who are able to help are to contact Mrs. A. Ward or Mrs. C. Ost.

The banner attendance winners for the evening were: Queen Mary Jr., Mrs. McAllister; morning kindergarten; Sr., Mrs. Allison; afternoon, Dawson Jr., Miss Beatty; Sr., Mrs. Garnett and Miss MacPherson, tied.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mr. W. Ironside introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Sergeant Robson, of the Belleville Police Force. He has been in Belleville almost two years and has won the hearts of practically every school child in the city. Sergeant Robson asked the parents to imagine themselves as the pupils. He then proceeded to instruct on "safety" as he would the children. He stressed the fact that all bicycles must be in good repair before the child be allowed to ride in the street. Rusty chains, loose wheels, worn pedal treads, are some of the adjustments that could prevent an accident. The children are often influenced by bad driving habits of the adults.

The film, "Lucky Tex," was then shown. During this, the parents were free to ask questions. Imagine the equipment that was on display and to help themselves to the books and pamphlets that were available. Mrs. D. Fisher thanked Sergeant Robson for his most interesting talk; he will receive the co-operation of the parents.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. H. Kinnear, Mrs. R. Stewart and their committee.

Club Activities

Little Miss Linda Andrews sang "If You Know the Lord."

Miss Lois Wright read the Scripture lesson, Ps. 23.

Miss Carolyn Reichert led a Sword Drill on "Joy." Miss Mary Ella Grant rendered a vocal solo, "Precious Lord, Take My Hand."

A Scripture shower was led by Mrs. Mary Patrick and the girls' C.A. Sandra Purvis, Gail Walker and Helen Patrick, recovered, "Do You Know My Jesus?"

Mr. Gordon Smith conducted a Bible spelling bee with captains, Lois Wright and Carolyn Reichert, Carolyn's team winning 10-9.

The Rev. G. Pierce closed the service with prayer.

ARTIST'S DEATH

Bartolome Murillo, the great Spanish artist, died in 1682 from the effects of a fall from a scaffolding while painting an altar.

Christmas Tea, Bazaar Most Successful

CENTENARY Centenary held its annual Christmas bazaar and tea on Wednesday in the church hall and again it was a successful event.

The hall looked Christmassy with its red and gold poinsettias and gold bells.

There was the usual display of ladies' handiwork, a bountiful supply of homemade baking, along with the touch-and-take table and the country store was well stocked.

The guests were received by Mrs. Roy Rickard, wife of the pastor, and Mrs. Reg. Edmondson, president of the Women's Association.

Mrs. Elwin Hart was treasurer for the afternoon.

DELICIOUS CAKES

The home cooking table with its delicious cakes, tarts and buns was convened by Mrs. Fred Allison with Mrs. Dawson Douglas and Mrs. William Calvert assisting.

The apron table with Mrs. Phil Ray convener, assisted by Mrs. Richard Ray and Mrs. Ralph Lowry, displayed many useful, pretty and dainty aprons for the younger and the older.

The "country store" under Mrs. Ken Anderson had a splendid array of products.

Mrs. Stanley Christopher was in charge of the flowers and plants.

The "touch and take" table and the candy table were very busy with Mrs. Albert Christopher and Mrs. Mac Nobes convening.

Mrs. Byron Harder had a very successful novelty table displaying many nick-nacks from games, embroidery work, to Christmas candles.

Mrs. Percy Sutherland received the guests in the tea room.

TEA TABLE

The tea table with its exclusive table cloth looked beautiful, centred by a bouquet of white mums and golden tinted foliage, flanked by two golden candelabra holding Christmas trees and two red candles. The quartet tables reflected the Christmas motif and looked gay with red serviettes.

Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson, representing White's W. A. and Mrs. B. Burnett, president of Wesley W. A. met with Mrs. Robert Hart and Mrs. Mac Nobes poured tea.

Those serving were: Mrs. Lloyd Pearson, Mrs. Wilson Short and Mrs. Harold Hancock with Mrs. John Best replenishing the tea and Mrs. Ken Carleton replenishing the coffee.

Mrs. Gilbert Ellis presided in the kitchen with Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mrs. Fred Zimmerdon, Mrs. Ernest Emmerson and Mrs. Hawley Melbourne assisting.

Thanks of appreciation are in order to all who have made this bazaar and Christmas tea such a delightful event.

Mr. Mrs., Fred "Mud" Gariepy Celebrate Golden Wedding

They call him "Mud" but that isn't his name in the true sense of the word.

It was wished on him away back in 1914 by a railroad colleague who dubbed him "Mud Muckest." The name stuck.

His name was far from "Mud" Saturday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gariepy, 304 Albert Street celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Seventeen couples, all intimate friends of the well-known former Canadian National Railways engineer, and Mrs. Gariepy honored them at an anniversary dinner at the New Queen's hotel.

Recipients of many gifts, cards and other tokens of greeting Mr. and Mrs. Gariepy beamed their appreciation of the anniversary honors.

The years rolled back for "Mud" and "Nellie" as they are familiarly called by their large circle of friends. Mrs. Gariepy is the former Ellen Emily Dumbleton of Kingston. But like "Mud" she is seldom called by her first name. She is "Nellie" even as her spouse is "Mud".

Mr. Gariepy was born in Ottawa, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gariepy. He joined the Grand Trunk Railway in Belleville in 1910 as a fireman and has lived here since. He was honorably retired in December, 1953 after 43 years of service, 34 as an engineer.

Mr. Gariepy enjoyed a well-deserved popularity with during his tenure as a railroader and since on the retirement list. He does not be too much of an active life since he has to watch his health.

But he was the life of the party Saturday night surrounded by his friends, half of whom were railroad people. Life-long friends Mr. and Mrs. Jack Baird of this city also of the railroad fraternity were there to add their felicitations.

Mr. and Mrs. Gariepy were the recipients of congratulations from Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Ontario Premier Leslie Frost. Other greetings came from many district friends.

The immediate family, too, paid anniversary tribute to the happy parents.

Those included two daughters, Mrs. Helen Turner of Oshawa and Mrs. Audrey Willis of Belleville and three sons, Donald and Melville of this city and Gerald of Weston, Ont.

CHILD FITNESS

Gymnasium exercises for bodily fitness are an important part of the education of children in ancient Greece.

'Retarded Children' Talk at Chi Rho

"It can happen in any family. Three percent of all children are some degree of mental retardation". Using those two statements as his basis, Arthur Ward, honorary president of the Quinte Association for Retarded Children, outlined to the Christ Church Chi Rho Fellowship some of the things which can be done to help mentally retarded children, and their families.

By bringing the problem out into the open and taking away the stigma fostered by ignorance; by providing diagnostic, treatment and counselling clinics; by providing special education and training for the school-aged child, playgrounds and nurseries for the pre-schooler, vocational training centres and sheltered workshops for adolescents, social and recreational facilities for all ages; by providing funds for research into the causes and cures, of a disease that afflicts ten times as many people as it's height.—it is hoped to make useful citizens of many who are now being passed off as incurable.

A film shown in conjuction with Mr. Ward's talk showed the benefit derived from a little extra training and consideration in the rehabilitation of the mentally retarded.

TWO SPECIAL CLASSES

The Quinte area we now have two special classes for the mentally retarded school-aged child, one in Belleville, and one in Trenton, and it is hoped the programme can be expanded in the probabl next step is special recreational facilities for these retarded adults. To do this both voluntary assistance and money are required.

Members of the Chi Rho took part in a "White Elephant" auction, donating the proceeds from the sale of their collection for the meeting, to help in this work.

Phyllis Peters group was in charge of the meeting, Herb Cavalier and Margaret Eagely led the worship service, Al Gardiner handled the auctioneering chores.

Jim Bailey thanked the speaker and Mr. Thompson, who operated the projector.

Betty Gardiner, Shirley Haire and Joanne Cavalier provided the refreshments.

St. Thomas' Church Holds Family Service

It was "Family Service," at St. Thomas' Church on Sunday morning with a large congregation of both old and young. Members of a newly-formed Junior Choir occupied the front pews of the church for the service during the Baptismal Sacrament of the Sunday School. Later in the service these young children took for their classes. A procession formed by the Crucifer and Boys' Choir.

The Rector, Canon A. S. McConnell presided on the Lord's Table and, why do they, on the Sabbath day, that which is not lawful? Outlining the ancient Sabbath of God's Chosen People he said that the day was to be a day sacred to Jawah and a day of rest. Most of the characteristics of this day were taken over by the followers of Christ when it was named the Lord's Day.

In speaking about the coming of Christ the second the congregation that the word "Commercialism" was left out of the question and told them the whole matter hinged on this conclusion he said "If you answer "No" to the question we can continue as a community that enjoys normal recreation on Sunday. If you say "Yes" you are opening the gate to a complete disregard of the Christian Sunday, and the quiescence in this most insidious question will jeopardize the future of your children and help to destroy our Canadian way of life."

Bayside H-S Assoc. Views O.S.D. Slides

Mr. Joseph G. Demesa, the superintendant of the Ontario School for the Deaf, was the guest speaker at the Bayside Home and School Association in the Bayside School on November 19th. Mr. Demesa, with the assistance of Mr. Boyd, explained the work being done at the school. Coloured slides of the classrooms with their special equipment, the classroom activities, the dormitories and recreational facilities were shown. The progress of the children from enrolment to graduation was outlined.

During the business session of the meeting, the secretary and the treasurer read their reports. Mrs. Veitch reported on the Cube and Scout activities. It has been decided to hold the regular monthly meetings on the third Monday of each month as the third Thursday coincides with the monthly meetings of the Belleville and district Home and School council. The decision to hold euchre and card night on Dec. 3rd (Thursday) at 8.00 p.m. was also made. The admission charge of 40 cents is to be used to support the various activities supported by the Association.

Ladies are asked to bring a lunch for two.

After the meeting, coffee and lunch was served and all enjoyed by all present.

MRS. ELEANOR BROWN

Decorating Expert Chosen to Speak At Ladies' Night

Mrs. Eleanor Brown, Simpson's interior decorating lecturer, will be the guest speaker at the Quinte District Foremen's Club's annual "Ladies' Night," which will be held Tuesday in the Club Canaris.

The annual bride for the member's "better halves" will commence at 7 p.m. and will include dinner and dancing.

Mrs. Brown has achieved outstanding recognition in the decorating profession. In the past 18 years she has been associated with the Robert Simpson Company where she serves in dual capacity as staff trainer for the personnel of the home furnishing divisions, as well as lecturer on various interior decorating subjects.

During this period she has addressed more than 70,000 people.

A native of New York, Mrs. Brown is an honor graduate of the Parson's School of Design, and New York University, where she obtained a Bachelor of Science degree in Education.

Quinte W.I. Enjoys Slides Of Europe

The November meeting of the Quinte West Institute was held recently at the Quinte Memorial Hall on No. 2 highway in the evening with a large attendance of ladies and visitors.

The president, Mrs. R. Atkins, welcomed everyone and opened the meeting.

All letter of business were discussed. An invitation from the Roslin Institute was read and accepted to attend their recent November meeting.

The conveners Mesdames E. Leeming and D. Leeming took charge of the program. Mrs. A. Mitchell gave a paper on the motto, "If you plant a seed of character in the home, it will bloom in the community".

Mrs. Don Leeming introduced the guest speaker of the evening Mr. Harvey Homan, who gave a talk on his trip abroad and showed the lovely pictures he had taken while gone, which was interesting.

Mrs. E. Leeming moved a hearty vote of thanks to Harvey. Refreshments were served by the lunch committee and a social half hour was spent.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge; a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Glenda C. — She must keep her self-respect.

Judy L. — The way men are today, it's impossible.

Glenda C. — I am in my mid-20's, recently married and working in an office which employs a number of girls just out of high school.

I am concerned about one of these girls who has been coming to me for advice. She gets into the weirdest situations with men. No matter how often I tell her to watch her step she always winds up alone and fighting off the advances of some man she hardly knows.

She keeps trying to pin me down on questions like how far she should go with men and how her chances of marriage will be affected if she goes too far. But no matter how often I tell her she must keep her dignity and self-respect, she manages to barely escape with either.

* * *

Judy L. — It's all very well to talk about dignity and self-respect. The way men are today it is almost impossible to get away with either and still have dates and good times.

I have tried to be "just friends" with loads of fellows. It never works out. Most men are just interested in one thing and it's not friendship.

I have tried to follow Glenda's advice on many things, but it never works out. She just happened to have the luck to meet the unusual type of guy who wants marriage and isn't out for what he can get. Things have gotten so bad I'm about ready to give up one thing or the other — self-respect or men. I think it'll be self-respect.

The Council: Judy, like many skittish young girls, seems to have an intense curiosity about men and sex and her own potentialities for luring a man on. We think her motivation is a far stronger factor in her involvements with men than their motivation.

In spite of Judy's protestations of innocence and confusion we get the distinct impression she knows what she is about and, is using Glenda as a kind of testing ground and source of information. Essentially, Judy is a tease. She not only likes to tease men but to tease herself by suggesting enormous dangers lurk at every turn. She carries the act one step further by finding herself an audience — Glenda.

The fact is that wolves are not in the majority among males, but most males are quick at taking a hint. If they suspect that a girl wants them to act like a wolf they would hate to fail to meet the occasion.

We don't like to spoil the game by suggesting Judy is probably not in as great danger as she likes to imagine. However, as long as her main object is to tease, she is likely to be shrewd enough to choose the teasing type and avoid smarter or more determined men. But curiosity has more than once killed the cat. Judy may skirt gaily around the fringes of danger 100 times and come through unscathed. Then her luck could just end.

For all her talk of men and their one-track interests, Judy appears exceptionally naive for her age. Her curiosity is of the sort usually shown in whispering, giggling 13-year-olds — only, by virtue of her age, Judy is able to carry things one step further.

When a girl is in her late teens she should have learned how to handle a variety of social situations. She should know how to keep conversation and activity under control on a date and be clear about her values. If she is sure of what she wants out of a date, she is unlikely to consistently run into difficulties with men.

There's a smart, bulky, shaggy-look about this coat that makes it right in style for wear in town or in the country.

The topper, in the new below-the-hip length, is made of a fun-like fabric.

It closes with three large bone buttons and has a classic revered collar and large side pockets.

Women's Activities

FULL GOSPEL W.M.C.

FRANKFORD — The Women's Missionary Council of Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle met on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Len Reilly.

The president, Mrs. Gerald Curry, was in charge of the meeting which opened in prayer by Mrs. Doug Wood. The W.M.C. theme about "Workers Together With God" was sung.

The secretarial report was given by Mrs. Fred Miller and the treasurer's report by Miss Marjorie Forbes.

Letters of thanks for parcels received from the Rev. J. Spilletoor, the Flying Missionary in the Northland, and the Bethel Home for Girls, Toronto, were read.

The business period was conducted. Mrs. Len Reilly gave a splendid report of the Missionary Convention in Kingston and Mrs. Fred Miller gave a fine report on the W.M.C. rally held in Peterborough.

The bulletin was read by the president. Needs were mentioned and the offering was received.

The message was given by Mrs. Fred Wood from Psalm 43. A season of prayer followed and the "Missionary Outlook" was read.

Mrs. G. Curry closed the meeting and Mrs. L. Reilly and daughter Gloria served refreshments.

Ladies' Aid Fowl Suppers Still an Autumn Feature

DELISLE, Sask. (CP)—A survival of pioneer days, the annual Ladies' Aid fowl suppers are still an autumn feature in many small towns and villages, or country churches, in Saskatchewan.

It usually means bountifully-laden tables in small halls busy women working in a crowded space, and food that is cooked to a treat. City dwellers have been known to drive more than 100 miles to attend the fowl suppers. For many it is a ritual to attend several each fall.

Even in these days of changing habits in rural life, including the advent of television, the fowl supper is essentially unchanged. There is chicken or turkey with stuffing, gravy, cole slaw, mashed potatoes, peas, turnips, pumpkin, apple and lemon pie, coffee and tea.

NO DELAY

In former days there was usually an entertainment program as well, but not enough people stayed to make it worthwhile.

"They don't want to wait around nowadays," said one spokeswoman.

For many of these affairs the food is donated by members. But at this town 25 miles west of Saskatoon the Ladies' Aid Society this year bought 30 turkeys weighing 400 pounds. Thirteen were cooked at the town bakery, the others at members' homes.

The stuffing was made at the church the day before. The cole slaw also was made at the church, members shredding 40 pounds of cabbage as well as 30 pounds of carrots.

But the mashed potatoes and turnips were cooked at home, and were taken to the church at intervals to catch the various table sittings.

FAVORITE PIES

The 95 pies were pumpkin, apple and lemon, because these have been found to be the favorites. In previous years the women had also supplied cakes and tarts.

The charge was $1.25 for adults, 75 cents for students, 50 cents for children. It was first come, first served—those who missed the first sitting arrived before the 5 p.m. start.

Husbands helped at the ticket table, or poured tea and coffee. Teen-age daughters were pressed into service as waitresses. Two boys were the water-carriers.

But the women did the dishwashing and cleaning up.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Hagner Sherman

DINNERS AND EMPLOYMENT

With Christmas so close, many will be applying for part-time jobs during the next few days. People also will be looking for permanent positions. Whether the object is part-time or full-time employment, there are certain important manners one has to take into consideration. For example, have you taken a good look at the West Ads in your newspaper? If so, perhaps you have noticed such phrases as the following: A stock broker is advertising for a stenographer, says: "Applicant must be able to deal successfully with people." A large department store, advertising for sales people, advises: "Only those who have the capacity of getting along with people need apply." Taking such a qualification literally, not only goes to show that those who proceed under the assumption that manners are to be only with social situations are definitely on the wrong track. There is only one way to act along with other people and that is by showing consideration for their feelings. What is consideration, but courtesy? And what is courtesy, but the foundation on which all manners are built? When you are applying for a job, it is well to remember that your ability to do the work well is not all that is needed. Your opening gambit may be good, but it is only with the help of good manners that you will keep it. The person who assumes that because he is efficient in his job he can ignore courtesy in his daily dealings with co-workers, or clients, is bound to meet disaster sooner or later.

A case in point: I was talking the other day with the personnel director of a large concern. He informed me that many applicants do not obtain a position or, having obtained one, are dismissed — not because they do their work poorly, but because of bad manners.

To greet people pleasantly in a clear, bright tone of voice; to interview callers in a tactful, courteous manner; to show consideration for one's co-workers; to make every effort to get along with all those with whom you come in contact are but a few of the abilities that are beyond price in the business world. Without them you are doomed to failure and a lifetime of changing from one job to another, regardless of your ability to do the work well.

If you are job-hunting today, take stock of your attitude towards the little everyday courtesies that mean so much. Make quite sure that the importance of manners in the business world isn't lost from sight. Never underestimate their importance! You may be able to take direction on one hundred words a minute, but such proficiency will not be regarded if your ride roughshod over the feelings of others. Never lose sight of the fact that people — are your first and most valuable asset.

Remember, too, that while manners are extremely important in your social contacts, they become doubly so in your job, because your living may depend upon them!

Question: I expect to spend a week with a friend in another city. I know she is planning some parties in my honor. I have several other friends in the same city that I would like to see. Is it permissible for me to make some plans of my own when I am a house guest? — Miss N. C.

Answer: It is perfectly permissible to do so, but only if you consult your hostess before making plans of your own, so as not to interfere with any arrangements she may have made.

Promises Kept

by Mary Moore

Last week I gave you a recipe for a Puffy Omelette and promised to give you the method for a Non-Puffy Omelette this week because our population seems to be divided about 50-50 in their choice of these two.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

MONDAY

NON-FUFFY OMELETTE:
(French type).

Break the eggs (6) together until mixed but not foamy. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ cup boiling water (or milk but boiling keeps it tenderer) and shakes of pepper and onion salt. Have ready a large hot frying pan with 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. When butter is bubbling and beginning to brown quickly turn in omelette mixture. Do not stir. In 1 minute reduce heat to low and when bottom and edges are set and beginning to brown, transfer to hot oven to cook and dry out top. If you work skillfully this omelette may be rolled onto the hot platter. And, if desired, a sauteed mushrooms may be arranged in a border around it.

Recently I was a guest on a TV program and the interviewer asked me questions which led me to which hamburg meat could be put. I would say I'm claiming I had collected, over the years, about 60 different ways of using this economical meat. Then I received requests for them all 60.

I do not have them all in printed form, so I have to answer in instalments.

The hamburg recipe I am giving today will fill two needs, for it is baked in a casserole and will be welcomed by the carnivore crowd who are economizing too.

SWEET 'N' SOUR HAMBURG CASSEROLE (Swedish):

3-4 pound ground beef, 1-2 pound ground sausage meat, 1 cup bread crumbs, 1-8 teaspoon powdered sage, 1-4 teaspoon ground cloves, 1-2 teaspoon marjoram or thyme, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 egg (or 2 small ones) undiluted evaporated milk.

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Form into small round balls about 1" in diameter. Place in a shallow baking dish in a single layer. Bake in 350 deg. Fahr. oven for 10 minutes, then cover with

SWEET AND SOUR SAUCE:

1-2 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-2 cup vinegar, 1-2 cup hot water, 1-4 cup seedless raisins.

Combine all ingredients. Pour over meat balls. Continue baking for about 40 minutes, carefully spooning sauce over meat balls to baste once or twice.

Queen's Third Pregnancy Giving Her First Real Rest Of Her Eight-Year Reign

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP)—Queen Elizabeth has been getting ready for her third baby, has a recipe for happy childbirth — relax and enjoy it.

"Having a child," she once said, "is a beautiful and natural event which should not be made dark and ugly by the shadow of fear."

For the Queen, however, this third pregnancy is more than ordinarily pleasant. It gives her the first real rest of her eight-year reign.

Both Prince Charles and Princess Anne were born before she came to the throne. Since then the Queen has been almost continually on parade.

The first that a baby was due during her 15,000-mile tour of Canada, a non-stop round of personal appearances that would flatten a hardened movie star.

But for her pregnancy, the Queen would be spending November on just such another tour — Ghana in Africa, once known as the white man's grave.

LIFE NEAR NORMAL

Now she can relax. Family life in Buckingham Palace is at last near normal. Prince Philip goes out to do the work while his wife stays home and waits for baby.

The Queen's philosophy on childbirth is simple. The Queen at heart is a countrywoman, and like other countrywomen, she likes to get these things over without fuss. She once summed up the expectant mother's greatest single virtue as "peace of mind."

No decision has yet been taken where the baby will be born, but it almost certainly will be at Buckingham Palace.

The palace is well equipped in scope. Its first and most substituted by the late Queen Mary ods in effect a miniature hospital. The Queen's father had a major operation there.

The baby is due in January or February. After Christmas, a nursing sister and nursery will be prepared for the confinement. A hospital suite stilled in midwifery will come in to sleep in the room next door.

TAKES SPECIAL EXERCISE

As do most other mothers, the 32-year-old Queen takes special relaxing exercises during pregnancy. But she is not a "natural childbirth" fanatic. Analgesia or twilight sleep will be at hand if she wants it.

If past experience is any guide, Philip will not spend the long night watches anxiously pacing the palace carpets.

Prince Charles arrived at Buckingham Palace on Nov. 14, 1948, at 9:14 p.m. Anne was born Aug. 15, 1950, at the equally convenient hour of 11:50 a.m.

The nursery suite looks down on the palace forecourt, so the royal offspring can keep an eye on the crowds that come to photograph the relevant guards.

It now has five rooms in use for Prince Charles, one for Anne, one for Anne's governess, one for the palace nurse and the fifth for Anne's schoolroom.

Mother's Helper

IS YOUR child often too busy playing to respond happily to your request for her presence in the hall? Try making both these sounds more exciting than usual and she'll obey. One hint: a Rainbow Dip! Colored bobbin both, especially made to delight a small lady without sticking her — or the fish.)

Finding a room for the new addition will not impose any strain on palace space. At the moment there are 600 rooms. No two persons ever come to the total because it is soon sometimes difficult to distinguish between small rooms and large cupboards.

Nor will baby clothes be a problem. British royalty is a stern believer in the hand - me-down tradition.

The christening robe, for instance, already is at hand. It is of white silk and honiton lace and has been worn by all royal children since it was made in 1894 for Prince David, now Duke of Windsor.

The baby's cradle and the cot it will use later both were made for the Queen and later used by Princess Margaret.

The cradle has a white-painted iron frame and is decked with cream net frills and peach satin curtains. The cot and its mate is a big wicker nursery basket are covered with ivory satin trimmed with satin rosettes.

Many mothers demand a new baby carriage for their young, but not the Queen. Charles and Anne both were wheeled out in the one in which the Queen and Margaret took their first airings. The new child will use the same old cart.

What about names?

The most likely choices are James or Mary. These are names associated with the Scottish Stuarts, and the Queen always has looked on Scotland as her true home.

And what will it look like?

Blue eyes, rair hair, and probably a boy, says the geneticists. Both the Queen and Prince Philip are said to be fair. And boys have predominated in the Royal Family for several generations.

Beulah United Church WMS Elects Officers

On Tuesday night the W.M.S. members of the Beulah United Church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Elmer Rollins for the November meeting.

Mrs. Leonard Twiddy presided and conducted the business portion of the evening.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Arthur Wood and Mrs. Gordon Wood. They chose the theme "Love." The Scripture I Corinthians 13, also the 23rd Psalm, were read in unison.

Mrs. Keith Brey contributed a solo and Mrs. Don Reid gave a reading on "Stewardship." Mrs. C. Mitz gave the meditations on the 23rd Psalm.

Mrs. R. Frost gave the highlights of the rally held at Cooper and also read a letter of greetings from the district superwise, Miss A. M. Rose.

Mrs. Malcolm MacMillan introduced the new study book.

1959 OFFICERS

Mrs. Frost gave the report on the nomination of officers for the coming year, which follows: president, Mrs. Arthur Wood; assistant, Ist vice-president, Mrs. Elmer Rollins; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Wood; recording secretary, Mrs. Gerald Twiddy; Mission Band, Mrs. Malcolm MacMillan; Baby Brey; Christian stewardship, Mrs. Don Reid; community friendship, Mrs. Harold Reid and Mrs. Don McFadden; supply, Mrs. Elmer Rollins; assistants, Mrs. Hugh MacMillan; Christian citizenship, Mrs. Clarence Reid; literature, Mrs. Thomas Lawson; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. Jack Stephens; press secretary, Mrs. Band, Mrs. Stan Frost; membership and visiting committee, Mrs. E. Rollins and Mrs. Malcolm MacMillan; flowers, Mrs. Don McFadden; auditor, Mrs. J. Stephens; pianist, Mrs. George Wood.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served and thanks tendered the hostess.

HERE'S Corvair BY CHEVROLET

WITH ENGINE IN THE REAR

WHERE IT BELONGS IN A COMPACT CAR

We could have made Chevrolet's new Corvair just a "carved-off" version of a big car — but that was the sort of shortcut we didn't want to take

We knew the engine had to go in the rear if we wanted a compact car with big car ride, big car room, big car performance — and maximum efficiency And that called for the most drastic revolution in auto design and manufacturing Canada has ever seen. What does a rear engine mean to you as a driver or passenger?

MORE SPACE — The floor is virtually flat. The short "opposed six" engine takes up less space, leaves more for passengers. And the whole car can be lower without sacrificing either road clearance or head room.

FAR BETTER RIDE—A rear-engined car has to have full independent suspension on all four wheels. Every wheel can sop up a bump without affecting any other — and there's no heavy unsprung rear axle to bounce or "jackhammer" over rough roads. So the ride is far softer — and the wheels cling to the pavement better.

GREATER TRACTION — Rear wheels carry more weight, get a better "bite". (Try a Corvair on mud, snow, ice, rain-wet asphalt; you'll be astounded by the difference in road-grip and control.)

BETTER BRAKING—Most front-engined compact cars load up to 72% of their braking with the front wheels (there's a severe weight transfer forward in emergency stops). Corvair is designed to put an almost equal brake load on every wheel: the rear end maintains solid, sure traction for smooth, straight-line stops in virtually any situation.

LESS NOISE, LESS HEAT—Engine noise, engine heat, engine fumes are behind the passengers; they're carried away by the wind stream as you drive. There's no driveshaft vibration to be echoed up into the car, nor resonance from a long exhaust pipe under the floor.

LESS MAINTENANCE — Corvair's air-cooled engine never needs antifreeze, never boils in the hottest weather. It warms up quicker in cold weather, so there's much less cold-start wear. And the stroke is so short that there's far less cylinder wear, less load on bearings and piston pins.

BETTER HANDLING — Corvair's "flat" engine and lower floor get the centre of gravity "way down"; it rides rock-solid through the tightest turns. The front end doesn't pack the dead weight of an engine—so steering is light as a feather, will never need power assistance. (And how you'll relish that in city parking spaces!)

LESS NEEDLESS WEIGHT—A rear engine pares off so much bulk and dead weight. Corvair's power plant is made to transmit to begin with. And it's air-cooled — no need for a radiator, water pumps, hoses or even the weight of the water itself. (And there's an added plus here; we designed a gas-fired car heater* that gives warmth almost instantly on the coldest winter mornings.)

No need for a long, heavy drive-shaft, either. And engine, transmission, and rear axle are all bolted together into one solid power unit (a competent mechanic can take the whole works out in less than half an hour). All in all, we have literally hundreds of pounds, and that makes a whopping big difference in performance and in gasoline economy.

THE RIGHT ANSWER — Real understanding of how wonderfully right a rear engine is for a compact car can only come after you have driven a Corvair—and compared it with its competitors. It took a terrific amount of engineering and Chevrolet's tremendous resources to design, test and set up production on a precedent-shattering car like Corvair. But wait till the first time you get behind the wheel—you'll agree it was worth every penny and every hour!

*Optional at extra cost.

BODGE PODGE . . .

The injury jinx, besides others, continues to park on the tail of the McPartlands. Saturday night Davy Jones was taken to a Kitchener hospital suffering with a fractured collarbone, while Bus Gagnon, who has been playing good hockey for the Macs, was unable to dress Sunday because of a leg injury received Saturday night . . . Not a thing seems to work for the Macs and on top of that they meet the crack-riding Whitby Dunlops here Wednesday night . . . And while on this hockey business don't forget Red Gravelle's Belleville Lambert-Rollins juniors tangle with Trenton here tonight in an Eastern Ontario Junior "B" game . . . The Bills have won two of their first three starts and hope to make it three tonight. Observers tell us the Peter junior "B's" who defeated our side 5-0 last week are not that much better. Say Gravelle's Bills should take them here on their next time out . . . The Clown Prince of Boxing, Maxie Baer, died Saturday in Hollywood. He fought many a good fight but was better known for his jesting and clowning.

OMHA third vice-president Doug Patterson of Stirling is calling the clans of minor hockey of the district together at a meeting set for the public library, Stirling, on Monday, November 30. Plans to organize bantam, midget and juvenile leagues at his fan-fixing district area will be arranged. Playoffs and discuss important new rule changes. Coaches and managers of the puck-chasing moppets should make it a point to be on hand . . . Picton Bayside College's junior "B" football team battled valiantly against a vastly superior team from Markham on Saturday, but lost no honor in the losing. Coach English and company never gave up trying and were as valiant in defeat as the winners were in victory.

Ottawa Rough Riders bowed out of the Grey Cup picture Saturday after failing to come up with the same brand of that sweet touch enough to defeat Montreal Canada final after a straight five-game setback in early season. The Riders failed to get untracked early in the game and Montreal hungry "shock-and-awe" crew were quick to took advantage of everything tossed their way, besides coming up with a brand of championship football . . . Now it's the Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the Toronto Argonauts for the cup for the second year in a row . . . The midget and bantam divisions' schedules will be published tomorrow in their entirety. Both leagues go into action Thursday night . . . Two games apiece Dodge Hawks and Jerseys; Wings and Leafs and Bruins and Canadiens tangle while juvenile play sees Aces meet Jets and Rovers clash with Bombers. The midget tilts are going away at six o'clock with the juveniles taking the ice at 9.30.

So is Orval Tessier, of the Kingston Frontenacs . . . Black Hawks reportedly turned down a deal involving Woody Andrey Bathgate for Flyers Poile and Eddie Litzenberger . . . Goals have been scored very early in the period in many games played in the National Hockey League this season . . . Nine goals have been scored in 10 seconds or less from the time the referee dropped the puck to start a period. Lanny Popein of the Rangers, recorded the fastest goal this season when he tallied after seven seconds of the second period on October 11 against the Red Wings. Vic Stasiuk has the second fastest time, scoring eight seconds of the second period against the Leafs on November 16.

Bronco Horvath scored nine of his 11 goals during Boston Bruins' last three game play. On the morning of Nov. 12, Bronco had scored 15 goals in the NHL this season, highest number scored by any player. Nine of these were scored while the Bruins enjoyed an advantage in manpower . . . The Bruins had scored 13 goals from the power play in games up to the morning of November 12, and Horvath had scored almost exactly one-half of these goals. The "Line" of Horvath, Vic Stasiuk and Johnny Bucyk, had accounted for 30 of Boston's 53 goals up to the game of November 12.

Minors, note—Midget and juvenile games will be played Thursday night this week instead of Wednesday because of senior hockey . . . Goalie Bell returned home from Montreal over the weekend with his new goalie mask.

Tiger-Cats Strike Quickly To Oust Rough Riders

3 Converted Touchdowns In Disastrous 3rd Quarter Kill Ottawa Grey Cup Hopes

By WILF GIBSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HAMILTON (CP) — Tackle Tom Jones of Ottawa Rough Riders summed it up for every Monday morning quarterback in the country in four words: "I can't believe it."

The massive Negro from Miami University of Ohio packed his six-foot-five-inch frame on a bench in the Ottawa dressing room, stared around in disbelief and repeated that short sentence. It had taken Hamilton Tiger-Cats just six minutes and 30 seconds to score three converted touchdowns Saturday and blast the Rough Riders' Grey Cup dream.

Ahead by 12 points going into the second game of the Big Four football doubleheader total of points series, the Rough Riders collapsed under Hamilton's heavy artillery in the third quarter and drop a heart-breaking 23-7 decision and the round by two points, 26-24, before a crowd of about 10,000.

STAGGERING BLOW

It was a staggering blow to the Riders, late-season scourges of the Big Four who had won eight straight games and lost only one in their last 11. They had been set to settle with the western champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The Tiger-Cats, who defeated over Winnipeg in 1937, were beaten in last year by the Bombers who piled it on by taking a few vertical shots at Hamilton coach Lou Trimble. They go at each other again in Toronto next Saturday.

The brilliant passing of veteran quarterback Bernie Faloney, the spectacular pass-catching of 24-year-old Tommy Grant and an unstable injury to their own first-string quarter, Russ Jackson, enabled Ottawa to defeat. A new Tiger star was born in the third-quarter when Grant, a Windsor high school product, showed scores great clutch pass receiving ability as scoreless first half.

The Rough Riders suffered a shattering blow when Jackson couldn't run with his usual effectiveness after he hurt his ankle again on the second play of the game. The ankle, sprained in the dying minutes of the previous game, was gingered at the start of the second game and again during halftime and in the third quarter.

LIMITED OFFENCE

With Jackson unable to use his deadly, cut-back option play that caused Hamilton so much trouble last week, the Riders' attack was limited penalties to the passing of Babe Parilli and the scattering of Dave Theiss, the league's leading ground gainer. Neither was able to do too much and Ottawa didn't penetrate into the Hamilton end of the field until late in the third quarter. Theiss was held to 49 yards in 11 carries.

Grant caught three straight passes from Faloney to set up Hamilton's first touchdown, scored by Ralph Goldston from five yards out after an 85-yard drive. It cut Ottawa's lead to 17-12 in the round and less than three minutes later Tcats went ahead 19-17 on a 31-yard touchdown pass from Faloney to fullback Gerry McDougall.

Theiss fumbled to pave the way for Tcats' clinching touchdown and a 26-17 lead. McDougall fired a 31-yard pass to end Gene Jones after taking a pitchout on a run-or-pass option play.

The fumble was picked later by Riders' coach Frank Clair as the probable turning point in the game.

"That third quarter splurge killed us and we couldn't handle their passing," said Clair. "And when we had the ball we couldn't move on offence."

Hamilton coach Jim Trimble, who was tossed fully-clothed into the shower by his happy players, suggested in first-down pass by quarterback Babe Parilli which was knocked down and gave Tcats possession on the Hamilton 47, with about eight minutes to go was a major factor. Trimble thought Ottawa should have punted.

GAMBLE LOST

Asked about it, Clair said: "It was a gamble. Bobby Simpson has been hitting that one and I figured we could make it. I have to take the blame because I sent the call in."

The Riders closed the gap to 26-24 on an eight-yard touchdown pass to George Brancato in the first two minutes of the final quarter.

The Tiger-Cats, jittery in the first half, muffed three good scoring chances then. A touchdown pass by Parilli, which was called back and Steve Oseschuk was the goat, recalled Grant's fumble. They also lost the ball four times on fumbles or interceptions in the fifth quarter.

But in the second half, Trimble noticed that the Riders were shooting their linebackers in to rush Faloney on his drop-back and three of the receivers into the area covered by Al Romine and Joe Pelletier. It enabled Grant to get into the open and his fourth touchdown helped give Hamilton team on the way to its smashing win.

Hamilton rolled up 17 first downs, 152 yards rushing and completed 16 of 29 passes for 265 yards. The Riders moved the yardsticks 22 times for 282 yards on the ground and 137 yards on 11 pass completions in 25 attempts.

Marlies Beat TeePees Twice; Irish Tie

By BARRY SHARPE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto Marlboros and St. Catharines TeePees as a stepping stone in their two meetings over the weekend shot a result that left the league leading St. Michael's College Majors by one point in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings.

Scoring four unanswered goals in the first period Marlies went on to trounce the TeePees 12-5 Saturday night. In Sunday's doubleheader at Maple Leaf Gardens, they were held scoreless in the first period but rallied for five goals in the final frame to down the TeePees 4-2.

LAST-GAME TIE

In the league's other game played Sunday Barrie Flyers led Mike's 3-2 before centre ace Dave Keon tied it up at 16:35 of the third period giving the Irish a five game unbeaten streak.

The Majors, who have 15 points on seven wins, one loss and a tie, have played two games more than the Marlboros, Peterborough Petes, in third place, held one point edge over Barrie Biltmores and Barrie Flyers who have 11 points. Hamilton Tiger Cubs, with five points are the point out of the cellar which St. Catharines occupies.

Brian Conacher and Jim Popolo led the Marlboro attack Saturday night with four goals each while Rickie Hay, Jack Martin and Roger Cote added singles.

For the TeePees it was John Brenneman, Doug Robinson and Don Grosan in that order.

Sunday, Gaston Brassard was the Marlboro leader, firing a pair in the third period after the Dukes were trailing 3-1. Pappin added the scoring in the second frame and Hay and Martin in the third, one apiece.

Chuck Maki and Brenneman tallied for St. Catharines, whose only defensive support came from defenceman Pat Stapleton and netminder Wayne Rutledge, who stopped 36 shots.

The Flyers and St. Mike's battled to a 1-1 first period deadlocked at 1-1, but Barrie led 3-1 going into the final 20 minutes.

Bill Knibbs scored the game's first goal for the Flyers before Bruce Draper tally 45 seconds before the half.

Emanuel Gilbert netted the only goal of the second with Les Kozak tying it up for St. Mike's in the third. Bob Awrey put the Flyers back on top and Keon got the tying goal 32 seconds later.

Habs Unbeaten in 15 Starts Win over Leafs, Hawks; Other Scrambles, No Change

By ALEXANDER FARRELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

For the last two seasons the National Hockey League has virtually been divided into two categories: Montreal Canadiens and the other clubs.

It is beginning to look as if there will be three this term.

Canadiens, floating along serenely on their first place cloud, are making the race for the NHL title about as interesting as a duel between a battleship and a rowboat. Whipping Toronto 4-1 Saturday night and Chicago 3-1 Sunday night, Toe Blake's team rolled to its third weekend sweep of the season and extended its unbeaten streak to 15 games.

Meanwhile, however, the usual scrambles for playoff berths almost fizzled out. After the weekend action, Detroit Red Wings and Boston appeared to be hardly less solid playoff bets than Montreal.

LITTLE HOPE

For New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks, it would take a Canadien-style splurge to lift them into playoff contention even by Christmas.

Rangers made a game bid to stay in the NHL battle Sunday night game against Detroit out of the fire, but were behind 5-3 at the finish.

The result left them eight points behind fourth place Boston Bruins, who limited the opposition to five goals in two second games and were tied 3-3 by Detroit Saturday and edged 2-1 by Toronto Sunday.

Black Hawks held Canadiens to a scoreless first period but Montreal broke through in the third as Dean Belliveau fired the ninth goal of the season to break a 1-1 tie and Henri Richard put the game on ice with a fluke.

The Pocket Rocket also got the first Montreal goal, Billy Reay's nervous slammed a screened shot through four players early in the second period for the Habs' first tally.

Buddy Bathgate's scoring splurges have been rare this season but he had one Sunday night and it was almost enough to push the Rangers to victory.

After Detroit had been ahead 2-0 on first-period goals by Billy McNeill, Gordie Howe and Warren Godfrey and a counter early in the second by rookie Murray Oliver, Bathgate flashed the end light twice within 25 seconds to put the Rangers back in the game.

A stout Red Wing defence kept them from doing any further damage and Gary Aldcorn wrapped it up in the third with help from Howe.

Boston's floundering Bruins, outplayed by the Leafs, showed a milder-than-usual defence to keep the score down but their 3-1 Sunday night loss cost them more than ground in the standings. Defenceman Fern Flaman, club captain, suffered an apparently sprained knee and ankle when he slammed feet first into the boards. He'll be out for an indefinite period.

OLMSTEAD GETS WINNER

Bert Olmstead, a Toronto sparkplug so far this season, shot the winning goal with two minutes before the end of the second period when he finished off a combination play with Tim Horton and Ron Stewart.

Toronto went ahead in the first period when little Dick Duff stole the puck from Leo Labine just inside the Boston blue line and passed to George Armstrong, whose shot beat Harry Lumley cleanly. Labine redeemed himself by tipping in Art Ecklund's hard shot in the second for the lone Boston goal.

Loyal Ottawa Fans Extend Warm Reception to Riders

OTTAWA (CP) — The defeated Ottawa Rough Riders got one of their biggest welcome-home cheers they last won the Grey Cup in 1951 when they stepped off their chartered aircraft at Uplands Airport Saturday night.

Some 200 cheering fans braved snow and freezing temperature to greet the team which had just been defeated in the Big Four football final by Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

They carried placards and banners, and the biggest read:

Our team was great we don't deny

You didn't win — no need to cry

This year you tried—for that we care

Next year we want back—coach Frank Clair.

Mayor George Nelms, president with several members of the city council, was first up the ramp to shake Clair's hand as he emerged from the aircraft. A loud cheer went up. The coach was visibly taken aback.

Rober-faced players filed out behind, each to be shaken by the hand by fan after fan. They looked like young bashfulness rather than grid stars in their well-cut civies.

Over a loudspeaker Mayor Nelms congratulated the coach and the players. Clair responded saying it was heartening to see so many fans out. He said: "It's hard to take defeat but loss is a big one. . . . We've been defeated in a few games in Indians for the years with Alex. They return Sunday for the Western Conference final against Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Clair said he will spend a few days with his two young daughters.

St. F.X. Wins Over Aggies In Bowl Game

By DON BOTT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX (CP) — A mighty ground offensive and good conditioning smashed the defensive wall of Ontario Agricultural College Saturday and gave St. Francis Xavier University of Antigonish, N.S., a 36-14 win in the first Atlantic Bowl game.

St. Francis, undefeated in two seasons, found hole after hole in the highly-touted double defence which gave up more points than it had allowed all season. In seven games in the Ontario intermediate senior championship OAC's opposition managed a total of 19 points.

The winners watched by some 3,700 fans, took to the air only seven times, completing passes twice. OAC clicked on 11 of 23 aerial tries.

But the story was told on the ground, where the fastest Maritimers gained 545 yards, against OAC's 119.

Luckless Macs Drop Another Pair Over Weekend

Set Back 5-2 at Kitchener, Beaten 9-3 By Windsor Dogs; Jones Fractures Collarbone

By GARRY ALEXANDER

The McFarlands watched the rest of the pack pull farther away from them in the Senior "A" hockey league over the weekend, dropping a 5-3 decision to Kitchener Saturday night and suffering a humiliating 9-3 defeat at the hands of the Windsor Bulldogs on Sunday afternoon.

The twin losses left the Macs deep in the cellar with a 3-13 record, seven points back of the fourth place Windsor club. Sunday's victory broke a four-game losing streak for the 'Dogs.

The injury jinx continued to haunt the desperate Mc-Farlands in Saturday night's game against Kitchener when they lost the services of Dave Jones, the hard-luck kid, suffering a broken collar bone in the first period. Jones was injured in Sunday's game with an injured leg, also a momento of the previous night's rugged fixture.

The Macs' next start will be against Whitby Dunlops here Wednesday at 8.00 p.m., the new starting time for weekday games throughout the league.

KITCHENER — Canada's Olympic squad jumped into an early lead Saturday night and the Macs never did catch up. The Dutchies led 3-1 at the end of the first period, 4-1 after two games and split a pair with Beville in the third.

Dave Jones became the upteenth injury victim on the Macs midway through the first period when he attempted to skate around the Kitchener defence. Maki and Sly jumped in on him, Maki big him high in the air. He crashed to the ice, fracturing his collar bone and shoulder, and was knocked out for several minutes. He also received a cut eye and was rushed to the hospital where the victim's injuries were verified. Jones remained in the hospital until after the game in Kitchener, rejoining the club for the long trip home.

Kenny Laycock opened the scoring of Kitchener's goals while Clint Pennington had a goal and assists. Don Head had two goals against the others.

Ray Partridge finally snapped out of his scoring slump, getting both Beliville goals, his first and second of the season. Bobby Solinger, Jim Bennett, Dave Jones and Ted Tupponcini drew single assists.

The Dutchmen picked up six of the eight minor penalties in the game, having one goal scored against them while shorthanded. Jim Bennett got a goal and a clipping one themselves while playing five men to the Macs' four.

The game threatened to get out of hand at times with both clubs piling up the men but no fighting serious developed. The winners employed a pretty good skating attack and although officially outshot 34-30 on the game, the shots did not indicate the play. Both Hurley and Maclagan came in with shutout performances on more than one occasion. Hurley collected his 1st shutout of the season.

Kitchener 3 1 0 — 4
McFarlands 1 0 2 — 3

Scorers — Kitchener, Laycock (Pennington) 1:34, Head (Laycock) 5:23, Head (Pennington) 18:36; McFarlands, Partridge (Bennett) 6:23, Partridge (Solinger, Jones) 19:55.

Penalties — Laycock, Pennington, Head, Kitchener, Jones, McFarlands, Bennett, McFarlands, Tupponcini, McFarlands, Bennett, McFarlands

Eight Hurt In Grid Brawl

BALTIMORE AP) — Six teenage football players, their coach, and a referee were injured Sunday in a fight between whites and Negroes which broke up a sandlot game.

The injured, all white, were taken to hospital. All were released after treatment except Jack Barrick, 18, who suffered chest and eye injuries.

The fight, broken up by police, came near the end of a game between all-white St. Jerome's Catholic Youth Organization team and the all-Negro Easterwood Bears.

Coach Roland M. Butetsky of St. Jerome said the fight started after his team had scored a touchdown to tie the score.

Butetsky said after one of his players was stopped short of the goal on an extra point play he was attacked by four or five of the opposing players. Spectators from the predominantly - Negro crowd joined in.

Police said referee William E. Dey, 23, was pulled from his car and beaten but managed to get free, lock himself inside the car, and blow the horn to attract attention.

The crowd then raised the hood and ripped out much of the electrical wiring, police said, and a Negro man was rammed through the windshield.

Indians Rout Que. Aces 10-2

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Springfield Indians lost Eddie Shack to the parent New York Rangers Sunday and at the same time lost a chance to strengthen their American Hockey League lead.

The two events may not have been connected but with Shack's two goals the Indians routed last-place Quebec Aces 10-2 Saturday night. After Eddie left Springfield lost 5-2 to Providence Reds.

As a result Springfield is now only three points ahead of Providence and Rochester Americans, who defeated Quebec 6-1 Sunday night.

Another three-way struggle developed further down as Buffalo Bisons profiting from a 2-1 overtime tie Saturday and a 4-2 victory Sunday over Hershey Bears, is tie Hershey for fourth place. Each has 19 points, one more than Cleveland Barons, who defeated Providence 6-0 Saturday.

Providence slugged the Indians with three goals — by Ken Yackel, Dan Pelliciari and Ray Cyr — within a minute and 45 seconds of the first period. Bo Elik and Lorne Davis made it 5-0 before Floyd Smith and Bill Sweeney tallied for Springfield.

A triple mjeconduct penalty to Hershey's Willie Marshall featured Sunday's Buffalo-Hershey struggle. Referee Art Skov called two because of Marshall's abusive language and one because he slashed his stick on the boards. Each calls for an automatic $25 fine.

Skov also called 26 other penalties, 17 to Hershey.

Eddie Kachur, Lorne Ferguson, Billy Dea and Howie Glover scored for Buffalo. Marshall and Bea Maxim an of Buffalo repeated for the Bisons' scoreless crown.

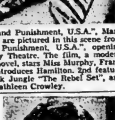
UPSET WIN

Miss Massimin and John Lynch of Buffalo upset Kay Gallagher and Tosh Uyeda of Toronto to win the mixed doubles.

Herb Kirkconnell and Jack Martin, Toronto, seeded third, won the men's doubles, defeating Fred Cartmell, Niagara Falls, Ont., and Bob Williams, Buffalo, 7-15, 15-9, 15-13.

Cartmell and Williams earlier had defeated Carnwath and Pat Gregorson of Toronto 15-4, 15-5.

In other men's doubles quarter finals:



Ray Cornish Stratford and B. Peach, Toronto, def. Bev Westcott and Bill Purcell, Toronto, 15-4, 15-4.

H. Kirkconnell and J. Martin, Toronto, def. J. Koehler and D. Mulvihill, Kitchener 15-4, 15-13.

Bob Traquair and Ray Young, Niagara Falls, def. P. Sloan and TV Provided Great Weekend For Music, Dance Lovers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a great weekend for the music and dance lovers.

On Friday night there was the tasteful NBC Telephone Hour this time playing Gershwin. The music was great, and the performers were Molly Bergen, Vic Damone, Elia Fitzgerald and Skitch Henderson with Peter Duchin and Champion.

Gene Kelly arrived Saturday night with more dancing and songs. The NBC show lacked the punch of Kelly's previous TV specials, but the songs and dances were fine. Carol Lawrence and Donald O'Connor, who has something of Astaire's airy grace and elegance of manner, as talented helpers.

Then Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic played Saturday night on CBS. The fun was taken in Venice during the orchestra's recent European tour and was enlivened by Bernstein's talks about the music and the composer.

Small World on CBS was a polite, good-humored three - way conversation among three of the top soldiers of the Second World War, former retired Gen. Mark Clark of the United States, Viscount Montgomery of Britain and Gen. Fridolin von Senger of Germany. All agreed that British and American fighting men were superior to Russian soldiers. And all endorsed that they felt commanding generals should avoid hospitals and field stations when fighting.

"I never visited hospitals when the battle was on," said Montgomery. "I didn't want to have my nerve shaken. Seeing the wounded men weakened my resolution for battle."

The others nodded soberly.

American Bowl Games Still Unscrambled

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The 1959 U.S. college football season, an unpredictable and confusing thing from the start, heads into its final stage with almost as many unanswered questions as a soap opera's last act.

Will Louisiana State and Penn State decide to accept the bowl invitations that already have been proffered?

Can Syracuse survive the potent threat of UCLA and finish the season the only undefeated and untied major team?

What affect will Thanksgiving Day games have on the post-season bowl setup?

The brief situation:

Rose Bowl — Wisconsin vs. Washington. The Badgers wrapped up the Big 10 title Saturday by defeating Minnesota, 17-7 while Northwestern, which also was in the running, got clobbered, 8-0 by Illinois.

Washington blanked Washington State 20-0

Orange Bowl — Missouri vs. probably Miami (Fla.). Missouri wrapped up second place in the Big Eight by defeating Kansas 13-9. Oklahoma won its 12th straight Big Eight title, but the Sooners were at the Orange Bowl last year and can't return.

Miami will get the host spot if the Hurricanes get past Florida this week.

Sugar Bowl — Probably Louisiana State vs. Mississippi, LSU which swept past Tulane 14-6, has been offered one spot. The unofficial word is that Mississippi has been invited as LSU's opponent.

Cotton Bowl — Syracuse accepted a week ago, and it will be Texas if the Longhorns polish off weak Texas Western Thanksgiving Day.

Blue-Gray Bowl—Texas Christian slaughtered Rice 35-6 and promptly was tagged for the Houston game Dec. 19. Speculation now is centring on Georgia and Georgia Tech, which play each other in the regular-season finale next week.

Retain Titles In Badminton

TORONTO (CP) — Defending champions Jim Carnwath and Marg Sneed, both of Toronto, retained their singles titles Sunday at the Boulevard Club's fourth annual open badminton tournament. Both are ranked first in Ontario.

Carnwath, undefeated in provincial play in two years, was extended to 15-11, 15-8, 15-6 before overcoming unseeded Finn Stender of Toronto.

Miss Sneed had an even tougher passage in, defeating Dorothy Talusc of Toronto 7-11, 15-12, 15-12. Miss Talusc then staved off defeat by a single point, finally taking the match by smashing a left-handed shot sharply across court.

Carnwath Marshall and Bea Maximan of Buffalo repeated for the mixed doubles crown.

UPSET WIN

Miss Massimin and John Lynch of Buffalo upset Kay Gallagher and Tosh Uyeda of Toronto to win the mixed doubles.

Herb Kirkconnell and Jack Martin, Toronto, seeded third, won the men's doubles, defeating Fred Cartmell, Niagara Falls, Ont., and Bob Williams, Buffalo, 7-15, 15-9, 15-13.

Cartmell and Williams earlier had defeated Carnwath and Pat Gregorson of Toronto 15-4, 15-5.

In other men's doubles quarter finals:

Ray Cornish Stratford and B. Peach, Toronto, def. Bev Westcott and Bill Purcell, Toronto, 15-4, 15-4.

H. Kirkconnell and J. Martin, Toronto, def. J. Koehler and D. Mulvihill, Kitchener 15-4, 15-13.

Bob Traquair and Ray Young, Niagara Falls, def. P. Sloan and

The Quinte Reports

News of Your Local Sea Cadet Corps

(A Member of the Belleville United Appeal)

The Quinte's new sports program got off to a very successful and enthusiastic start under the direction of Chaplain (RC) Gies on Tuesday night at the Armouries. This program will continue on through the winter months. It is proposed to place a hockey in the armouries so that equipment may be stored readily at hand for these activities.

Thursday's parade saw many Sea Cadets absent with leave in order to study for exams being held at the high schools over the next few days. Those present were given rifle drill under the supervision of the "Quinte's Chief," PO Wayne Bunnell.

This week target practice will start for those members of the corps who have not yet earned the Marksman Rating. It is hoped that several cadets will achieve this goal within the next few weeks.

Last Thursday evening following the Sea Cadet parade there was a meeting of the local Navy League. Captain John Watson, current chairman of the Cadet committee, was elected president for the coming year. Ross Boyce will be the new chairman of the Sea Cadet committee.

Two members of the local Navy League were honored with the presentation of Honor Certificates from the Navy League of Canada, Ontario Division. Dr. J. K. Cuthbertson and Mr. Ross Silver were two of four men in Ontario selected in recognition of their fine record of service and achievement to Sea Cadet work. Captain Watson presented the certificates on behalf of the Navy League.

A report of the resolutions passed at the annual meeting of the Navy League in Toronto last month was given. One of the Sea Cadet committee's training complement of a Corps. This was provided so that lads who had achieved a position of Chief Petty Officer in the cadet ranks could carry on in Sea Cadets after they reached the age of 18.

A distinctive uniform, identical in that of a Chief Petty Officer in the RCN, would be worn by this man, who would be responsible for the handling of a Corps' drill instruction amongst other duties.

This coming week's activities will include shooting and sports on Tuesday at the armouries. Thursday's parade will be a short test for the recruits.

A scale model of a Royal Navy "Leander Class" destroyer has been received by the "Quinte" and this will be used for instruction on parts of a ship.

Any lads who would like to join the "Quinte" are invited to come along at either the Tuesday or Thursday parades (meeting at 7:15 p.m.). Parades are held at the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Armouries at Bridge East and Pinnacle Streets on Tuesday and at the Sea Cadet barracks on South Front St. on Thursday. Any lad between the ages of 14 and 18 and in good health is eligible to join the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets.

Astrological Forecast

Tuesday, November 24, 1959

General Tendencies: A lifting of some of the recent tensions so can be felt by almost everyone and you may find that it can really get every sort of thing worked out on a very decided basis. But you have to listen to that other fellow if you're impressed if you can view them every item or particular by which to put old, constructing or new arrangements into effect.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Your day and evening should spend in serious labor so that you get greater efficiency into the operations, finish any pressing duties that have to be performed, take care of pets, repairs. Don't waste a single moment.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Make treatments that will make you feel so dynamic that everyone will be impressed. P.M. is the time to make efforts to amuse others and have them in your home for an evening of fun. You have real talent for entertaining. Use it now.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Since business and outside affairs are very slow this is the day to get caught up on neglected small but important chores. Also be sure abode is in tip-top shape. P.M. favorable on beginning an upturn in financial affairs.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Many a fine opportunity is present now to get the backing and co-operation of others toward your aims. Go especially to regular sources and demand better relations. P.M. get your home bills made out that you have put aside for some time.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Financial affairs should be first on the agenda now and you can make arrangements that will give you greater success in the future. Take time to put real estate in better order and consider that that it becomes more valuable.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) Stand before your looking glass now and see where you must make improvements, both physically and spiritually. Make them, then be off to outside world of action and really make rapid strides in the right direction. Evening.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — Many duties and concerns that have been neglected. Also, impress others with your fine working ability and generosity of heart. But do so quietly. Express yourself artistically also.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — A day to show gratitude to true comrades, associates and kin for their goodness and kindness to you in the past. Then be off to parties, games and fun with them to secure even better relations. Be sociable and gay.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) The ideal time to express happiness at being allied with that wonderful higher-up who has been so kind to you. Then go about attending to civic duties with vim and enthusiasm. Increase prestige and good will. Follow the law.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — You get ahead very fast now if you mingle with the right people and go to those intelligent sources where you can add to current knowledge and know-how. Get out of that easy chair and put mind and hands to work.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to let that wise and practical person you know to give you right advice concerning how to handle all association matters more proficiently. Tonight you must then be very affectionate toward loved one. Have more abandon.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) You have it in you now to achieve the best results in following so that associates and friends are more co-operative. Work together harmoniously. Get matters of policy ironed out quickly and without argument. Listen more, talk less.

If your child is born today—The very intelligent child born today is the type who can readily understand the ideas of others, no matter how complicated. Also, there is the ability to reduce these to a practical basis where necessary. Teach early the importance of having a specific aim in life. Also give courses in advanced psychology. A fine chart for work that helps your progeny to foreign lands, on government or personal missions.

Four-bedroom home in older East Hill area. Solid brick. Big kitchen, living room and dining room. Full basement with new forced air oil furnace. Oil-fired hot water. Garage. Terms and priced to sell.

Star Brick Bungalow, East side. Three bedrooms, large living room, tile walls, lovely living room finally large, well decorated throughout, oil heat. Storms, screens. Attached garage. Priced for year. Anxious to sell and looking for offers.

NEW N.H.A. HOMES. East side. Only 2 left in Belleville's best location. Several to choose from. Low down payments are low. Price will be pleased to show you around, there is no obligation.

Foster Ave., near Bridge. A lovely family home, as could be used as a duplex as it is now is. Two full floors. Four bedrooms in all. This one is in lovely condition. Price to see it! Just reach for your shoes.

FARM — East of Belleville, about 10 miles. Good home, 88 acres cleared in all. Price is right and a good payment of barbecue $1,000 would do.

LOOK HERE! Only 5 minutes drive from town. Overlooking the Bay and the City across the water. In addition to the main part with water frontage, there is modern 2-bedroom home with oil heat, garage, workshop, barn. This property has 7 acres, including excellent living room. Now consider this — the price is only $10,000 and a down payment of $2,000 will close this deal and one mortgage for the balance. Could you get better? If so tell us etc.

Pot of Gold at End of Quiz Show Rainbow Most Often Contains Hidden Clinkers

By SAUL PETT

NEW YORK (AP)—That great American dream, the pot of gold at the end of the quiz show rainbow, often contains hidden clinkers.

On the shows that pay off in merchandise, the winner walks off like a millionaire with a mountain of loot. But then things happen — not every time, but often enough:

The mink coat won't fit, it would be nice to keep the alligator but won't pay the hangar bill. The big new car is too big for the old garage. The expensive early American furniture is beautiful but it just won't go with your Swedish modern. And what can you do with 130 alarm clocks or six stuffed animal heads?

So they try to sell the stuff, and the price is rarely right. They take a beating.

And always waiting in the wings, with a big frightening hook, is Uncle Sam, eager to collect taxes for that thirty-day cruise, the necklace sold for a fraction of its quoted value or the wall-to-wall carpeting which never decorated the house.

"I'm still terrified that I won," says Mrs. Gloria Turnquist of Wayzata, Minn. "The program was marvelous to us. But my husband is getting grey hair worrying about the taxes."

"I felt rich when I won," recalls George Price of Canton, Ohio. "But I didn't later."

Both won handsomely on NBC's The Price Is Right. Neither has any complaint about the show or any regrets they were on. But in each case the first golden flush of victory has been shrinking fast.

Price, a steel worker who has worked in the last 18 months, won about $30,000 worth of prizes. The loot included a diamond necklace valued on the program at $7,800; a $3,100 36-piece dining room set; $2,200 baby grand piano; $3,100 40-day cruise for two to Europe; a new station wagon; a juke box, and assorted machines for making popcorn and cotton candy.

Price and his wife kept the car and took the trip to Europe, on both of which they had to pay income taxes. They tried to sell everything else. It took a year and considerable disillusion.

"I don't doubt," Price says, "that the retail values quoted on the program were accurate. But when you go to sell these things, you find they have a terrific mark-up and that dealers are reluctant to buy single items from private individuals. Then, you try to sell to private parties and you find them very cold. They think I got something for nothing so they want it for nothing.

"We finally sold the 37,800 necklace to a jeweler for $1,500. The dining room, all 20 beautiful pieces, went for $430."

After selling everything else, they grossed about $5,200 in cash. Then the government took about $1,800 in tax. Net cash profit to George Price after winning $30,000 worth of loot? About $3,400.

It's easy to understand why Gloria Turnquist's husband is turning grey. Early this year she won loot valued at $28,857, a record for the program. By their own calculations, they'll be lucky to break even after taxes.

Among other things, Mrs. Turnquist won a 24-foot speedboat and trailer valued at $7,500; $7,500 diamond bracelet; $8,300 a 1-piece, $2,000 piano organ; salad bar with freezer and refrigerator; foreign car; $1,200 teakwood chest; big set of china; trip for two of Rio de Janeiro; hi-fi set; and a huge ferris wheel.

The Turnquists thoroughly enjoyed their trip to Rio but, they estimate, it alone will cost them $600 in income taxes, which is more than they ordinarily spend on an entire vacation.

They traded in the speedboat for a cabin cruiser. They were lucky with the piano; they sold it before delivery for about $6,000, thus avoiding a hangar bill. They donated the piano organ to a convent; kept the car, the hi-fi, the china, the salad bar and furniture; sold the ferris wheel for $800 to nine men building a private amusement park for their children. They are still trying to sell the bracelet but hope to do better than the best offer so far ($3,000).

"In all," says Mrs. Turnquist, "we have so far realized about $9,000 in cash. But the reason my husband is so worried is that he thinks we will have to pay between $15,000 and $18,000 in taxes on everything we won."

The amount of tax, of course, varies with the winner's normal income. But the basis of the tax is the same for all and, according to internal revenue people, works this way:

The quiz winner is not taxed on the listed retail value of an item. If he sells it or keeps it, he pays on the basis of the item's "fair market value." If he sells for less, that's too bad: he still is taxed on the "fair market value." How is this value determined? The winner shops around in stores in his town to see what the same item is selling for.

Pravda Assails Exaggerated Claims

LONDON (Reuters) — Russia's Academy of Sciences has asked the country's newspapers to stop exaggerating the achievements of soviet science.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda, quoted by Moscow radio today, says the academy has decided that because of some "extraordinary" scientific claims made recently in the Soviet press, articles must be published to explain to the public the basic facts about scientific discoveries.

The academy noted that some newspaper articles referred to "as apparently extraordinary discovery" in which technicians built a machine capable of concentrating dissipated energy from surrounding space.

The academy explained that what these technicians had in fact built was a version of the heat pump which works on the principle of a law of basic thermodynamics formulated as far back as 1824.

This had nothing to do with "second-order perpetual motion" which the authors of the articles had claimed.

WHAT DOES THE LARK HAVE THAT THE OTHERS DO NOT?

IT HAS SIX BODY STYLES: New convertible, new 4-door and 2-door station wagons, hardtop, 4-door and 2-door sedans! Selection of seven sophisticated colors. Even handsomely appointed in distinctive vinyl or cloth upholstery. Nobody else has them. Why settle for less?

IT HAS A POWERFUL, THRIFTY V-8 OR SUPER ECONOMICAL 6: The Lark V-8 topped all other "eights" in last year's Mobilgas Economy Run. It's one of the fastest accelerating cars in Canada and yet it is more economical than some "sixes". Have your cake and eat it, too! The Lark V-8 (cars just a little more than the 6) offers all the advantages of new dimension cars plus potent performance matched to economy. The "six" offers spirited performance with, of course, greater fuel economy. Why be limited! Choose The Lark! (Important! The Lark couples safety with power . . . V-8 has biggest brakes of any car in its class.)

IT HAS A CHOICE OF THREE FINE TRANSMISSIONS: Automatic, conventional shift, or 3-speed with overdrive. Lark automatic transmission has a full range of speeds including Park, Neutral, Drive, Low, Reverse. Low and Reverse are purposely placed together for rocking the car out of snow, ice or mud. Lark three-speed synchromesh is smooth, decisive, sure and, with overdrive, the engine loafs at cruising speed and cuts your gas bills even more. Which one suits you best? The Lark offers this choice, the others do not!

IT HAS MANY UNUSUAL FEATURES: For example, reclining seats that make into beds, front seat headrests, hillholder, Twin Traction (for driving through snow, sand, ice or mud), 6-barrel carburetor and dual exhausts, choice of safe racing . . . many, many more. None of the others have this wide variety of optional features from which to choose.

IT HAS PROVEN PERFORMANCE: 150,000 Lark owners have driven many millions of miles under every conceivable road and weather condition. Result: no "bugs" to iron out, no "hidden" mechanical faults . . . no problems for new owners. Dealers and service men everywhere know the Lark. Records clearly show that Lark service and maintenance costs are much less than the automobile industry average. How can you go wrong on that?

No Immediate Relief Seen For Flooded Homes

Washington State Sees Worst Flood in Years

SEATTLE (AP)—Rolling river levels in western Washington state edged slowly downward during the night, but a combination of rain and snow - melting temperatures in the mountains meant no immediate relief for hundreds flooded out of their valley homes.

Lowlands within a radius of about 30 miles were vast lakes, dotted by small hills where livestock huddled above the swirling waters. Thousands of acres of rich farmland were inundated and damage was expected to run into millions of dollars.

It was northwest Washington's worst flood in 28 years.

Hundreds of persons were rescued by boat, helicopter, powerboat and amphibious craft from both the Green River valley, then 25 miles south of here, and from Snohomish River area to the north.

MANY RELUCTANT

Many left reluctantly — unwilling to abandon homes and livestock. Some refused to leave.

Ray Hall, Monroe farmer, said she didn't intend to leave her home. "I've got a cot piled then I stood on a chair to get away from the water, and men in a boat would hand me food.

"When they asked me if I didn't want to go, I decided I did. That water was getting pretty deep."

Although only showers hit the valley Monday, civil defense authorities reported heavier rains in the Stampede Pass area of the Cascades. The weather bureau said it lost communications with the Stampede station late in the day.

In Snoqualmie Pass, where a 300-foot section of the state's main east-west route was taken out by a slide, steady rain fell.

East - West highway travel, blocked by mudslides at both passes, resumed today at curtailed rates.

DEATH

One woman was killed in a mountain pass accident before the highway was closed. No other fatalities were reported.

Many were out looking for stranded cattle and a young companion reported seeing the Snoqualmie River when their boat struck submerged telephone lines two miles from the river valley.

The youth swam to shore and then helped rescued Sidney Salo, 63, about three miles downstream.

Governor Albert D. Rosellini, who declared Snohomish County, Wash., a disaster area Monday, made a three-hour aerial tour of the flooded sections Monday.

Chief Office Clerk of TCA Said Murdered

TORONTO (CP) — James Beverly Wright, 39-year-old chief office clerk for Trans-Canada Airlines, was found shot to death today at the rear entrance to TCA's operations building at suburban Malton airport.

Police said he was murdered but no motive has been found. He was killed at by a rifle bullet through the heart that apparently entered his body from the front.

Wright was found about 8:30 a.m. by fellow employees coming to work. A TCA spokesman said Wright generally is the first one in the office, usually arriving at 7 a.m.

A TCA employee since 1948, Wright was said to be a very sincere man well-liked by his fellow employees. He lived with his wife and five-year-old son Donald at Oakville, midway between Toronto and Hamilton.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright, reside in Collingwood. They were notified of their son's death by a minister and Collingwood's police chief, who was followed by officials here.

Wright began with the airline as an office boy, later worked in the air freight department and had been employed at the airport for the last two years.

14-Year-Old Boy Given Reprieve Of Two Months

TORONTO (CP)—Steven Truscott, 14, the Clinton, Ont., schoolboy convicted of the murder of a 12-year-old girl and sentenced to be hanged Dec. 8, has been granted a two-month reprieve, it was learned today.

Justice Judson Dana Porter of the Ontario Court of Appeal has ordered that the execution date be set back to Feb. 16, 1960, to give the boy's lawyer time to prepare an appeal.

Truscott was convicted of the June 9 rape - murder of Lynne Harper. He was sentenced Sept. 30 after the Ontario Supreme Court jury trial and now is confined to Huron County Jail at Goderich.

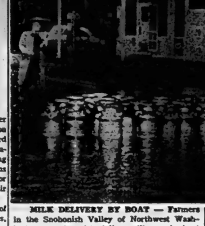
Lawyer John O'Driscoll, in asking for the stay of execution, told Chief Justice Porter Friday there has been a delay in transcribing the record of the trial needed for the appeal.

The youth is the son of WO and Mrs. Daniel Truscott of RCAF Station Clinton. Lynne was the daughter of FO and Mrs. L. B. Harper.

Skull Fractured

OSHAWA (CP)—William Semowonky, 65, died of a fractured skull three days after he was found Monday at the bottom of a coal - cellar stairs in his home here.

FIND PIGMY TRIBE



PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (Reuters) — A "lost tribe" of pygmy cannibals has been found in wild New Guinea jungles, it was announced here today. A government patrol reported the tribe having made "friendly" contact with Australian officials. The tribe were told they eat the dead of their own tribe.

Today's Chuckle

Husband-hunting is probably the only sport in the animal that gets caught has to buy a licence.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis:
Southern Ontario will have more mild wet weather today as another disturbance moves eastward across the province. Cold air will sweep southward to cover all of Ontario by Wednesday morning, bringing snowflurries to the lower Great Lakes area. Occasional snowsqualls will occur Wednesday in the snowbelt areas southeast of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay.

MILK DELIVERY BY BOAT — Farmers in the Snohomish Valley of Northwest Washington were forced to deliver milk cans by boat yesterday when rising rivers flooded the rich farmland. Many roods were inundated, washed out their homes. Scores of families evacuated (AP Wirephoto).

MUST DEVELOP MORE TOURIST ATTRACTIONS

Opinion Expressed By Resource Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada must develop tourist attractions if she wants to draw more visitors.

That is the opinion of Resources Minister Alvin Hamilton, who on Monday night at a dinner for delegates attending the annual federal - provincial tourist conference.

"It used to be that Canadians would sit back and watch tourist money pour in," he said. "In the last nine years the story has been different."

Canadians were spending their holidays abroad in increasing numbers. The country's tourist-dollar deficit had grown to many millions a year.

RAPIDLY LOSING GROUND

"We have been rapidly losing money. This is something a country can ill afford."

The minister recalled that 110,000 Canadians visited Italy last year, and the suggestion of someone that the answer was to "bring the Pope to Canada."

"This does indicate the thinking," said Mr. Hamilton. "We need more special attractions here."

Public grounds and camp sites were good attractions. "In my opinion the two provinces enjoy the best job on these are Ontario and British Columbia."

WILL HELP CANADA

The dinner meeting also heard Joseph M. Horan, president of the United States National Association of Travel Organizations, report Canada will have a booth at the "Travel U.S.A. Year" program sponsored by his organization.

He said this should be regarded as a "two - American" contribution, but as a drive to attract foreign visitors to the country in 1960. Many would visit Canada as well as the U.S. because of the ease with which they can cross the border.

Lawrence of Arabia Illegitimate Son Says Chairman of the Times

LONDON (CP) — Lawrence of Arabia was the illegitimate son of an Irish baronet and a nursery - maid and not the legitimate son of Lord Astor of Hever, chairman of The Times.

The publisher adds that the baronet's wife never divorced him. Eventually he, the former governess and their five sons settled in a house in North Oxford under the assumed name of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence, where they led a model Nonconformist existence.

In an accompanying story, Observer columnist Pendennis says Shaw was the illegitimate son of Sir Thomas Chapman, an Irish baronet.

Discussing Mrs. Lawrence's character, Lord Astor says:

"She was a deeply religious woman who felt she knew exactly what the Deity had in mind, and the sons felt the full force of her strict faith.

"She was particularly fierce about illegitimate children. How did she reconcile it?

"Probably it was a great genius love, combined with a feeling that she was rescuing the baronet from an unhappy life. Probably, too, acknowledging that she had broken one commandment, she was determined to enforce the rest, and trust to the mercy of her maker."

Agriculture Authorities Meet in Private for Talks

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian agriculture authorities met today to continue in private the annual federal - provincial agricultural conference.

Agriculture Minister Harkness met with provincial counterparts in one section while Deputy Minister J.G. Taggart and provincial deputy ministers held another session.

The usual joint meeting of deputies on Monday night is not scheduled for the afternoon, with subjects under review expected to bear down on specific points.

It was a public meeting Monday at which the ministers, farm organizations and the provincees sketched their stands in general terms on a wide variety of subjects.

Mr. Harkness made these observations:

1. Canadian farm prices were really still lag behind those for most other commodities and farm income may fall off in 1960.

2. Perhaps 280,000,000 bushels of prairie grain may be still unharvested as a result of early snowstorms and further discussions about co-operative federal - provincial aid will be held here.

3. The problem of surplus disposal still exists, compounded by the fact that such surpluses—exhibited by Canada's swift shift in its diried skim milk stocks—may be used up rapidly. He suggested that a working committee of the food and agricultural organization explore ways of seeing that both importers and exporters share the responsibility of directing supplies to the areas where they are most needed.

4. The deficiency payment system of price support—levelling the farmer sell his own produce and market if the price falls below a base calculated on a 10-year average price—isn't going to hurt

New Divorce Reform Measure Needed Says Senator Croll

OTTAWA (CP) — A move in effect for a new divorce reform measure in Canada, widening the grounds to include desertion, cruelty and incurable insanity, was urged in the Senate today.

Senator David Croll, Ontario Liberal, is understood to be preparing such a measure for introduction in the Senate where several similar attempts in the past were originated but either ran aground there or died in the Commons.

At present the only ground for divorce recognized in Canada is adultery, except in Nova Scotia where cruelty also is allowed and the courts interpret what cruelty means.

Eight of the 10 provinces have been empowered by Parliament to handle divorces in their own courts. But residents of Quebec and Newfoundland still must appear before Parliament for bills of divorce.

Divorce reform has had a long parliamentary history. Senator Croll's attempt will be the third major one in five years.

Most recent was an unsuccessful attempt in 1958 in which the Exchequer Court of Canada as the divorce court for Quebec and Newfoundland.

This attempt followed an effort in the preceding year by Senator Walter Aseltine (PC—Saskatchewan) to revive a divorce reform measure proposed in 1938, and which would have applied only to residents outside Quebec and Newfoundland.

This bill proposed that in addition to adultery, the grounds for divorce include desertion without cause for three years; incurable insanity where one of the parties incurred had been under continuous treatment for five years, conviction for rape, sodomy or bestiality, and cruelty as defined at that time by the British courts.

As a safeguard against hasty marriages and hasty divorces, Senator Aseltine proposed that no divorce action could be started within three years of the marriage except where adultery is charged.

After considerable debate in the Senate today, he expressed about the manner of defining cruelty, Senator Aseltine's bill was referred to a special joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons.

Amendments said Senator Croll's measure, still in preparation, encompasses the grounds of desertion, cruelty, incurable insanity and adultery and follows that of the Aseltine bill in other respects. It will be submitted in that form has not been decided.

European Common Market States Debate African Aid

STRASBOURG, France (Reuter) — Representatives of the six European Common Market countries today debated a report urging the creation of an American Marshall-plan aid to post - war Africa.

Reports suggesting that Africa's territories be encouraged to unite economically, as European countries are doing, were displayed by the Consultative Assembly, governing body of the common market.

The assembly, made up of delegates from the parliaments of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg, also received reports Monday at its new session.

Jean Duvivuard, Belgium Christian Socialist, said the common market countries should take the Marshall-plan precedent in their relations with dependent African territories.

"Europe should be grateful to the United States for having encouraged the European states to unite," he said in his report. It moved.

500 STUDENTS ILL MONOXIDE FUMES DISRUPT FESTIVAL

Believed Gas Drawn Into Hall by Fans

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Carbon monoxide fumes disrupted a choral festival and sent some 500 high school students to hospitals and first - aid stations Monday night.

Many were ill with carbon monoxide poisoning. Others thought they were and had to be treated for hysteria. But none was considered even seriously ill.

The youngsters were part of more than 5,400 Oklahoma high school students in the festival, taking part in the eighth annual Thanksgiving pageant at Oklahoma State University. Another 3 000 or so persons filled the hall to hear the performance.

About 200 school and chartered buses were parked around the building, and about half way through the performance the bus drivers started the engines to warm the vehicles for the trip home.

BLAME INTAKE FANS

Weldon Barnes, university public relations director, said the fumes apparently were drawn into the hall by air intake fans.

Hardest hit were the soprano and alto sections in the balcony of the hall, filled with the most numbered boys at hospitals and first-aid stations, he said.

David Pursley, a Lawton High School sophomore, said he was singing and I turned around and looked up and saw them falling out. Everybody was sick. I was walking around looking for some place to vomit, and I looked up and who was seated in the balcony fell and hit the rail then bounced back down. I guess they (the boys) can't look and look her to the room for oxygen."

The program was halted just before the finale number, the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah.

Wilderness said the withdrawal from the hall was orderly, but there were outside reports of hysterics became ill.

A very few were held in hospitals overnight.

G. C. Epperly, Stillwater High School chorus director, called it "a combination of too many hot bags, a little carbon monoxide and a lot of mass hysteria."

Seven Meet Fiery Death As Plane Plows Into House

10 Dwellings Set Afire, Sprayed With Fuel Oil

CHICAGO (AP)—A cargo plane, returning to Midway airport because of a fire warning, plowed into a house in rainy darkness just before dawn today and sprayed a sleeping neighborhood with fiery death.

The crew of three aboard the Trans World Airlines Constellation and at least four residents of homes drenched with flaming fuel were killed.

TWA in New York said the plane had landed in Chicago, discharged cargo and was taking off again when a fire warning flashed on the instrument panel. The pilot began circling to land again when the crash occurred, TWA said.

A flash, a string of explosions and apartment buildings at the southeast corner of the airfield burst into flames. Firemen said 10 dwellings were set afire, some from the plane itself, others from flames from those sprayed with gas.

LIKE END OF WORLD

"It seemed like the end of the world," residents of the neighborhood said.

"Flames came over the house all the time," a woman resident of one of the damaged houses said. "The windows broke. It sounded different. Suddenly the bear glass flying everywhere."

Thomas Fra'asi, 31, occupant of one of the homes, said the aircraft caved the roof into a bedroom, where his wife and small children were hurt, Fra'asi said. Mrs. Geraldine, 28, and their third child were unhurt).

The Fracassi home burst into flames and fire enveloped a six-apartment, three-storey building behind this house.

George Hlavacek escaped with his wife and 8½-month-old son Mark.

HOUSE IS BURNING

"I ran 'around the side of the house," said Hlavacek. "Bricks from the back of the house had been blown out. Then I looked and the back of the house was burning."

Mrs. Hlavacek said that after she ran out to the front of the house, she heard a scream in the neighboring house, crying for help.

She thought the voice was that of a teen-aged boy. She said the youth was trapped in the house under debris.

"Fires were starting all over around us," she said. "Everything was confused."

Minutes later some neighbors searched the corner house, she said, but found no survivors. She dragged him from the debris.

John Gow said he was a police detectives, said there were four residents of dwellings killed in addition to the three aboard the plane.

Mrs. Gertrude Bolin, who lives across the street from the crash site said she was awakened by "an explosion around 6 o'clock, but it could have been earlier or later."

SCREAMS "MY BABIES"

Fire Lieut William Mallory, commanding a company of fire fighters digging in the wreckage of a two-storey apartment building, said:

"A woman ran from the building screaming, 'My God, my babies, my babies.' Then she collapsed in my arms.

"We haven't found any children, but Lord only knows what we'll find when we get in there."

Mallory said the entire area was a sheet of flame when his firemen arrived at the crash scene.

Fireman, Boy Killed in Blast Caused by Fire

DETROIT (AP) — A fireman and a 13-year-old boy were killed and 11 firemen were injured today in a blast that rocked a house burst apart in an explosion touched off by a fire.

The blast flung more than a dozen of policemen and firemen to the ground.

Killed were fireman Bruno J. Koulich, 44, and Eugene Pietrzak, who lived in a first-floor apartment. Two firemen were reported in serious condition in hospital.

The explosion originated in a coal furnace where Mrs. Irene Pietrzak, mother of the dead boy, started a fire. Mrs. Pietrzak called firemen when smoke billowed through the west side Detroit house.

Firemen donned gas masks to fight the basement blaze and entered the house when the explosion occurred. Koulich, firemen and two neighbors who were in the house at the time lifted from their feet by the blast.

The policeman said he was knocked down by a fireman who was hurled through the air. Ten policemen were treated for minor cuts and burns and nine firemen were treated and released from a hospital spokesmen as "not serious."

The dead boy was believed sleeping when the blast occurred.

Mrs. Pietrzak and two other sons escaped without injury. Her husband was at work.

Dies of Injuries

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—William Challis, six-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Challis, died Monday night of injuries suffered when struck by a car earlier in the day.

ADULTERATED WINE

LIBOURNE, France (AP)—The local criminal court Monday sentenced a wine merchant and three Jouhaneau to three months in prison and fined 5,000,000 for putting sugar and water in his wine. Investigators testified they found more than 17,000,000 gallons of the 31-year-old dealer's product had adulterated. Still 12 to 20 per cent sugar and water.

Charge Woman Slew Daughters And Detective

MONTREAL (CP) — Preliminary hearing of a murder charge against Mrs. Catherine Ann Demers, 37, was set for Dec. 1 when she appeared in Police Court before Judge Omer Legrand.

Mrs. Demers was charged in connection with the death of her two young daughters and private detective Wilfrid Fleury. Fleury, a police found dead in her east-end flat Saturday.

Medical evidence at the coroner's inquest showed Ricux, who was found dead in the flat, weighed 240 pounds, had been struck on the head with a heavy blunt object.

Five North Carolina Felons Flee After Shooting Work Gang Foreman

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — "I didn't know they had already killed a man, but I knew that was is that truck out there.

"Oh, if I had known that. . . ."

Mrs. Ed. Sheets was describing her part in the escape of five dangerous felons from a county prison gang.

She was a prisoner herself in her slick six-year-old daughter at their side, a hostage of the men in the prison in rugged mountain country.

It had seen the convict truck go down the road—I never do rest until I get out—and the 25-year-old mother of four daughters.

"I'm always nervous when they're in the neighborhood."

The truck carried 11 prisoners and three guards to the day's work assignment. Then one of some of the prisoners cut a hole through the wall of the cage.

When the vehicle stopped, five prisoners crawled through the hole and colo guard William F. Handy as he dismounted. Handy was knocked down and disarmed. One prisoner shot work foreman Fields Absher, 35, near the heart.

Guard Judd Jones exchanged fire with the felons, but one of the convicts held Jones' head against Handy's head and ordered him to keep the heavily-armed felons within the mountains where escape routes are few.

First-Nighters Enthusiastic As Theatre Guild Presents 'Little Women' at Collegiate

A small first-night audience at the Collegiate Institute last night enthusiastically received the Belleville Theatre Guild's production of "Little Women".

The adaptation by John M. Rivold is a bad choice for a non-professional group undertaken. Depending as it does on repartee and swift conversation, it demands virtual perfection in lines and a depth which at times were last during last night's effort.

The main fault however can be blamed almost entirely on Mr. Rivold. It is the dragging first half of the play which lacks dramatic action. The performers did what they could with it, but nevertheless it flagged and at times even bored.

SECOND HALF BETTER

The second half carries more "punch"; this combined with the relaxing effects of time and usage and excellent characterization spelled complete success for the audience.

It is during this second half that players are given a chance to express themselves emotionally and respond to the lines and forth nonetheless which dampened the first half of the play.

And the players took the opportunity to give worthwhile performances.

Without a doubt, the bouquet best performer in the play goes to a dynamic and effervescent Jo, played by Margaret Jardine.

Jo dominates most of the play and handles her part with ease. Her tomboyish antics 'at a girl wishing to enter a man's world, her determination to convey the feeling that she is just as romantic as her sisters — it just takes her longer to discover it.

The part of Professor Bhaer is given by Marmee, played by Edna Perry; John Brooke, played by Ralph Wyman and Aunt March, portrayed by a white haired Nicky Thomas.

QUIPS HAVE BITE

Miss Thomas was flawless in her part as the rich aunt attempting to control the family by means of extensive purse strings. She delivers the biting sarcasm from a food part which calls for a rather caloric type fellow who livens up the atmosphere with unconscious humour.

Others by the cast include Janet Holmes as Meg; Winnifred Lewis as Amy and Nancy Evans as Beth. Mark Heitsho, Jr. dependable as ever, turns in a neat door. David Jardine is Mr. Laurie and Peter Tree is able as Professor Bhaer.

One gets the impression that Mr. Jardine does not extract the full potential from what could be a striking part. He is also unsure of his lines.

The sisters too, could get more from their parts and might do so once they get over the initial self-consciousness of a first-night. The play will be presented again tonight and tomorrow night.

PLEASANT DIVERSION

For those whose normal diet runs to TV westerns and mysteries, the play is a pleasant and different diversion and deserves a much larger audience than was on hand last night.

Direction by Betty Sadler is quite good. The costumes, designed by Helen Keeler and set by Dolly Massey, help to convey the Civil War period of the play.

Miss Sadler was assisted by Ina Miller; producer was Don Thomas and lighting was under Bill White.

Other members of the production staff were as follows: art work Mrs. Cain's students, Brian Lawrence, Jackie Price, Valeria Burnett, Paul Cain, Audrey Reid, Edna Clifton and Mary Tanuro Hayduck, Kathy Moore; David McFee, David McGee, Patsy Hyndman, Richard, Cindy Rickford, Jacqueline Sharland; stage manager, Don Thomas; properties executed by Joan Rickard assisted by Alison Wheelband and Joan Grover; lighting, Bill White, Barry Mulhall, David Jardine; stage crew, Dick Wheelband, Mark Heitsho, Harry Mulhall, Peter Tree; sound, Bill Lynover; tickets, Nicky Thomas; publicity, Betty Sadler, Mrs. Evans' program, Ruth Hightgale.

E. Guss Porter Appointed New City Solicitor

Belleville city council last night appointed a new city solicitor following the resignation last week of Robert A. Pringle, Q.C. and acted in that capacity for the past ten years.

The new city solicitor is E. Guss Porter, who on several occasions has substituted for Mr. Pringle as the city's lawyer. Mr. Porter is a former member of council.

The appointment of Mr. Porter as city solicitor came after council formally approved the resignation of Mr. Pringle and had been accepted a week ago in committee by a 7-4 vote.

At the same time council moved to block debate on a motion to refer Mr. Pringle's resignation to the 1960 council.

Mayor Gerald R. Hyde ruled the motion out of order Aldermen Forrester was in order and said it was up to council to decide whether there should be debate.

Council voted 7-4 to place the question without debate and by the same margin defeated the motion to refer the solicitor's resignation to the 1960 council.

Voting to refer the matter were Aldermen Argue, Collins, Digby, Graham, Temple and Tice, while backing it were Mayor Hyde and Aldermen Elliott, Ellis, Forrester, Grandison, Ireland and Wishart.

The by-law agreement appointing Mr. Porter as city solicitor provides for a monthly salary of $300 which is a 5 per cent increase over the remuneration which Mr. Pringle had received. Either party may terminate the agreement on two weeks' notice.

Two weeks ago Alderman Forrester moved a notice of motion calling for the dismissal of Mr. Pringle but before the matter could come before council last night the city solicitor tendered his resignation which was accepted by council.

Last night after the resignation had been formally approved, Alderman Forrester withdrew his motion.

Vaccinations for Foreign Travel

● Week After 60

Q. Where can I obtain information on required vaccinations for foreign travel?

A: From your doctor or by writing to: Health Service Publication No. 330, Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Q. Does one bleep after 60 shaves?

A: There seems to be no scientific study on which to base an answer. Meaningful information of this sort would be hard to obtain. For one thing, people do not retire "at random." Life expectancy of all people does not no longer work after 60 is no doubt shorter for those who continue to work, simply because many of the former have retired due to poor health.

Mayor Hyde Will Not Seek Another Term

Now completing his second term of office as the city's chief magistrate, Mayor Gerald R. Hyde will not seek re-election in the forthcoming municipal election on December 7th.

In announcing that he would not be a candidate for this year's election, Mayor Hyde had the following to say:

During the past several weeks many of my friends have been asking me, and indeed urging me, to offer myself for re-election to the office of Mayor of the City of Belleville.

In view of the unhappy events of recent weeks, it has been the general feeling that I could quite a large number of people still have confidence in my ability and in the civic government which administers their municipal affairs. It is very flattering to me that these people feel that I have been a good mayor and also as far as our financial affairs are concerned seem to have been able to steer a set-back the over-all city administration has received during the past year fully explained to the electorate as a whole during the past few days.

I am also well aware that many things could have been, in my opinion, misled into believing that they are true. Perhaps that is far worse shape than is actually the case and, in fact, Ed Bird, Clifton and Mike Deacon; lighting, Ed Rickard, Bill White, Barry Mulhall, David Jardine; stage crew, Dick Wheelband, Mark Heitsho, Harry Mulhall, Peter Tree; sound, Bill Lynover; tickets, Nicky Thomas; publicity, Betty Sadler, Mrs. Evans' program, Ruth Hightgale.

LIONEL TOUKER (GUNNER) ARNOTT

In failing health from a heart condition Lionel Touker (Gunner) Arnott, 144 Church Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday evening. In his death the city and district lost one of the all-time great hockey players and a resident of the community. He was born in this city, 60 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Arnott and resided practically all of his life in the city.

Receiving his public and high school education in this city, Gunner as he was familiarly known, took to hockey and became a great fan. He joined the junior squad, operated by the late Ed Thomas and for many years he played with the Intermediate team. Under the same management and his centre ice forays were beautiful to watch. He was a stickhandler, a accurate shot and speedy skater. Although he had not set foot on any championships, it was the Belleville Redmen that had the best chance for the laurels were handed out.

His prowess was recognized by W. Ontario clubs and he moved to Preston, where he starred for a number of years. After closing out his hockey career in Preston, he joined the Quaker Oats Co. and worked in the Preston store. He returned to this city later with his wife, whom he married in Preston, he opened a grocery store on Pine street in the city and conducted that business for some years. He then sold out the business and went to the General Hospital in the service department a position he held for some years retiring due to his health. During the late years he has been employed with the Liquor Control Board Store in this city.

Gunner Arnott was a splendid athlete, as the fellow who never did nothing better than to sit down with a few friends and talk sports. He was a keen student of the game and could talk on any aspect of the sport. He had a wide circle of friends who will sincerely regret his death. He was a member of St. Thomas' Church and is survived by his wife, the former Margaret Holland, one sister, Mrs. Robert (Gyneth) Nash of the Kingston Road, and one brother, Reginald Arnott, barber, in this city.

Resting at the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home, 60 Victoria Ave. at Church Street. The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

Very Reverend L. B. Garvin, pastor of St. Michael's Parish for the past nine years, died in Belleville General Hospital early this morning, Tuesday. He had been a patient in the hospital for the past month and a half suffering from a heart condition.

He was born at Westport, 83 years ago, being the son of the late Patrick Garvin and Ellen Mooney and was educated in the public and high school at Elgin, Ontario, later graduating from the St. Augustine Seminary at Toronto. He was ordained in the Priesthood by His Grace Archbishop Spratt in 1916 and soon endeared himself to the members of his charge both here and in Tweed.

He was a man of high intellect, easy to approach and enjoyed the friendship of a wide circle while his sterling worth will sincerely regret his death. He was a man who was deeply interested in the education of the younger members of the parish and spent a great deal of his time for the progress and welfare of the community as a whole. He was vitally interested in civic affairs although he did not take an active part. He enjoyed sports of all kind, but hockey particularly was a great horse lover and owned some fine roadsters.

Rev. Father Garvin was a member of the Knights of Columbus and Fourth Degree Knight. He is survived by one sister, Miss Minnie Garvin of Toledo, Ontario.

IN MEMORIAM

INGRAM. — In loving memory of a dear brother, Irvin Ingram, who passed away November 24th, 1953.

Sadly missed by his sister,
Mrs. Annie Ingram.

INGRAM. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, who passed away one year ago today, November 24th, 1958.

We sounded for him in heaven,
But could not make him hear,
And left a space in our home,
While others are asleep.

Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by sister Cookie, brother-in-law Ernie.

INGRAM. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, who passed away November 24th, 1953. His toils and conflicts over,
His work of faith and love,
Oh what glories he's discovered,
Since he went to heaven above.

Lovingly remembered by Inez and family.

INGRAM. — In loving memory of a dear brother, Irvin Ingram, who passed away November 24th, 1953.

Not dead to us while memory lives,
Not lost, but gone before,
Always with us in memory,
And will forever more.

Lovingly remembered by Lewis, Ellen, Joyce and Bill.

Expect Electors Will Vote On Subsidizing Bus Service

When Belleville electors go to the polls on December 7th in all probability they will be asked to vote on a by-law authorizing a subsidization for a municipal bus franchise beginning in 1960.

At the close of Monday night's council meeting Mayor Elmer Hyde said the matter of the bus franchise was one of great concern to many as the present bus franchise contract with the Bowman Bus Company would not be renewed.

As a result it appeared that subsidization of the bus company in some form would be necessary and the electors would have to vote on the amount of the subsidization.

Two aldermen questioned whether there was time to have a referendum regarding the bus franchise appear on the December 7th ballot, but the Mayor Hyde said he had been assured by former city solicitor R. J. Pringle that there would be time to prepare the referendum.

Members of the Belleville Arena Commission have agreed that the charge for children's skating at the arena would be 25 cents but the matter will still come up for later discussion by council.

Monday evening Arena Committee Chairman Ald. Casals Tice said that commission members had agreed that due to increased costs the arena board of the fact a survey of district arenas has disclosed that the charge elsewhere was 25 cents, this figure should prevail in Belleville.

Alderman Digby wanted to know what the arena revenues for public skating under the new rate would be as compared to previous figures.

The alderman also wanted to know what the arena revenues for hockey had been reduced to 10 percent, what the arena had received 26 or 30 percent, and yet the commission had raised the price to become the children's public skating fee to increase the arena revenues.

Later Alderman Digby brought the matter up again calling for the children's skating fee to be reduced to 10 cents.

Towards the close of the meeting Ald. Little Jack Horner had come in late, enquired about the admittance fee.

Ald. Horner replied, "Ask of the mayor, "At the show?"

Liberal Members Take up Cudgels For Graduates

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal members of the Ontario legislature today criticized that the provincial government appointed royal commission to investigate the status of graduates of the Canadian School of Practical Nursing.

Ontario Liberal Leader John Metherspoon also criticized the government's decision to refuse the school's graduates and nurses' aides the right to the opportunity to write examinations to qualify themselves as nursing assistants.

He said following a party caucus with the policy of the financial loss to the individuals concerned would be solved by the opportunity to pursue a worthwhile profession.

CALLS FOR PROBE

"In view of these serious conclusions and bearing in mind the fact that the Canadian School of Practical Nursing operated under the auspices and with the approval of the government, a thorough investigation into the whole matter is called for," he said.

Following a meeting last week with students, Health Minister Phillips said it would be up to the cabinet to decide whether the royal commission should be renewed at the end of the year.

He told the school last week that the royal council of nursing had recommended that the school be closed at the end of the year.

SEEK LEGAL ACTION

Mrs. Mary Hamilton, acting director, said Monday that legal action is being contemplated, but the school will first receive permission from the Brotenal-government-to-proceed with a suit against the Crown.

Welfare and medicine occupied most of the discussion at the opening of the two-day Liberal caucus.

It was indicated that Liberal members of the legislature are convinced Ontario is not ready for state medicine and that there is no demand for it.

Art Exhibit Creates Great Deal of Interest

The East Central Ontario Art Exhibition, currently being shown at the Corby Public Library, created a great deal of interest when it opened on Monday of this week, with a large attendance.

The exhibit has much to offer everyone who views it, with the artist represented in the type of paintings shown. The portraits, one water color and four oils, range from realistic to stylized, each done in a different and interesting technique. Several still lifes, including flowers, vases and old bottles, also vary in style and technique. The majority of paintings in the exhibition, however, landscapes. In this category one can find anything from a picturesque woodland scene to an artist's version of the aftermath of World War II. Several harbor scenes, most of which were painted in the district, also range from cubism to realism. For those who like abstract art, the exhibit includes several objective and a few non-objective paintings.

Only a painter taking part in this exhibition vary as much in technique as the artists represented in the pictures do in subject matter, with untrained amateurs, art students, art teachers and other professionals all exhibiting together.

Of particular interest is the fact that several Belleville and Trenton painters had pictures selected for this exhibit.

The exhibit will continue until the end of this week.

CNR Employee Found Dead At Yards Here

Canadian National Railways employee, Norval Dayman, of Port Hope, was found dead at the CNR yards freight station at the C.N.R. yards here yesterday. Death was believed due to heart attack but an autopsy was ordered by Coroner Dr. Richard Potter.

Mr. Dayman lived with a cousin at 294 Bleecker Ave. and commuted to Port Hope on weekends to be with his wife and family.

His duties with the C.N.R. were that of yardmaster at the switch at the roundhouse. He had refreshed and dressed and was checking fuel meters in the pump house when he apparently suffered the attack. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Van Blaskie.

Large Quantity Hay and Grain Lost in Fire

PICTON — A large barn with 45 tons of hay, a large quantity of grain and farm implements was destroyed by fire yesterday at the farm of Willard Eves, Picton, owned by Hillcrest Cherry Valley, Cause of the outbreak is not known.

The barn was rented by Lyall Hicks, who had grain and hay stored there. The nervious owner-or lost a large boss, which he had left Sunday.

Mr. Hicks, Mr. Eves and a neighbor, Allan Alton, "Shilling" were engaged in harvesting corn and cobs were being shoveled into a scolcon. The corn was used as pig pen. They had left the barn at noon for dinner and had not reached home when the building was noted ablaze. The blaze spread rapidly and a tydon pole across the road was burned, interrupting hydro service. The Picton army camp fire truck went to the scene but could do nothing. Loss is about $7,000.

'Y' Members To Raise $2250 As Donation

Over the next two years the members of the local Y.M.C.A. hope to raise some $2,250 amongst themselves to contribute to a $5,000,000 campaign which the "Y's" of North America are aiming at. This campaign for Brotherhood" program to render assistance to YMCA's in underdeveloped countries where "Y's" are being built to meet the needs of the people. Campaigns are in Africa, Asia and Europe for even the barest facilities are lacking in these areas, the people of various lands.

A meeting was held Monday night to discuss the campaign plans and for the reception and the YMCA's in North America were approved. It was asked other YMCA's to the extent of 50 percent of the building. To date some $11,-000,000 has been raised in other campaigns on this projects, North American YMCA's are being asked for five million dollars to help them in the task being asked to contribute $400,-000 to the total.

Junior members of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. will have their share of the local organization's contribution throughout the sale of Christmas seals, the identification campaign. The boys and girls intend to raise their share by selling some 900 to 1,000 boxes to citizens in the community at one dollar each.

SHIPPING RESUMES

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — Shipping resumed Monday night in the St. Marys River and Soo locks after winds of hurricane force tied up the locked ships to anchor. More than a dozen ships—mostly ore carriers and freighters—took refuge at anchor as the St. Lawrence Seaway link between Lake Superior and Lake Huron was closed for about four hours.

South Hastings Baseball League Honors Champs

The South Hastings baseball league held its annual presentation banquet at Plainfield Hall on Saturday night in the form of a turkey supper.

Players, officials and their wives along with special guests, numbering 300 in all, attended to enjoyed the evening and the delicious turkey supper prepared by the women's institute.

Dr. Jack Empson was chairman for the numerous presentation ceremonies honoring team and individual champions.

The Latta team which won both league and playoff honors this year accepted the major-league trophies. Mr. A. Hardy presented Latta, Deseronto, with the first finishing in first place, while Mr. Lee Grills, M.P. for Hastings South, presented the playoff trophy to the junior club for its playoff victory.

During the evening it was pointed out that the league has been in operation since 1946, 1933 W.E. Tunmon, M.P. at that time, donated a championship cup which was won by the Tweed Foxboro. Down through the years Latta, Deseronto, Tweed, Foxboro and Read won this trophy and it was noted that Melrose was the only team to capture the trophy.

Individual awards were also made. Don Forsythe of Canniffton won the Most Valuable Player award, donated by Hoard's Foundry, and also the Cairns Trophy for having the highest league's top batting average. Latta's Wayne Gow received the honors and received the Lions Club Cleaners award while Hugh Petrie, Latta, received the Bata Bowl. Rise Sunoco trophy at the loop's most sportsmanlike player.

British Empire Cheese Show Here Next Week

Mr. S. L. Rodwey, Toronto, secretary-manager of the Canadian Institute of Canada, will be the guest speaker at the annual Cheesemakers' banquet to be held at the Club Canara next Wednesday night.

The banquet marks the concluding day of the British Empire Cheese Show and the annual Cheesemakers' and Buttermakers' Convention to be held in the city next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tomorrow is the closing day of the British Empire Cheese show to be held in the market room at Belleville city hall. Entries are still in for the show in years.

Prominent speakers are scheduled for the cheesemakers' convention banquet at Hastings Quinte. Among the speakers are Hon. William A. Goodfellow, Ontario Minister of Agriculture.

Kenneth Murphy Asks Reason For Discharge

Belleville solicitor Richard Parrett Monday evening appeared before the board of education on behalf of Kenneth Murphy, 15-year-old employee of the city parks department who was said abruptly discharged from his job last Saturday.

Mr. Barrett said the reason given for the discharge of Mr. Murphy was the alleged mishandling of dynamite. However, Mr. Murphy said that he had not handled dynamite since last April, and noted that when Mr. Murphy had gone to city engineer Malcolm Turnbull for further explanation Mr. Turnbull had refused to discuss the matter with him.

Mr. Barrett asked the appointment of a council committee to deal with the matter.

Later in council Mr. Turnbull said that the proper procedure laid down for discussion consideration of employee grievances was that council meetings were not the place for their discussion.

Get Better Type of Worker Or Let Winter Work Scheme 'Go by Board,' Meet Decides

TRENTON — At yesterday's special meeting called to discuss possible applications of the provincial-federal winter works program to public works projects in the town of Trenton, the general consensus of the officials present at the meeting seemed to be that the unemployment commission and the welfare department should come up with a type of labour supply so that employed in the project last year, or let the program "go by the boards". Present at the meeting were Mayor Ross Burtt, chairman of the board of works; Ald. Sicoer, K. C. Aldercy, welfare commissioner; A. Gordon Davis, parks' board chairman E. M. Parker Jr., the manager of Trenton Unemployment Insurance Commission office, J. W. A. Russell, secretary of Trenton Welfare and P.U.C. representative, Howard Hallick.

Mr. Larry explained the 75 per cent of the cost of the work would be paid by the two governments. Work may be done by contractors or sub-contractors, but the labour must be supplied by those who would ordinarily be unemployed at the time. The work must be approved by government officials and payment must be made through the type of work.

WORKERS INFERIOR

Mr. Parker said that the parks' board would not be suitable for any winter work projects in the coming months. He felt that the majority of workers who were engaged in last year's winter works program were of an inferior type and that very little work had been accomplished.

Mr. Aldercy stated that he was forced to agree with Mr. Parker's observations. However, he could see very little reason to participate in the program, as the town had encouraged winter work out of straight welfare grants.

Mr. Davis said that he thought the program encouraged employment, to supplement their regular money with that earned by welfare.

Mayor Burtt felt that the man's family should be considered before his qualifications as a worker, and Mr. Parker asked how much of the money would went to the family.

Mr. Russell said that the work would go to residents of Trenton and, that in his opinion, the welfare officials would be called in in a case of emergency, to check on certain cases.

There was some discussion as to the type of work which could be made available to workers, and the advisability of applying the program to the laying of sewers.

Rotarians Hear Inspiring Talk By Governor

TRENTON — Members of the Trenton Rotary Club were addressed by J. D. (Dave) Kennedy of Guelph, District Governor, at the weekly dinner meeting in the Gilbert Hotel last evening.

The speaker was introduced to the members by Fred Bowerman, president of the Trenton club. Mr. Preston stated that Mr. Kennedy was noted for his activity in community projects. He mentioned his work with the crippled children and said that Mr. Kennedy had been the chairman of the Easter Seal Campaign for three years.

Mr. Kennedy said that the Trenton club was the 42nd club he had visited since July 1st. He urged his listeners to make a habit of visiting other clubs. He said that Rotary stood for the meaning of Rotary. The speaker said that he had attended Rotary meetings with his father from a very early age, and stated that he had been led to Rotary, to which he had been exposed, had made a better man of him.

Mr. Kennedy outlined a program for Rotarian suggested by Clifford Randall, the immediate past-president of Rotary International. Mr. Randall had stated that Rotarians should take time out to think of what Rotary could mean to themselves and the community at large. They should study the principles on which Rotary was founded, and ask themselves, "Rotarians to others, not so much in a monetary sense, but rather in friendship, enthusiasm, encouragement and recognition of the other fellow's worth in the community."

SHOULD GIVE SELVES-

"Rotary is not, and never was, a philanthropic organization," the speaker said. "There are many things which have far more value than money you give yourselves."

Mr. Kennedy said that the press should try to do more than merely report meetings. He felt that the club should impress reporters with the idea that the aims and ideals of Rotary should be brought before the public.

Mr. Kennedy said that there are Rotary Clubs in 114 countries in the world, and that the organization is a force which touches the lives of roughly 480,000 people.

Harold Thomas, president of Rotary International, was quoted by Mr. Kennedy as saying, "Bulldog Bridges with Friendship," Mr. Kennedy explained that Rotary, the epitome of this theme, considers all the trials and tribulations which are going on in the world today. He said that Rotary could hardly be considered an organization which are going on in the world today. He said that Rotary could hardly be considered by the application of this theme to world-wide basis, and that the latest force of Rotary would be felt in a very almost beyond comprehension if the ideal embodied in this theme were carried out.

Rotarian Jack Taylor thanked Mr. Kennedy for his inspiring address and said that, in his opinion, the district club was fortunate to have such a man as district governor.

Mr. Preston added his thanks.

HOLD SCAP BRIEFINGS

A series of conferences or briefings of commanding officers connected with Transport Command is being held at RCAF Transport Command Headquarters in Trenton this week. As many as the visiting officers are accompanied by their wives there will be a number of social functions held during the conference.

TO RUN FOR BOARD

Lou E. Knack, well-known for his activities in connection with the trades and labor, has announced his intention of following his name to appear on the ballot for a seat on the Board of Education. Mr. Knack has been a member of the Home and School Association for the Queen Elizabeth and College Street School, and he feels strongly that board of education is a very important part of community life.

PROBING FATAL FIRE

Investigation is still being carried on by-Al Williams of the Ontario Fire Marshall's Department into the cause of the fire in which Mrs. William Callahan, 65, lost her life recently. The very indication that it will be an extensive investigation, and that the complete findings will not be released for publication for some time to come.

REPAIR TOYS

Trenton firemen have started on the annual project, "Operation Santa Claus". Toys in need of repair or paint are being brought into the fire hall, and the firemen are working on these in their spare time, to provide happiness for boys and girls who might otherwise find their Christmas stockings empty. Many of the local stores donate surplus stock, which is also slightly damaged by the cause.

Mr. Mikoyan's Nap

Tuesday night of last week Anastas Mikoyan slept in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Looking back over recorded history, one can note a number of occasions on which the question of who slept where assumed considerable importance. Often, though, one would have imagined that Mr. Mikoyan's forty winks on his journey from Moscow to Mexico City would have gone into the record as the one occasion on which the Soviet Deputy Premier failed to spark a controversy.

Not so, as we shall show.

Says the Ottawa Journal: "This is not an historic event which will change the shape of the world, but we think it carries with it some hints of sanity. It is a gain surely that Mr. Mikoyan and his government feit that he and his jet would be welcome in a Canadian city, welcome to its facilities and hospitality. This is a quiet and sensible way to establish a precedent. It is infinitely better than all we pressed to bring Premier Khrushchev to Canada last September in the glare and afterwash of his visit to the United States. It is also far more flattering—if we want to be flattered—for the political maturity of Canadians."

And the Toronto Telegram in similar vein: " . . . an excellent example of the improving climate in international relations. Such a visit, with little formality and even less preparation, would not have happened even a few years ago."

But this is how the Montreal Gazette sees the situation: "But the important thing is not where Mikoyan has stopped on his journey. The important thing is the destination. And Mikoyan is headed for Mexico. . . . Certainly the primary purpose of Mr. Mikoyan's journey—the opening of the biggest export trade Russia has ever held in North America—seems significant and ominous. And his stopping in Halifax is probably in the hope of a little nibbling at another of the allies and neighbors of the United States on the way. Anastas Mikoyan is no friend dropping in for courtesy's sake."

The Ottawa Journal, the Toronto Telegram and the Montreal Gazette have two things in common—they are all recognized as outstanding Canadian newspapers and they share the same political faith, Conservative.

Mr. Mikoyan's snores made some bed-fellows toss and turn.

A Firing Out of Orbit

Trust the Russians to launch something else. But this time they are putting something out of orbit rather than in. A. A. Fomichev, former editor of the paper Evening Moscow, was fired for failure to give any coverage to the firing of the Soviet rocket that hit the moon (and newspaper headlines around the world) in September.

To be sure this was a journalistic oversight of no mean stature and no mean consequence and Mr. Fomichev deserves to be criticized for his action on this account. However it is interesting to note the Russian commentary regarding the latter incident.

To quote the Soviet press, a monthly magazine: "This serious political mistake was not accidental . . . The editorial board of the newspaper has not displayed the necessary operativeness and sharpness in reflecting events of domestic and international life."

We think the words "serious political mistake" cover an explanation of Mr. Fomichev's firing quite adequately. A journalistic error might be excused and forgotten but certainly not a political error. In Russia they get all fired up over this sort of thing.

And so another editor was put out of orbit amongst the journalistic galaxy which centres on Mr. Khrushchev, his Communist party, and their rockets.

We can't help but wonder whose fat will be on the launching pad for the next firing, however.

Experts in the field now estimate that there are about 10,000 nerve cells inside a person's head. We know some individuals who must have a lot more than that: For instance the fellows who, having borrowed $5 from you last year, come back again this year and blandly touch you for $10. SYMPATHY

By EDGAR A. GUEST

One came to the house with a pretty speech,
"It's all for the best," said he.
And I knew that he sought my heart to reach.
And I knew that he grieved with me.
But I was too full of my sorrow then
To find the right words, or care;
That I've tried I cannot tell when
But I'm sure he knew I was there.

Another came, and his lips were dumb
As he grasped me by the hand,
And he stammered: "Old man, I had to come.
O, I hope you'll understand."
And ever since then I have felt his hand
Clasped tightly in my own
And today his silence I understand—
My sorrowing he had known.

Search for Snore Cure

Edmonton Journal

In prehistoric times, no doubt many a prowling sabre-tooth tiger was attracted by the snoring of its victims in ill-guarded caves. Down through the ages literature records that snoring has always been a woe of mankind. Many a humorous skit and rise have appeared but snorers have rumbled on. A really accomplished snorer can perform on his back, side or stomach, and his variety of sounds baffles description. It makes no difference whether his head is hung or beneath a pillow.

A headline reads: "Doctors Want Snoring Cure." The reaction of many long-suffering listeners is, "Let 'em." Apparently, the sober British Medical Association is sponsoring a experimental program to see whether snoring can be cured.

"We need some hundreds of really bad snorers who are prepared to be a little piggy," said Dr. Harvey Flack, the editor of the BMA's official publication. No one, of course, will admit being a "really bad snorer" but the BMA should be able to negotiate this hurdle with a few exaggerations and testimony on the part of wives (or husbands).

The assaulting in the program are assured that they will not be asked to take anything in addition. The BMA thinks it might be able to stop it through simple exercise of the jaw and throat muscles before retiring. If the experiment should be crowned with success there ought to be a Nobel Prize for someone.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

HAVE YOU GOT "THAT SOMETHING"

Many have a way of always going ahead, with courage, faith in themselves, and with "that Something" which is explainable only by the ones who possess it. The salesman has it. The leader makes it "his stock in trade." Those with it, feel it, pass it to others, and demonstrate it in all their actions.

Those with this quality cannot help but influence others, and direct them to its use. It's a quality of character that knows no defeat. It dominates the man, and the man dominates himself. Those with "that Something" don't have to be explained. They are the explainable, and anyone can adopt this as a plan of life.

A salesman once told me it was the secret of his remarkable success. To possess this secret can become the joy and happiness of anyone who will dedicate himself and his life to its attainment. A strange how dramatic the use of this plan can transform one's life. Insurance people, discussing it in his life work, is always a marked difference in anything others no matter where he goes.

The great thing that has this "something." His life is woven about the plan. I once read of a person who remarked about the face of Lincoln, that no painter had ever caught the sterdiliance of his face — "Something else was there."

Have you got "That Something"? No one can better say than yourself. I hope you have, for it is the evidence of success itself.

As the war at sea enters a new and grimmer phase, British Intelligence Service, tion to invade Holland reappears. One of the latest is the German charge that the British Intelligence Service, blamed for the Munich Hitler hall explosion which nearly took the life of Adolf Hitler, maintains headquarters at the Hague. The charge may well be one of the steps in a trumped up indictment against Holland designed finally a German march to the sea through Dutch territory.

However grotesque it may appear to non-Germans it is just the kind of nonsense the passions of Hitler's devotees will believe. Holland, Belgium, And Neal Germany brought into play the dramatic and mysterious war tactics as she sought to blockade the coast of Britain with the aid of floating explosives. It is reported from London that German planes had dropped mines in the Thames Estuary, Britain's maritime doorstep.

One source said that three mines were dropped by parachute, exceptionally light and contained very high explosive; one plane could scare a number of the mines. The Admiralty announced that 14 mines, all German, had come ashore on the east coast within the last fortnight. Many articles speculated on the possibility that German aircraft might be used as supply bases for submariners in addition to laying mines. One enemy seaplane was seen recently to alight on the Kent coast and remain for some time.

Russians Not This Smart

Montreal Star

Mr. Khrushchev has been dropping, now and then, comments that spring from impressions of his recent visit to the United States. Perhaps some of them reveal the long of sour grapes, as is suggested. But one was pretty commonsense, too.

Russia, he pointed out, was going to try to build everyone a car and what's more, every person he could name if he cared to, and he did, with so much that there was place to park them. She was going to be practical and sensible, and make only enough.

Well, we wish him luck, better luck than we seem to have had in that field. Mr. Khrushchev is pretty level headed and he has put on such a level as this, we'll bet against him. Russia's economy is not like the literary notwithstanding, we don't think the Russian people are content or logical.

He could "cheat," of course, by the fact that there is a choice between the public car pool and the individually personal car possession, we know how they'll choose. In time they'll claim by edict discovered traffic problems.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

ASSOCIATION WITH OTHERS WILL OVER COME LONELINESS

"Dear Dr. Molner: What could cause me to feel such terrible blue and nervous all the time? I can't sleep or eat. I'm glad for a lady to live alone? I am 63 and have been a widow nearly two years. — M. S."

Probably there is nothing that will do more to make you "lonesome, blue and nervous" than living alone.

There is one important distinction to make, however. "Living alone" does not mean that no one shares your house or your apartment. It means letting yourself be cut from life.

Many times it is true that, at your age (or more, or less) people are left alone. Their children are grown and perhaps have moved away. Old friends have moved, Death has taken some. It is the pattern of living — as we grow older, we must be prepared to lose at least some of those we love. Those we have known for decades.

But it does not mean that we need be left alone.

Occasionally two widows, or two sisters, or two friends with money years, will live the same house or the same apartment. but obviously this is not always possible.

Let's say, for the sake of discussion, that you "must live alone" from that standpoint. There is nothing written in the law or in God or you do not seal yourself off from life. A canary, a cat, a dog, or a goldfish are a lot of company around the house. Some people have grown thumbs find a great deal of companionship in plants blooming on a window sill, or in a specially trained to grow up along a certain at the window.

But the important thing still must be people. Live alone if it must be that, but do not live alone in your life alone. Do things with other people. There are groups and clubs. Do things with other people. There are church groups and women's clubs. Do things with other people. There are church groups and women's clubs. There are also informal groups devoted to hobbies, whether it be making pottery, or studying or filing a civic seed.

In the cities, there are such "golden age clubs", or "senior citizen centres" for people 65 and over.

In smaller towns you may not have such centres, but you can get together and do things. Instead, find it easier to organize your own informal groups. Use your imagination maybe you're organizing a rummage sale to buy music for the school band will be helpful to the town, and at the same time provide a common goal for you and others.

At 63 you must have learned a lot. Some of us are still trying to learn when we were young. If we are lucky and shy, and with somebody would make friends with us, the truth is that others are feeling the same way and wish we would make the first move.

Instead of eating alone, invite one person (or several) to come for lunch. You don't have to be a social occasion. Just "come have lunch". Or play cards, or talk, or fancy."

INSURE AGAINST DISASTER

When the insurance business originated some centuries ago, many people regarded it as just a new form of gambling. With the passing of time, however, they came to see that the purpose of gambling is not the one who takes out insurance but the one who fails to do so. Insurance distributes risk in such a way that at a comparatively small cost special sacrifice can purchase security against disaster.

We are not indeed if we do not protect ourselves against the unexpected. And there are many ways of doing this, of course, than by taking out an insurance policy. We do so in many every day by the habits establish, by the kind of life we live, by the thoughts with which we fill our minds, by the human relationships we cater into. Character is constantly and eternally eternal and irrevocable in everything we think and do. We are building up for ourselves either a secure future or an insecure. If our mind dwells on the unwholesome, on sensual images, on hatred, then we put into an end to such attitudes — frustration certainly, unhappiness probably, and perhaps even the disaster of our fondest plans.

Such a person today stands in the midst of an unhappy life and faces a bleak future because he has not taken steps to insure himself against disaster.

Cannot Scoff At Anything

The Milwaukee Sunday Journal

A dam across the Bering Strait, from Alaska to Siberia? The idea sounds fantastic. But Soviet engineers, says Senator Paul Stewart Gruening (Dem., Alaska) propose to study the possibilities.

Borisov suggests a reinforced works out that way, it would not long. It wouldn't need to be very high in the deepest part it is 150 feet, and there are 127 dams in the world more than 200 feet high. Borisov would install giant pumps which would draw off the Arctic waters. This would bring the warm waters of the Gulf Stream in current into the Arctic from the Atlantic. The thick Arctic ice would be melted, making the shores become habitable!

Of course the dam might fix the Arctic, but raise hob somewhere else. In our weather bureau, for instance, we have expert fears that easing the Arctic climate might change the rain pattern in the Mediterranean and California regions, leaving those lands without a crop and Arctic Sahara.

Anyhow, Borisov and Gruening think the United States and Russia should get together and undertake such a project. Gruening wants to add Canadian scientists, a good idea.

Nowadays it is risky to scoff at any proposed project, no matter how fantastic it seems. Although Borisov wrote recently in the Literaturnaya Gazeta, "Flights to the moon also was considered until recently to be a dream of fools."

Potarians Told About Problems Of Retarded

Three of every 100 children born in Ontario yearly are mentally retarded.

Their IQ rating may go up to 50. This leaves most who appear to be adults will have the minds of infants or, at best, ten-year-olds.

These and other facts about the affliction of retardation were given Rotary Club members here yesterday at their luncheon meeting.

The speaker was Tom Stovell, charter president of the Quinte Association for Retarded Children. He told members that the causes of retardation do not respect wealth or poverty, race or color of its victims.

For those whose lives it touches, it is a cradle-to-grave problem which they live with 24 hours a day, 365 days of the year.

However, Mr. Stovell explained the prospects of retarded children, for one time bleak, were now brighter thanks to local Associations, special schools and even a summer camp where the children can go for recreation and fun outdoors which ten years ago would have been impossible.

GREATEST TRAGEDY

The speaker termed the problem of mentally retarded children as "... the world's greatest tragedy."

Parents whose children are affected have to dress the children, see to their toilet needs, watch over them and exercise them.

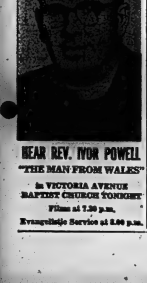
Ten years ago, the victims of retardation were hidden away in attics, or cellars and were only mentioned in whispers, by those with whom they came in contact. Today, he said, by comparison, the "message" of help and rehabilitation was being shouted from the rooftops.

At the conclusion of Mr. Stovell's address, Club members listened to a taped recording by "Bud" Colliton, a member of the Toronto Association for Retarded Children, who described a mother of his acquaintance whose child was not mentally retarded, but also blind.

DESCRIBES CASE

He told of the agony of her gradual realization that her child was mentally handicapped — it can not be discovered until a child is a few years old — and her determination in not giving up the long up-hill struggle which ensued as she took loving care of her child. Despair gave way to hope.

Then when she realized her child would remain retarded, he told of her efforts to make the child as happy as possible.



The child was taken for walks by her, both mother and child ignoring the snickering and behind-the-back talk of many neighbors who watched the pair. But as the years went past, her neighbors gained a tremendous admiration for this woman who never complained about the burden she bore.

The talk I item on yesterday's program was a film made by the Order of the Moose in Guelph of Bellwood Terrace, summer resort for retarded children near that city.

Boys and girls use the camp week about under the supervision of trained counsellors, one to each child. The youngsters make field trips, gathering flowers, learning to swim, singing around camp fires, visiting a farm to play with animals which they might never otherwise see.

Thanking Mr. Stovell for his talk, Rotarian Ben Corke said his was an unforgettable address which members would remember for a long time.

Guests to yesterday's meeting were from Trenton, Picton, Guelph and Cornwall.

French Envoy Makes Plea For West's Understanding

In addressing 230 members of the Women's Canadian Club last evening at the annual dinner at the hotel Quinte, the French ambassador to Canada, His Excellency Francois Lacoste, stressed the need of the western nations understanding France's problem and the Algerian question in world events today.

Monsieur Lacoste, beginning with the year 1957, explained in considerable detail the procedure which beset the French nation in its internal revolution. He found much encouragement in the steadily upward progress made, and dealt with France's place in the world, and her willingness to shoulder her responsibilities in Africa and in other parts.

"Only those who do not try, suffer no defeat," commented the speaker, "He stands above her many battles." Since the end of war terrorism had dwindled to a trickle and finally the crisis has abated, but still she was in the throes of settling and feeling the indifference of some, and being adored by others, France, herself, is indifferent to anyone, has always been the vanguard of any project of any nation, he said.

LEADS IN MANY FIELDS

In exploration she was the first to settle the whole interior of Canada; first country to send expeditionary forces of any description from the Great Lakes to Mexico; a local summer resort, Niagara-on-the-Lake, is named after a French governor; the Panchuman who built and operated the Suez Canal and the Panama Canal.

Her alertness is due to the French Revolution of 1939. During the First World War, she lost one and one-half million of her finest. Then in the second she rallied while, and had not recovered from the first, for the second war. She has recovered and her population numbers today 45,- 000,000 and by 1970 she will be the youngest nation in western Europe.

The holocaust of war destroyed her roads; her highways; her bridges and her docks and berds.

RECONSTRUCTION TASK

The reconstruction period saw the automobile industry rebuilt, starting from scratch; fulfilling the French market and then expanding in foreign export; food production again and in 1958 aluminum was exported to the amount of 157,000 tons.

Paris is first in fashions; perfumes; silks; gloves; wines and ties, and France has spent billions on factories in North Africa.

In speaking about the prosperity and the cabinet crisis of the 4th Republic in 1958, he used a comparison of an old car which begins to fold up; first one part gives out and then another, until finally it is done. As with the car, so with the parliamentary machine, the engine of the ship of state. It began to knock in March; to disintegrate in April and in May it fell to pieces. There was no hit for eight.

The next league fixture will be played at Quinte Secondary School tonight with Belleville Quarrey playing host to the Bluff Flyers in a seven o'clock game.

Trenton Wins Over Napanee

Trenton Wilson's opened the Bay of Quinte basketball league schedule with an 87-47 victory over the Napanee in Trenton last night.

Murray Price led the winners' offensive, hitting the hoop for a total of 35 points, while Arlen Burleigh was a close second with 19 points.

E. Robertson and A. McAlister were tops for Napanee with 11 points apiece while D. Phippen hit for eight.

Buck Dressed 184 Pounds, Shot in County

He was probably the monarch of the antlered herd in his favorite North Hastings forest retreat.

Today he is one of the finest "pieces of venison" ever to fall prey to a hunter's rifle.

The magnificent stag weighed 184 pounds when dressed and veteran hunters say he would up the scales at 230 pounds "on the hoof."

He was shot by Charles Skiskale of this city, somewhere "midway in the county."

The deer is said to be a hunting record for the area in the Tweed district of the Department of Lands and Forests.

In other parts the "Silver Spring Hunt Club" hunted and got their quota in the Millbridge district. Nine members including Elmer "Sandy" Sandercock, MPP; Charles Keirl; Elton Adams; Jack Sherman; Allan Allen; Gerald Sirrason; Lalid Adams; Howard Smith and Allan Thompson each got their deer.

Women's Institute
WELLINGTON W.I.

WELLINGTON — The regular meeting of the Wellington Women's Institute was held in the town hall last Tuesday evening with about 40 members and guests present.

The president, Mrs. S. Tripp, opened the meeting in the usual way and welcomed the guests.

Business was discussed. A thank-you note and cheque from the Prince Fund committee were received; also a thank-you from Mrs. Leslie Macdonald. All bills were moved to be paid. It was also decided to send a cheque to the Federated Women's Rotheses Fund and to the Telly Mills Fund.

A letter was read from St. Andrew's Guild asking for the use of a tank of gas for the stove in return for the use of it for a year. The offer was accepted.

The birthday box received two donations, one from Mrs. Moore and one from Mrs. Herbert, both having birthdays in November.

The meeting was then taken over by Mrs. W. Calnan, convener for the evening, who presented the following program. "The Maple Leaf" was sung in unison; poem of the month, "Make Someone Happy," by Mrs. Harris; current events were given by several ladies; a lovely piano solo by Mrs. Frank Brimley, Sr., was enjoyed by all.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Calnan introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Gene Gentile, of Picton, who gave a splendid story of his trip, with Mr. Phil Dodds, to Mexico, Chihuahua, Jamalco and Cuba.

Miss Ida Brewington, which is just everyone in a jolly mood, she showed moving pictures taken in Jamaica. He has promised to come back and show pictures of Cuba, to which all are looking forward.

Mrs. Calnan moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Gentile after which the meeting closed.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Calnan and her group.

The next meeting will be the Christmas pot-luck supper and exchange of gifts. The roll call will be donations for the situation. Mrs. Bovay and Mrs. Ogilvy will be the hostesses.

LATCHFORD — GRAHAM

Large bronze, white and yellow chrysanthemums adorned the altar and chancel rail in Christ Church, Belleville, on Saturday, November 7, at 2.00 p.m. for a lovely late autumn wedding when Mary Lou Graham, of R. R. 4 Belleville, elder daughter of Mrs. Joseph Ellis, became the bride of Ronald Vernon Clare Latchford, of Cannilton, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Latchford. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Archdeacon C. B. Creegan, Rector of the church. White satin bows designated the pews.

The wedding music was played by the church organist, Mr. John Croyden Withers who accompanied the choir of six boys as they sang before the ceremony, "O Perfect Love," and "O Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," during the signing of the register.

The lovely bride, given in marriage by her step-father, Mr. Joseph Ellis, wore a charming bridal gown in portrait design in ballerina-length taffeta with fitted bodice of Nolpac lace having a Sabrina neckline outlined with sequinned lace, ending in gay darting streamers flowing in bemline at the back and sheath-like sleeves ending in lily-points over the wrists. The skirt of nylon net was accented by fold on fold net edged with lace supplying a touch of matching lace. Her waist-length veil of tulle illusion was anchored by a quin trimmed edge, was held in place by a pure silk organza cap headdress dotted with iridescent sequins and seed pearls. She carried a crescent-shaped bouquet of garnet roses mingled with ivy. A single strand of pearls and matching earrings completed her nuptial costume.

The maid of honour, Miss Joyce Twiddy, of Belleville, was gowned in waltz-length pink silk organza accented with large back bow, round neckline and short sleeves. She wore a matching stole of tulle illusion, matching headdress and mitts, and carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white pom-pom 'mums. Completing her ensemble was a single strand of pearls, the gift of the bride.

Little Miss Diane Ellis, step-sister of the bride, was sweet in a heavenly blue nylon chiffon over net and taffeta frock, with matching headdress, white gloves, and matching ankle socks and shoes. She carried a basket of blue and white pom-poms from which were the gift of the bride, a sterling silver cross.

Mr. Carl Latchford, brother of the bridegroom was groomsman, while Messrs. Robert Neale, of Belleville, R. R. 5 and Robert Donaldson, of Belleville R. R. 2 ushered the guests.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in Christ Church parish hall where the bride's mother, wearing navy three-piece brocaded taffeta featuring a tiny stand-up collar, three-quarter sleeves and full skirt with pink and black accessories, and corsage of pink, feathered carnations, received, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, in charcoal-blue with empire waistline and gore-flared skirt in embossed bengaline, with red and black accessories and corsage of red-feathered carnations.

The bride's table was appointed with the traditional white damask, and centred by a three-tier all-white wedding cake topped with two dover bearing gold wedding rings beneath an arch of pink and white roses, and misted about the base with white tulle and pale pink gladioli flowers. Pink and white candles in crystal holders and the bridal bouquets completed a lovely nuptial setting.

For travelling by motor around Lake Ontario, the bride chose a three-piece suit in green sheath with beige accessories, and corsage of yellow Sweetheart roses.

Guests were present from Kingston; Hallaway; Cornwyllis; Cannilton, and Belleville.

Prior to her marriage the bride was the honored guest at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Miss Joyce Twiddy, Belleville, with Mrs. F. Twiddy and Mrs. C. Reynolds as cohostesses. At a kitchen shower, following her marriage, held at the home of Mrs. J. Latchford, with Mrs. L. Hopkins as co-hostess, a presentation was also held by the Belleville staff of the Toronto Daily Star of which the bride is an employee, when she was the recipient of an electric clock, many other beautiful and useful gifts were also received.

Mr. and Mrs. Latchford will reside at Belleville, R. R. 4. Ontario.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride, a diamond baguet, to groomsman and ushers, tie bars and cuff links. The bride's gift to the bridegroom, a sterling silver tie bar and cuff links.

CENTENARY W.A. — W.M.S.

CENTENARY — Mrs. R. Edmondson was hostess for the November meeting of the Centenary W.A. and W.M.S.

"Thank-you letters were received from Mrs. D. Hobbs and Byron Hobbs, and eight cards were reported.

Mrs. F. Moore, Mrs. Lloyd Pearson and Mrs. R. Edmondson contributed to the birthday box.

A special vote of thanks was offered Mrs. R. Hobbs for her services in making the new church bell drapes.

The nominating committee brought in the new slate of officers for the coming year and it was accepted.

Mrs. R. Herder, president of the W.M.S., opened this part of the meeting.

A short business meeting followed after which Mrs. G. Sills read the Scripture reading, John 15.

Mrs. Lloyd Pearson read a paper in remembrance of the poem "who went out and returned no more" for the sake of peace, and which, as yet, has not fully attained peace.

Mrs. F. Aikens read the great poem "Belleville, Queen of Quinte Fields" after which two minutes' silence was observed for the men who died in the two World Wars.

Mrs. W. Short continued the study of "Africa" bringing further interesting facts. Africa is changing from the dark continent so quickly that literally a great miracle is being performed.

Lunch was served.

Novelist Insists Characters Real People in Real Life

By RICHARD DANDAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP) — Marie-Claire Blais, 20-year-old discovery whose first novel is causing a stir, insists her characters are "real people you meet in real life."

Quebec critics tend to disagree with her about that although they all call the book unusual.

La Belle Bete (The Lovely Beast) breaks just about every rule of novel writing. Some critics say it should be tagged as poetry, not prose.

YOUTHFUL LOOK

Grey-eyed Marie - Claire, who looks like a 15-year-old girl fresh out of a convent school, says maybe there is something poetic about the prose but insists she tried to write a novel, not a poem.

Poetry or prose, real or fantastic, her book is selling as no other new book has since in Quebec province.

Publisher Paul Michaud, of Institut Litteraire, says he's ordered a second printing of 2,000 as the first 3,000-book edition is almost exhausted with demand increasing.

The Paris publishing house of Flammarion has an option for publication in France of the tightly-written little book.

Main characters are a golden, lovely small boy, a sensuous, bewellied egocentric mother, and her ugly, envious and embittered daughter.

The boy is a complete idiot, the mother has no morals and the daughter lives—except for a few idyllic weeks with a blind young man—only to hurt those around her.

FAST WRITER

"I wrote it in 15 sittings," said Marie-Claire during an interview in her mother's room on the fringe of Quebec's student quarter.

She left her home in the white-collar-worker district of Limoilou "because I couldn't work with the children around."

Marie-Claire is the oldest of a family of five. Her father, Fernando Blais, is an electrician.

"I've been writing two to three hours a night, seven days a week, for years," she says.

She wrote poetry, plays, novels. She declined to say how many novels she has written so far but her publisher says she has "about 10 finished." One, Le Rat Affame (The Hungry King), is scheduled to be published next year.

Two of her plays are scheduled to be produced on the CBC French network. Producer Fernand Quirion read the new book, and asked her to submit material for television.

CRITICS' VIEWS

One of Quebec's top critics, Gilles Marcotte of Le Soleil wrote: "The bewitching appeal of the book, and its weaknesses, stem from the cold despair of the characters who clash and yet can never understand each other."

Some say the characters are like puppets but that the voice that animates them is fascinating. Knows down everything in this book if you wish, they say, the voice can't be eliminated. "It doesn't speak, it howls."

The book would never have been written if Marie-Claire had not decided to consult Very Rev. Georges-Henri Levesque, Dominican monastery superior who is vice-chairman of the Canada Council.

NOVELIST AT 20 — Marie-Claire Blais, at 20 a writer with a successful novel, works in a small room in Quebec's student quarter. She wrote her first novel, "La Belle Bete" ("The Lovely Beast"), in 15 sittings but decided to move from her home because she couldn't work with children around. (CP Photo).

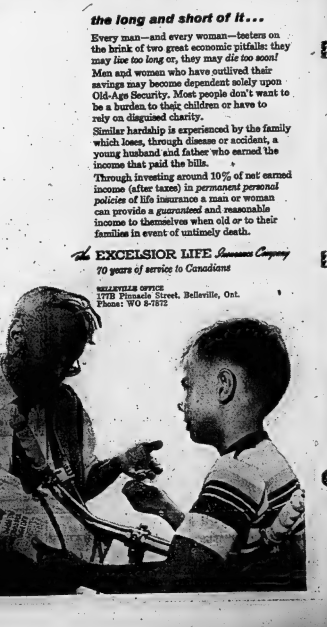
the long and short of it...



Every man—and every woman—teeters on the brink of two great economic pitfalls: they may live too long or, they may die too soon!

Men and women who have outlived their savings may become dependent solely upon Old-Age Security. Most people don't want to be a burden to their children or have to rely on disguised charity.

Similar hardship is experienced by the family which loses, through disease or accident, a young husband and father who earned the income that paid the bills.

Through investing around 10% of net earned income (after taxes) in permanent personal policies of life insurance a man or woman can provide a guaranteed and reasonable income to themselves when old or to their families in event of untimely death.

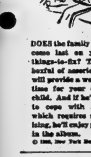
QUESTION BOX

Question: I am a woman, forty years of age. I recently attended the display of wedding gifts of the daughter of a friend of mine. When I arrived, several young men and women were present as well as other friends of the parents — who were around my age. While we were sitting chatting and admiring the lovely gifts, the 80 year old grandmother of the bride-elect came into the room. I immediately stood up to extend my greeting to her and was appalled to find that I was the only person in the room, young or middle-aged, who did stand! Perhaps I am old-fashioned, but I was always taught to stand when an aged person entered a room. Was I wrong in doing so in this case? I certainly felt foolish and embarrassed!

Answer: There was no reason for you to feel either way! You were the only person in the room who did the right thing. You are perfectly right in your assumption that deference should be shown to an elderly woman. Those in your age category should definitely have stood. But the fact that none of the young people did is beyond the pale. It was an obvious indication that they had never been taught the courteous thing to do — or, if too often the case today, having been taught, they chose not to care. While it was extremely rude of the girls not to stand, the fact that the young men did not is unpardonable. They should at least immediately when a woman enters a room, whether she be young or old.



Question: Is it permissible for a young widow to wear a white bridal gown and veil upon the occasion of her second marriage? This question came up because she became a widow only six weeks after her wedding four years ago, when her husband was killed in an auto accident. She is only twenty-six years old now.

Answer: Regardless of the circumstances, it is considered extremely bad taste for the second time bride ever to wear a bridal gown or orange blossoms. These traditional bridal accoutrements are the prerogative of the bride for the first time. A widow should choose an afternoon gown of a soft pastel shade, with hat and accessories to match. A suit may also be worn (if it is not too ostentatiously bridal) for a more informal ceremony. A corsage should be pinned at the shoulder or waistline in both these cases. A bridal bouquet is only carried when the traditional wedding gown is worn.

Question: Is there an unobtrusive way of keeping guests from dumping cigaret butts all over the place? Every time I give a party I have trouble with the careless smoker who doesn't seem to give a hoot if he dribbles ashes into my pet ashtrays, or on the rug, or where have you. Short of being downright rude, is there any way of stopping this?

Answer: Yes. While they may not be very attractive, purchase some large glass ashtrays, and place them conspicuously on every table in the room. Make a point of emptying them frequently during the evening. This usually helps that careless smoker to mind his manners.

W.A, W.M.S. Hold Combined Nov. Meeting

HALLOWAY — The evening meeting of Halloway WMS and WA was held November 18 at the home of Mrs. Roger Robinson.

The worship period was conducted by Mrs. E. Emerson, whose topic, was "Compassion." She was assisted by Mrs. R. Towns-end, Mrs. Earl Snider and Mrs. Freddie Wellman. The offering was dedicated by Mrs. Emerson.

Mrs. Earl Snider conducted the business portion of the WMS meeting. The roll call was the donation of a Christmas tree ornament for the Sunday School.

The officers for 1960-61 were were read as follows: past president, Mrs. Embury Hough; president, Mrs. Alvin Donaldson; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Freddie Wellman; recording secretary, Mrs. Harry McMullen; literature secretary, Mrs. Harry Mogridge; Christian stewardship, Mrs. John Wilson; community friendship, Mrs. Ernest Wilson; supply secretary, Mrs. Earl Snider; missionary education secretary, Mrs. P. Dixon; "Missionary Monthly," Mrs. Roscoe Robson; press secretary, Mrs. Earl Snider; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Gordon Rolph; Mission Band leader, Mrs. Charlie Hoffman; Christian education secretary, Mrs. E. Emerson; Baby Band leader, Mrs. Fred Wellman; pianist, Mrs. P. Dixson, and gift and flower community friendship, Mrs. Ernest Wilson; supply secretary, Mrs. Earl Snider; missionary education secretary, Mrs. P. Dixson; "Missionary Monthly," Mrs. Roscoe Robson; press secretary, Mrs. Earl Snider; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Gordon Rolph; Mission Band leader, Mrs. Charlie Hoffman; Christian education secretary, Mrs. E. Emerson; Baby Band leader, Mrs. Fred Wellman; pianist, Mrs. P. Dixson, and gift and flower committee, Mrs. Clarence Wilson and Mrs. Ken Donovan.

The W.A. business was conducted by Mrs. Fred Wellman. Motions were passed to buy a Guest Book for the church; to give a donation to the M. and M. Fund; and to give a card shower to Mrs. Laurie in celebrating a birthday.

It was also decided to visit the Home for the Aged next September. The collection was taken.

Next year the W.M.S. and W.A. meetings are to be held separately instead of combined, with the W.M.S. holding its meeting, and the W.A. holding five.

At the conclusion of the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Melrose Holds WMS Bazaar

A most successful bazaar was held in Melrose Community hall on Wednesday afternoon by Melrose W.M.S.

The guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. J. Milligan, and the 2nd vice-president, Mrs. M. E. Bailey. Mrs. C. Bates-Sr. presided at the piano.

Mrs. Milligan made a brief speech explaining the scope of the bazaar and thanking all who were helping and declared the bazaar open.

Mrs. S. Demille and Mrs. M. Lazier presided over the attractive home cooking stall. Presiding over the dainty candy stall were Mrs. R. McLennan and Mrs. Sharpe; "Missionary Monthly" secretary, Mrs. Eric Carson; supply secretary, Mrs. Lawrence Way; pianist, Mrs. Sid Martin; assistant pianist, Mrs. Dick Reid.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. H. Westbrough and Mrs. Ken Roote.

The Scripture reading was taken from St. Matthew 25. The study book was given by Mrs. Claude Moran and Mrs. Eric Carson.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Clarence Holmes, from Belleville, introduced by Mrs. Carson.

Mrs. Ernest Wallace gave a vote of thanks to the guest speaker.

The program consisted of a reading by Mrs. Harry Slingerland; vocal solo by Mrs. Walter Morrow and a reading by Mrs. Lawrence Way.

The hostesses, Mrs. Claude Moran, Mrs. Eric Carson, Mrs. Ken Roote and Mrs. M. Vosbourgh served a delicious lunch.

Women's Activities

CANNIFTON W.MS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Canniflon United Church held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. Arthur Holgate.

Business was conducted. Mrs. Clarence Bird, in charge of the Book Shelf, reported several new books for this year, all concerning "Africa." These proved interesting and helpful in the study of "Africa Disturbed." All members are urged to read as many as possible.

Several cards have been sent to the sick and bereaved of the community.

The topic for the worship service, under the leadership of Mrs. Doug Brenton, the president was, "The Coming of the Kingdom." Scripture texts were taken from St. Matthew 25, St. Mark 4 and St. Luke 1.

AFRICA DISTURBED

The study book on "Africa Disturbed" was narrated by Mrs. Grant Crosby, who said, in part:

"The individual African is beginning to accept responsibilities. In the past many of the folk from small towns and villages left the country because they were looked after by the tribal chief, but their freedom was limited. Today the new leaders do not descend from tribal chiefs but are picked from the common people and it doesn't matter if they are great or small as long as they benefit all.

"Before the African can assume responsibilities as one of a country and nation he must have responsibility in the home. Christianity has been included with the many choices and decisions facing the African today. The Christian African family tries to reach those who are still in darkness, with the gospel."

Officers for the year 1960 were installed.

At the close of the meeting in honor of Mrs. W. Cole's birthday, a lovely birthday cake was served with tea and other refreshments.

Mrs. A. English, while Mrs. E. Embury and Mrs. L. McLaren had charge of the sewing, with its many and attractive goods, especially the dainty aprons.

Looking after the miscellaneous booth with its nearly articles were Mrs. C. Hagerman and Mrs. K. Middleton.

The "Country Store," with its varied objects was looked after by Mrs. Ray Ellis and Mrs. Rose English, while Mrs. W. Embury and Mrs. Harold Sherman presided over the used clothing.

The ladies worked in the kitchen were Mrs. C. Milligan, Mrs. C. Bates Sr., Mrs. C. Osborne, Mrs. F. Robinson.

The attractively arranged tea tables were in charge of Mrs. L. Weese, Mrs. Jack Sherman, Mrs. N. Demille, Mrs. Roy Mallen and Mrs. F. Howard, while Mrs. R. Macfarlane, Mrs. Earl Whiteman and Mrs. W. Baker looked after the tea.

A substantial sum was added to the W.M.S. treasury by the proceeds of this successful event.

Mrs. Roy Badgley acted as treasurer for the bazaar.

Evening Aux. Elects Officers

FRANKFORD — The Evening Auxiliary of Frankford United Church met on Wednesday evening in the Perkins' Room of Rose Lowery Hall. The president, Mrs. Charlie Bennett, opened the meeting with a poem, "Little Things That Count."

Mrs. Bennett extended a welcome to all visitors and members.

The secretarial report was given by Mrs. Dick Reid. A business discussion followed.

The Rev. C. Judd conducted the installation of officers for 1960: honorary president, Mrs. C. Judd; president, Mrs. Claude Moran; vice - president, Mrs. Jack Beech; secretary, Mrs. Harold Rowe; treasurer, Mrs. Hugh Coldwell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ken Rootes; press secretary, Mrs. Seibourne

A Colorful, Inexpensive And Different Dinner

by Mary Moore

The three meals per day go on and on and demand most of our attention.

While preparing for Christmas is exciting, tonight's dinner is important too.

I prepared a family dinner for four last night that was noticeable for its pretty colors and low cost. It was sort of different too.

I bought 2 little calves' tongues weighing nearly 1 1-2 pounds for 79c; a cello-bag of diced squash for 19c and a Savoy cabbage for 20c; a box of fresh frozen raspberries for 25c (bargain special). Under the raspberries I served a baked custard which cost 39c in eggs and milk.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

TUESDAY

Non-Fuffy Omelette with Mushrooms (see Monday); Creamed Cauliflower; Spinach with Crumbled Bacon; Fresh Pear Halves topped with Mint Ice Cream and Chocolate Sauce; Tea.

Not counting the cost of serving coffee, this meal amounted to about 43c per person.

If you are on a strict budget and are a small family of two and want to entertain another young couple, I would suggest you try it for a little dinner party.

BOILED CALVES' TONGUES:

Wash 2 cured calves' tongues weighing 3-4 pound each and add 3 cups water, 1 chicken bouillon cube, 1-4 bay leaf and shake of black pepper and simmer covered 2 1-2 to 3 hours or until tender. Remove tongues and strain liquid. Peel outer skin from tongues and trim off rough root end. Slice neatly into hot platter and keep hot.

Meanwhile cut Savoy cabbage into narrow wedges with some core attached and boil quickly in the strained broth. No salt is needed. Do not overcook the cabbage — it should be bright green and retain a little crispness. Lift out and drain and arrange attractively around sliced tongue. If desired a little of the salty broth may be spooned over meat slices. Pass French mustard.

Cook the diced squash in as little water as possible until tender. Do not mash it. Serve it diced as it is. At the table butter may be added.

BAKED CUSTARD:

Slightly beat 3 large eggs and add 2 tablespoons sugar. Add 2 cups milk, shake of salt, and 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. (If you are in a hurry use the milk.) Pour into buttered small casserole, generously sprinkle nutmeg lightly with nutmeg. Place in shallow pan of hot water and bake in 325 deg. F. oven until firm. Serve warm or cold. But to serve with raspberries, as I did, the custard should be cooled to room temperature. Turn into small glass bowls. Barely thaw 1 package fresh frozen raspberries and spoon over top of bowls of their juice over each serving of custard.
